Educating Farm Children.

Our educational system has been made by city people, and the country school find it second-hand, ill-fitting and unattractive. To this fact more than to any other, perhaps, is due the backwardness of education in agricultural states. The school has not taken hold on farm life. Plants, soils, animals, insects, flowers, the weather, the forests and the sky-from all these things it has stood apart, while it has babbled of subjects unfamiliar and uninteresting to the country-bred child. All rural education has been hacked and hewed to fit the Procrustean bed of the city model. This is a severe indictment of our present methods, but it is not a whit too severe. To find proof you have only to examine the text books in use in our rural schools. Apparently they have been written solely for city children, sons and daughters of clerks, merchants, bankers and traders. They do not even suggest to the farmer's child the possibilities of science and training in agricultural work. On the contrary, the natural and logical inference from our general scheme of rural instruction is that education is not indispensable to the farmer, but

Injured by the Milk Express.

William Vroon, a painter, who had been in the employ of Mr. Lewis, until a few days ago, attempted to flip the milk express train yesterday morning and fell, the wheels crushing the toes on one foot, and he received a bad cut on the knee and bruise on the head.

He was taken to Dr. Clausius' office where the hemorrhye was stopped and wounds dressed, after which he was to have the foot amputated. He was not considered in dangerous condition from the injury, but the shock to the system was so great that results are yet in doubt. Vroon stated that he was going to Arlington Heights, and held the company blameless for the accident. He was a single man and has no relatives in this part of the country.

ONE HUNDRED YEARS AGO The Great City of Chicago Was An Indian Trading Post.

Just 100 years ago last Monday Maj. Whistler's soldiers, under the immediate command of Lieut. Swearingen, started to build Fort Dearborn at the mouth of the Chicago river.

There began the portage from the lakes to the DesPlaines river, the latter flowing into the Mississippi.

Through a splendid stroke, made possible by the needs of Napoleon at a moment when he was about to enter upon a great war, the agents of President Jefferson in France had purchased the vast Louisiana territory a few months earlier. Treaties with Indian tribes had also added to the nation's possessions during that year large areas of fertile land in Illinois. The republic was rapidly taking form. Its boundary had suddenly been pushed far westward. The Mississippi from its source to its mouth was at last an American stream. Clearly a fort was desirable at the point where the traffic of the lakes ended and the portage to the Mississippi's tributaries began. So Secretary Dearborn of the war department ordered a fort to be constructed and when finished it bore his name.

The great west was stirring into life. It was no coincidence that Chicago was founded in the year of the Louisiana purchase, says the Daily News. Fort Dearborn was an important link in the chain of communication by water between the east and north and the west and south. The natural conditions marked it as a seat of power even in the wilderness.

Those conditions and the development of the west have brought 2,000,-000 inbabitants to Chicago who will celebrate next month the 190th anniversary of the founding of the western metropolis. From September 26 to October 1, a civic jubilee will be held. Pageants of various sorts and other commemorative features are being arranged and the jubilee will be an event long to be remembered.

The Golden Jubilee Gelebration

Fifty years ago, half a century, the first McHenry County Far was held. This month we join hands in a grand celebration of the Golden Jubilee of the Association. The past fifty years have worked great changes, and modern progress and advancement have wrought improvements in agricultural and industrial pursuits, until McHenry couuty is recognized as the leading agricultural county of the state.

It is the purpose of the association to make this Fair the grandest and most glorious of all the Fairs held under the auspices of the McHenry County Agricultural Board. This Fair will maek an epoch in Mc-Henry's history and will be the forerunner of still greater expositions, which will eventually place that county in the lead of all others.

BLACKLIST IS

NO RELIEF FOR THE UNION MEN

Those Discharged Because They Belong to Organization, When Not Under Contract, Cannot Bring Action in Court Against Employers.

