 3. No live axles.
 4. No transmission gears.
 5. No drive gears.

Our People Enjoy a Dance.

The young men of the new Base Ball club who managed the dance in Barrington hall Saturday evening succeeded in giving the dancing public a social affair that was an entertaining pastime without the slightest friction.

Every person there was delighted with the evening and the hall was filled so completely that lack of dancing space was the only mar on the occasion.

An orderly, mannerly dance is ever a pleasure to those who have experienced its delights. People from Elgin, Dundee and Cary were here and such a number from the vicinity that the club cleared about $20.00 and this sum added to $100.00 raised by subscription gives a working fund that is encouraging.

Parties will be given regularly and the next one occurs Saturday evening, April 27th, when Hayden's orchestra will again be present and another good time is promised. Young people who failed to attend the first dance for various reasons are planning to be present April 27th.

BEWARE OF THIS TRUST.

How to Cope With the Mail Order Combine That Kills Competition.

"I'm against the trusts, first, last and all the time," remarked a leading citizen at the postoffice the other day.

"Pardon me, my dear sir, but I don't quite believe you are," quietly volunteered a stranger.

"What do you know about it?" asked the citizen, a little offended.

"Just this," replied the stranger. "I saw you a moment ago, while both of us were using the desk shelf which you sell, and I addressed a letter to a big mail order house in Chicago which I happen to know about. I couldn't help but see the address as the letter lay there before me. Now, begging your pardon for the question, didn't you order some goods from that house?"

"I did. And what of it?"

"The my dear sir, you are giving aid and sustenance to the one trust which is harming you and your community more than all the rest of the trusts put together. I refer to the mail order trust. Are you not aware of the fact that the mail order houses, being big and rich and powerful, are killing off competition everywhere in the country districts? The Standard Oil company does not affect your community to any very great extent perhaps, but this mail order trust comes directly into your midst, manages to undersell your local merchants in some things, those are the trusts which it up off you in other things, and you and your neighbors mail your money to this competition killing trust and thereby slowly but surely strangle the life out of your own enterprises. Did that ever occur to you?"

"Well, I can't say that it ever did, not just in that light," replied the citizen.

"No, but think it over. The big cities are constantly getting bigger at the expense of the smaller cities, and the country. That is because they are getting the trade of the country—the leading trade and not that of the country merchants. You neglect your home merchant. He goes out of business, moves to the city and becomes a hired man for one of these trusts."

"What can we do about it? If the mail order business is a trust, it seems to be a legitimate one. There is no law against it."

"You are quite right. But there are things you can do. For instance, you can set to work and organize in your town a home trade league, the members to pledge themselves, so far as possible, to encourage home trade by trading at home. If I lived in a small town, I'd do something just like that. Why don't you do it?"

The citizen remarked that he'd think it over. A great many others might think the matter over without any injury to local interests.

A Pugnacious Bard.

An earthquake which occurred in England on Feb. 8, 1750, frightened to death Aaron Hill, the poet and visionary projector. Of Hill's voluminous writings only an epigram or two are now remembered, but he was a pugnacious bard, who as terrified Pope only walk abroad with loaded pistols and accompanied by his big Danish dog Bounce. Aaron Hill is one of the many literary worthies connected with the city of Westminster. He was educated at Westminster school, lived in "Petty France" and, after squandering his fortune in schemes for extracting oil from the rocks and planting vineyards in Essex, was buried in the cloisters of Westminster abbey.

A curious feature the heart is. That organ has no nerves of sensation, and consequently a pain in the heart is an utter impossibility.
