Perpetual Motion.
No man has ever made and never will make a machine that will go perpetually. The "going" of the machine implies a steady loss to the particular machine of stored up power, and it is only a question of time for the power to run out, when the machine will of necessity have to stop. But in a deeper sense there is nothing but perpetual motion. The motion of the thing that stops is imparted to something else, and so on ad infinitum. By the law of the conservation of force motion is indestructible and must therefore be perpetual.—New York American.
Lincoln's Great Orator.
Lincoln's Gettysburg speech derives its power from the following facts: Its brevity—everything is concise and right to the point, so that the reader receives the fullest effect at once; its absolute sincerity, creating the impression that the speaker is aiming not at effect, but at the honest unfolding of his soul's commingled joy and sorrow, sympathy and hope; its perfection of style, its words being just such as were needed properly to express the idea, simple, yet potent, and straight to the mark like well aimed cannon balls.—New York American.
"I suspect the playbills do not always tell the exact truth."
"And you are correct," responded Hamlet Pitt. "For instance, I am billed as being assisted by a large company when the fact is I am retarded by the few people I have."—Louisville Courier-Journal.
Answered.
Teacher Tourist—Can all the residents in these parts read and write? Old Resident—Truth they can, every mother's son of them. Teacher Tourist—Have you no ignoramus among you? Old Resident—Never a one. Teacher Tourist—Do you know the meaning of the word ignorant? Old Resident—No. Teacher Tourist—What is it? Old Resident—A stranger like yourself.—School Board Journal.
"Charles," said Coleridge one day to Lamb, "did you ever hear me preach?" "I never heard you do anything else," said Lamb.