St. Louis, Mo., dispatch: Judge Rogers, in the United States Circuit court, held that the Western Union Telegraph company has a legal right to discharge employes for belonging to unions, or to discharge them for no reason at all, if no contract existed, and that the company was within the law when it placed the names of discharged men on the blacklist and furnished the list to others for their information.

The ruling was made in writing, and sustained the demurrer of the company in the injunction case of Boyer against the Western Union company.

Men Make Charges.

The case was based on a bill filed by Telegraph Operator Arthur Boyer and others, alleging they were members of the Commercial Telegraphers' Union of America, local lodge No. 3 of St. Louis, and that they had been discharged from the service of the Western Union Telegraph company solely because they belonged to the union; that it was the intention of the Western Union to discharge other employes solely because they belonged to the union, and that a conspiracy existed between the St. Louis officers of the Western Union company to discharge all employes belonging to the union and to break it up; that the Western Union company maintains a list, so-called a "blacklist," on which has been placed the names of the members of the union discharged, and that this is furnished to others and thereby those blacklisted have been prevented from obtaining other employment.

Sought to Destroy Blacklist. The bill sought to prevent the Western Union company from discharging any employe because of his being a member of the union and the St. Louis officers of the Western Union from conspiring to that end, and to prevent interference of any kind with the union, and to prevent the company from maintaining a blacklist and placing thereon the names of those who might be discharged because of being members of the union.

CHIEF CRAZY SNAKE URGES INDIANS TO WAR

Defends Treaty of 1832, Under Which Red Men Were to Hold Their Lands Forever.

Guthrie, Ok., dispatch: Four hundred Snake Indians have just concluded a prolonged conference, a counil of war in the Flint hills near Tucker Springs, I. T., where rebellion against the government was again advocated by Crazy Snake and other chiefs. The council was composed of the Keetowah, Night Hawks and Snake factions of the discontented Indians of the Five Tribes. The session lasted three days and the Indian police were in close proximity at all times to quell any disturbance. Crazy Snake made a fiery speech, in which he advocated removal to old Mexico and defended the treaty of 1832, which provided that the Indians should hold their lands in common according to the old tribal laws as long as water runs and grass grows. Wolf Coon made a speech in which he discouraged the idea of taking up arms against the government and advocates the policy of letting the Dawes commission allot their land and submit to the inevitable.

Defines Relations.

Judge Rogers held that the Western Union company had the absolute right to discharge employes not under contractural relations with the company for any cause or without cause; that a like right exists on the part of the employe to sever his relations with the company for any cause, or without cause: that if a contract of employment is violated the recourse of the employe is at law and not by a bill of equity, such as was brought in this spiracy to commit a lawful act, such as he held to be the discharge of the company's employes because of being members of a union; that the company had the right to maintain a list on which might be placed the name of a discharged employe and the cause of national committee at the meeting of discharge, and this list might be given others, provided its contents were truthful and its circulation honest; that as the bill alleged the union was formed for moral and proper purposes there should exist no objection upon the part of an employe to have his discharge based upon the mere fact that he was a member of such an order.

Jenkinson went about nodding to them, before they were out of sight this man and to that, calling deep of Execution Dock, that the brig's pitched answers in response to friendly greetings. He stopped at a box at whose table sat one figure only. This was a captain in the merchant service named Pope, a fine, tall man of very noble build. He had a merry eye with something careless and cruel in its glance and light; an Irish eye blue and arch. But to-day the face that overhung his plate, chewing steadily, with Senkinson staring at him, was a long one.

"Well, Captain," said Jenkinson, "have you got a ship yet?"

"Don't talk of it," cried Captain Pope with passion. "The pavements are full of helpless idlers. They wander starving and forlorn."

Jenkinson smiled sarcastically. "Don't tell me," he said. "There are always plenty of ships, and where there are ships there is demand and room for good men."

The other shrugged his shoulders and bit his food with anger.

