There is little occurring around town to report and the frequent remark in summer, "Nothing in the paper" is also too true.

Max Moldenhauer who was here to attend the funeral of his father returned to Bregel, Wis., Wednesday, where he is employed as a carpenter.

A "Sundae" Do you know where the name for ice-cream with nuts or fruit sirups originated? In a little Wisconsin town where the sale of ice-cream was forbidden on Sunday and a merchant substituted this luscious dish and named it a Sundae. So say the traveling-men.

L. Frank Baum, the artist and author whose works appear in Everybody's magazine has purchased a two months' old Cocker Spaniel of L. A. Jones, Attorney General Gillette of Chicago, has also bought one. Mr. Gillette formerly lived here and owned the present Schlupp building. Mr. Jones' fame as a dog breeder is known in many states.

A week from tomorrow August 6th, the Chautauqua meeting will begin and continue five days with programs of music and temperance lectures. Pamphlets have been scattered around town showing the nature of these meetings and pictures of speakers. Dr. Richardson is chairman of the committee on arrangements. The tent will be raised on Rollin field, Lake St.

After several refusals in the past to various parties to use the town hall as an amusement lot, the space has finally been let for the noble sum of $5.00 a year to the couple, which the older men are interested. The sod and grading which cost the village a penny a few years ago have been removed and changed that the pleasure of a few may be gratified. However the lot is still a public place free to men, women, children and dogs.

MADE WASTE PLACES PAY.
 How a Farm Girl Utilized Neglected Strips of Ground.
 Often some neglected spot that spoils the appearance of a street may be beautified at small expense and also made to yield a good income. Here is how Jennie Good of Rockingham County, Va., made use of her place, says American Agriculturist.

In 1903 I had obtained my patent's permission to utilize the neglected strips of ground around the garden fence to use and plant as I chose, the proceeds to be my very own. A wholesale slaughter of weeds, brush, briars, etc., which were numerous from lack of attention to many years, and the reclamation of an old abandoned corner, equally neglected, were the first results obtained. Of course this required a lot of hard work and a prodigious share of pluck to put in shape.

I have no correct account of what I realized the first season, but in the spring of 1904 I again took charge, spading the soil moderately deep, working barnyard manure well into the soil and smoothing down the surface evenly. I planted early vegetables, such as radishes, peas and lettuce. From these little border strips one hat the distance around the kitchen garden fence, the other half being set to berries and grapevines, and from the old abandoned corner I furnished a lot of vegetables for the home table and sold over $16 worth besides. I wish I could give the combined returns from the start. The great satisfaction to myself lies in having realized so much, but in having produced so pleasing an effect with so small an amount of effort. I shall continue my work this year.

Mr. Jones Shows That His House Man Bargains, and the Customers Learn Something to Their Advantage—Incidentally a Doctor's Bill is Paid.

"Rather chilly for spring," observed the hotel clerk, poking a long stick of wood into the office stove of the Grand Central. "This sort of weather along the 1st of April gives me the jitters."

"Cheer up, my boy," said the senior member of Jones & Thompson, general merchants. "Why, I don't mind this sort of weather as long as I see the country people coming into town in a drove and hitching their horses right up in front of our store. Trade's picked up remarkably well the last two weeks. I don't even think that the spring drouth would make me bricker."

"Why," remarked the doctor, who had just stepped in for his evening chat, "I thought you were feeling blue as a dime's worth of indigo the last time we happened to meet in here. You said trade was so good—the mail order folks were getting most of it. Remember, don't you?"

"That's just what I said," replied Mr. Jones, "and I also said, as you'll recall, that I was going to go after these mail order folks with their own kind of ammunition: I was going to advertise in Tom Clark's paper—print my prices right there before the eyes of the people and let them compare with the prices in the mail order catalogue."

"Yes, and I notice you've been whooping 'er up in the paper too. Is that what freshened up your trade?"

"Well," said the doctor, "I don't know what else has done it. The fact is most of the customers who have come into the store for the past week or so have carried copies of the paper and referred to Jones & Thompson's ads. when asking to look at goods. You know, we advertised a list of our specialties, with prices, and that caught their eyes. Several of the farmers' wives and daughters remarked that they were surprised to find we had bargains just as good as they could get by sending to Chicago. They were also surprised to learn that we kept certain articles at all; never happened to come in and inquire about them, so they didn't find it out till we advertised 'em. Next month we're going after them hot and heavy with some more of our bargains."

"Do you think it hard to compete with the mail order houses as to prices?" inquired the doctor.

"On some things, yes; on many things, not at all. But we can even up things all around if the people will just give us a fair trial. The chief advantage in buying from a local store is in being able to see and inspect the goods before accepting them. When you order by mail, you never know what you are going to get. Things have a habit of looking nice on paper, and lots of these big houses print tasty cuts showing off their furniture, vehicles, clothing and the like, but when you come to see the thing itself it has lost much of its good looks in many instances. You've spent your money and paid for it, though, so there you are; no use crying over spilt milk."

"Spit milk gathers no cream," observed the doctor.

"No, but it gets sour, though," said Mr. Jones. "For instance, a certain farmer's wife whom you know came into the store the other day to buy something she had seen in our advertisement. Her eye alighted on a rocking chair in our furniture section, and she inquired the price. (It was a wicker rocker. When I told her the price was $2.75, I thought she would flinch. She turned to her daughter, who also had found fault with the price, and asked what you think of that? It's the same identical rocker that we bought two weeks ago out of that old catalogue for $3.50." So that's the way it goes."

"Well, I'm glad you're doing something to keep the money in circulation around home," the doctor said. "The more the merrier, and that applies to money as to other things."

"Which reminds me," the merchant remarked, "that my family doctor's bill for last year is due and unpaid. Just figure up what I owe you, doc, and I'll pay you right out of the box. I've got the cash on hand, and I reckon I'd better put some of it into circulation again. Eh, doc?"

"No objection," said the doctor, "but the trouble is that my wife will want to go down to your store tomorrow and buy one of those new spring bonnets you've so advertised, so you'll get part of the money back again. That's the way it goes." HURR JOYCE.