Just then a middle-sized man came to the entrance of the box, and Jenkinson stood up. this, gentlemen," said he, "to my ship-

Captain Pope pulled the bell of the house. The door was opened after a considerable passage of waiting-during which Pope continued to curse the sea as the most poverty-stricken of callings-by a dirty little servant who seemed a compound of flue and blacklead. The Captain pushed in. They refreshed themselves in a coast, and he and his father-in-law

"That's what it's come to," said Pope, pointing to these things. "I, Captain Pope, and as good and careful a mariner as any as sails out of the ports of this kingdom, cannot get a ship."

"There are scores of us," said Crystal, drying his face. "My money sinks and the ships depart, and I return to my dirty little lodging sick with cursing the times I have fallen on."

"And disappointment and poverty don't raise hell and the pirate in your heart, hey?" cried Pope, staring with a wild stormy look into the other's dark face.

"How do you know that it don't?" answered Crystal, ; Ang up a hair brush.

"I'd rob a church. I have no honesty left. I mean to set up as a villain, and you shall help me make a fortune for us both, Crystal."

"You're not thinking of the highway are ye. Pope?"

"Ay, the highway that reflects the canvas of rich keels. But step into the next room." He pulled out a gold watch. "I'll tell you what's in my mind, and we can debate it over a pipe after we've supped."

CHAPTER II.

The Camperdown Public House. * "Well, now, what's your scheme?" said Crystal, when they had entered. "I'll be beforehand with thee thus far; it's piracy or you shall choke me." Captain Pope's eyes gleamed. "Pir-

He laughed, rubbing his hands in a glowing way.

Crystal said, "High enough. But you are a broken man. How, unless you run away with her, are you to come at a brig or a schooner, swift or slow?" "If you want to go upstairs," exclaimed Pope, "you take one step

THE FEAR OF LAUGHTER.

In Our Day the Joke Is Fast Becoming Mightier Than the Pen.

Men who fear nothing else shrink from a joke upon themselves. Soldiers who do not flinch before opposing guns dread to be made ridiculous.

* * Woe to the national hero who makes one trifling mistake which may subject him to clever caricature! His meritorious career is henceforth shadowed by one colored illustration. A comic paper will tip the scales of justice, snatch the victor's prize from his extended palm and rob the orator of his choicest laurels. A brilliant satire will mar the fortunes of the greatest statesman; a laugh will turn the tide of a political convention. Indeed, the joke is fast becoming mightier than the pen. The orator has learned its value, and even the clergyman resorts to it when he desires to stir the flagging interest in his flock. It furnishes sufficient excuse for the impertinence of children, and in its name the daily papers deride the highest national dignitaries. What is the meaning of its steady growth in power and what results may we predict from its humorous tyranny? Is there a chance that our keen relish for fun may finally produce a kind of humorous dyspepsia resulting from overindulgence, unless with epicurean discrimination we demand quality, not quantity, and stubbornly refuse to swallow other than that which should appease a wholesome, nay, cultivated appetite in jokes?-Atlantic.

populous villages that environ the Jer-

Following the many recent crimes in agricultural communities, particularly against women, there is observed renewed agitation for a rural police force in many states. It is recognized by all the advocates of such protection that sparsely settled towns or counties cannot be expected to bear the expense of such policing, and all look to the state to foot the bills. While security to life cannot be calculated in dollars, the residents of few towns would be willing to pay the tax which such security not to be compelled to do so.

It is noted in this connection that profit of the exercises. Connecticut recently created a small state police force to supplant the officers of a private organization in the suppression of pool selling and other forms of gambling and in the detection of violations of the excise laws.

These are small matters in compariproperty, and a state which is willing extend the duties of such officers to the prevention or detection of worse offenses.

At the recent international medical congress held in Madrid, Professor Edoardo Maragliano of Genoa, Italy, delivered an address on the struggle of the body against tuberculosis and its immunization. This address revealed the success he has had in determining the natural means, if any, that the body possesses and employs to combat this disease and the means by which one can create in it an artificial immunity against tuberculosis. Professor Maragliano says he has succeeded at last in preparing a material which-all danger of infection excluded -will cause, when inoculated under the skin; a tuberculous phlegmon. By means of these inoculations, Professor Maragliano says, human beings may become immune. The discovery has awakened interest throughout the world, and the material prepared by Dr. Maragliano for inoculation against tuberculosis is coming into general use.

that it ought to be easy for the officials of the Louisiana Purchase Exposition company to induce President Loubet to visit the fair in 1904. The intention is to ask him to be there around the time of the Bastille fete on July 14, so that he can participate in the festivities. The fete in 1903 had a wider and more enthusiastic celebration in St. Louis and other important towns in the United States than it ever had before. Of course 1904 will see a much wider observance of the day in this country, especially in and around the world's fair city. The presence of the head of would cost, and they ought in reason the French republic would necessarily add greatly to the pleasure and the

It is asserted that an especial effort, therefore, will be made by Mr. Francis to induce President Loubet to come here during the fair and take part in some of the festivities in honor of his country. M. Loubet is in the habit of going outside of France every year son with the protection of life' and or two. He has recently been in England. Last year he was in Russia. It to hire men to detect saloons open in is true the United States is farther forbidden hours should be willing to away than is either of those countries, but in these days of ocean greyhounds the Atlantic trip has been materially shortened. The distance certainly ought not to keep him away.

The whole country, as well as St. lin. Louis, hopes that the French president may visit us next season. If he comes he will receive a greeting such as has not been extended to any other resident of the old world since America's early friend Lafayette came back to visit old friends and old scenes threequarters of a century ago.

A Brilliant Retort.

After dinner speaking is an art, and, like many other arts, its excellence has much to do with the mood of the artist. Some of the best of our after dinner speakers sometimes fail, but it is not often that failure results in the enrichment of the world's store of epigram, as it did in the case of Lord Erskine

When Lord Erskine was made a member of that highly honorable body, the Fishmongers' Company of London, he made an after dinner speech on the occasion of his first appearance among them as a member. Upon his return he said to a friend:

"I spoke ill today and stammered and hesitated in the opening."

"You certainly floundered," was the reply, "but I thought you did so in compliment to the fishmongers."

BURGLARIOUS STARS.

Planets and Suns May Plek Up Minor Solar Bodies

Jupiter is much the biggest member of the family of stars which revolve around our sun; consequently the power of his attraction is greater than that possessed, for instance, by the earth. Jupiter's exploits as a burglar have caused very considerable annoyance and inconvenience to astronomers in the days before his powers were fully recognized.

In 1770 there appeared a fine comet, which was found to have an elliptical orbit round the sun of so comparatively' small a size that Mr. Lexell, its discoverer, calculated it would return in five, and a half years, but in 1775 telescopes were vainly focused on the spot where it was expected to reappear, and again in 1781 it disappointed all observers. Mr. Lexell plunged into fresh calculations and after much research found that Jupiter was the culprit. The unfortunate comet had been rash enough to plunge into the sphere of the giant planet's attraction, with the result that it had been completely diverted from its former orbit and flung off into quite a different one of a twenty year period. It has never been seen again by any one on this earth and probably never will be Jupiter was also responsible for the delay which occurred in the return of that splendid visitant known as Halley's comet. Halley found that he was not the first discoverer of this big comet. It had appeared at least twice previously, once seventy-five years before and again seventy-six years before that. The astronomer concluded that there would be a further delay in its third return and predicted that its next appearance would be 518 days later. He did not live to see it. But in 1758, the year he had prophesied for its reappearance, astronomers were waiting for it.

KEEPING THE WEIGHT DOWN IS NOT A DIFFICULT PROBLEM.

Fattening Foods Are Avoided, and Judicious Exercise Is Courted-As # Rule, Riders Last a Dozen Years and as a Class Are Not Saving.

"It is a popular belief," a well known trainer said to a reporter recently, "that a jockey has to resort to all sorts of injurious practices in order to keep his weight within required limits. The idea, however, is a far stretched one. Of course a jockey has to go through certain exercises each day and has to be very much more careful regarding what he puts in his stomach than most people in order to keep his weight down and from acquiring a superfluity of flesh, but he certainly does not starve himself, as is generally supposed. If and gooseberries. They will produce he did so he would break down entirely | more fruit, even if the vines are not so in a very short time. A jockey must large. also be in the best possible physical trim and have his wits about him before a race, and to attain that he must be careful how he uses his constitution. "There are two very important things a jockey has to consider in studying his dietary. He must see to it that his food is of the best quality and that it contains practically no flesh forming properties. All such fattening foods as, for instance, soups, beef, pork, potatoes, puddings and pastries a jockey must deny himself. Coffee, tea or other drinks are only taken very moderately, as all liquids help more or less in putting on flesh.

"Although a jockey has to eschew such foods, there are many other varieties which he gets just as much pleasure in eating and which at the same time are equally as good and strengthening for his constitution. A few days before a race a jockey who has a mount in it will not stint himself-provided he has no fear of overtipping his proper weight for the race-in anything which he thinks will not interfere with his digestive apparatus.

"Some jockeys, of course, take on and lose flesh quicker than others. I have known one or two who were particularly anxious to ride in certain races, but for which they were perhaps as much as eight or nine pounds too heavy, who reduced that weight in the same number of days. To accomplish that, however, they have to resort practically to a 'starving diet.' leaving as little as the strain on the vitality will permit without breaking down and trying to reduce their overweight by certain sweating exercises. Small Katherine, who had been forbidden to touch the ink bottle, had accidentally spilled its contents not only all over her mother's desk, but on the rug, several chairs and her own apron. If they were, therefore, to indulge every day in the heavy bill of fare that the average business or work- that never hurts .-- Charles Dickens, ing man partakes of it is not probable that they would increase much in weight or height. You often see jockeys in the big hotels and restaurants at the various racing sections after a race tucking in big and expensive dinners with a gusto and relish that would give a chronic dyspeptic an appetite for hard tack.

"Walking, running, cycling, punching the bag and hurdle jumping are favorite exercises among jockeys to keep their weight down. On going out for a walk or run they wrap themselves in the thickest of woolen sweaters and other heavy clothing, no matter how high the temperature may be, and the exercise is kept up for a distance perhaps of eight or nine miles, or, as we say, until you are 'drowned in sweat.' Turkish, baths are also frequently indulged in by many, and they must wear excessively warm clothing after, and also when going for a gallop, no matter if the weather be boiling hot.

"I should say that ten or twelve years is the average of a jockey's active turf life. The length of his career, however, dépends a great deal on his riding ability and luck.

"Jockeys are not of a saving class, and with but few exceptions I know of none who has ever managed to put enough money away to keep him in even half decent comfort after retiring from the turf. The majority, however, succeed in scraping up a bank roll of sufficient dimensions to start in some business. Like retired pugilists, they have a fondness for the liquor business, and I know a few one time jockeys who are prospering in that trade in different parts of the country. Others, different parts of the country. Others, again, become 'bookies,' poolroom keep-ers and enter into such businesses as enable them to gratify their inveterate love for gambling. I know of only one or tother who is an exception to this ex-jockey who is an exception to this rule. He retired some years ago with $50,000 to his credit, and he immediately went into the real estate business in New Jersey. Today he is doing well. He was fortunate enough, however, to receive a good common school education in his early boyhood days-and that's a thing jockeys very rarely get. TROUBLES OF THE ANGELS

Boer Expression for the Tenderfoot Bait Caster to Remember.

The trouble with the tenderfoot bait aster is that he is too strong and the boat is not a rock above water.

He puts enough muscle into the rod to send the light bait 300 yards; then the boat tips and he grabs at the gunwale with one hand to save himself and wonders why his reel overran and the line snarled. If this mishap does not happen, some other accident occurs, and he catches fewer fish than his more experienced companions.

It takes the tenderfoot bait-caster a long time to learn that bait-casting is like golf, that is, the more you press the less you do. The Boers have an expression which they use to their oxen when mixed with a heavy load in the middle of a long river. They say it almost caressingly:

It is "Sutjes, sutjes!" It means, "Softly does it!" and it fetches the oxen every time, unless the mire runs clear down to the diamond deposit.

When the tenderfoot bait-caster learns to say "Sutjes, sutjes!" to himself he is more than half taught .--New York Sun.

Rich Fountain, Mo., Aug. 17th .--Rev. Joseph. Pope of this place is widely and favorably known as a clergyman who has done and is doing much for his people. He is very much beloved by everyone for the faithfulness of his pastoral work.

Rev. Mr. Pope has given for publication a statement made to him by a German farmer who is a member of his congregation. The man's name is George Hoellerer, and he has given Rev. Mr. Pope this letter:

"Last winter I suffered very much with Rheumatism. I could neither walk nor ride on horseback nor do any farm work.

"I took medicine from different doctors but they did not do me any good. Then I tried Dodd's Kidney Pills procured for me by a good friend. After I had taken the first box I felt already a heap better; I was relieved of the pain and could walk and chop wood; and the contraction of my fingers began to resolve.

"Now since I have taken six more boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills I feel well again and am able to do all the work on the farm."

Logan in southern Illinois before the civil war recently told me that on a certain occasion young Logan found it necessary to doubt the veracity of a man considerably older than himself, and told him so without and circumlocution. "Don't you call me a liar, sir," said the man excitedly. "I have a reputation to maintain, and I mean to maintain it if I have to do it at the point of a pistol." "Oh," said Logan, calmly, "that won't be necessary. You maintain your reputation all right every time you tell a lie."-Brooklyn Eagle.

Kills a Bear With His Knife. Andy Hickson, camping near Three Sisters, Oregon, had a hand-to-hand combat with a cinnamon bear Wednesday. Hickson fired his only two shots, which failed to wound the bear.

There was nothing left but to make a fight of it, and Hickson whipped out his hunting knife and with a quick lunge planted it to the hilt in the bear's neck, severing his wind and bringing him to the ground. In his fall the bear's claws tore the shirt of the valiant hunter.

being the only lawyer in attendance. Jett, who has been calm and self-possessed during the entire trial, received the announcement with perfect indifference. White, who has been nervous and excited from the first, turned pale, and his eyes filled with tears.

Attorneys Golden and Blanton, for the defense, promptly put in a motion for a new trial, which was taken under advisement by Judge Osborne. The general opinion is that it will be overruled, and that the case will then go to the court of appeals.

Both Jett and White were previously tried at Jackson, the case resulting in a disagreement.

Expect New Trial.

The friends of Captain B. L. Ewen and other witnesses for the commonwealth, who have suffered greatly and were living in fear of their lives, are greatly relieved. They expected the death penalty, and are confident that it would have been followed by confessions from the condemned men, exposing parties high in authority in Breathitt county, who are considered to be back of the conspiracy.

Jett is still under indictment, for first degree murder for killing Town Marshal Cockerill. His friends say he will have a new trial, and even if he fails in that effort he might be pardoned in the course of time. The friends of the defendants showed such relief as to leave no doubt of their previous apprehensions of the death penalty.

A journey over the country these days is a delight. The "oldest inhabitant' cannot recall a season when fields, pastures and wood lands looked so fresh and green in August or the fall crops so promising as the present ones. The cool weather and copious rains wrought wonders. The corn crop in low places is a little light, but it is not certain that the growth elsewhere will compensate for the drowned out places. The country at large has reason to look forward to continued prosperity.
