LABORITES IN CONVENTION

ANNUAL MEETING OF AMERICAN FEDERATION IS OPENED.

President Gompers Says Organization Is Peaceful But Is Ready for a Fight or a Fight.

Norfolk, Va.—The first session of the American Federation of Labor, which began its twenty-seventh annual convention at the Jamestown exposition Monday, was devoted to speechmaking and the reading of reports.

In response to the addresses of welcome by Gov. Swanson and Exposition President Tucker, Mr. Gompers paid a tribute to Virginia and to the exposition. He confined his remarks chiefly to general matters, but toward the end came down to labor principles, and said:

"I know of no organization that makes so little pretense of patriotism, but in little true patriotism prevails to such a large extent as in organized labor. We want peace; we love peace and are working for peace and in the proportion that our working people are better organized we will secure peace. But we are not pacifists; we are not unwilling sympathizers; we know our rights; we think we do, and that is just as good—and we are going to stand for them."

"I do not want to discuss any military or naval affairs or the policies of our government, but we all know that the federal government authorities have decided that the navy of the United States is going to be transferred from the Atlantic to the Pacific. There is a man chosen to boss the job of taking the entire fleet from one ocean to the other of whom I wish to speak. This is Fighting Bob Evans, who said in connection with transferring the fleet:

"I don't know what may be the result of this cruise. I have only one mission and that is to see that the fleet goes to the Pacific coast; and whether it was to be for fun or frolic or a fight, we will be there."

"It is to be a fight, I want to refer and make the application to the labor movement. If it is to be peace, if it is to be fun, or if it is to be a fight, we will be there."

$22,000 IS LOST OR STOLEN

DISAPPEARS FROM STAGE IN TRANSIT TO MINERS' CAMP.

Large Sum for Payment of the Employees at Cokedale, Col., Is Most Mysteriously Missing.

Trinidad, Col.—Checks and currency to the amount of $22,000, intended to pay the wages of the Carbon Coal & Coke company's miners at Cokedale, were lost or stolen Monday afternoon while in transit, in a stage from the Longdale railroad station to the camp, a distance of only two miles.

Charles Macomber, driver of the stage, was arrested on suspicion, but he declares he knows nothing about the supposed theft. The money package had been carelessly thrown with other baggage into the stage. Abraham Thompson, the paymaster, accompanied by Jim Williams, a guard, left here at dusk Monday night to drive to Cokedale, the biggest camp operated by the American Smelting & Refining company. The money, which was contained in two canvas sacks, was placed under the seat.

According to the story of Thompson they encountered no one en route to their camp, but when they arrived at Cokedale and the miners had been lined in line to receive their pay, it was discovered that the money was missing. Thompson and Williams immediately retraced their tracks for several miles, but could find no trace of the thief, and returned to Cokedale, where they notified the sheriff by telephone. Some of the miners obtained horses and rode over the surrounding country, but encountered no suspects.

COOL TO THE KAISER

NO RIOTING BUT LITTLE ENTHUSIASM SHOWN IN LONDON.

ANTAGONISM IS STRONG

"German Invasion" Hobby Causes People to Suspect Emperor's Proclamations of His Desire for Peace.

London.—Emperor William of Germany, the guest of King Edward, made a speech Wednesday at the Guild hall, where he was entertained by the city of London. He urged the strengthening of the Anglo-German relations and emphasized his unalterable desire to foster the peace of the world.

The day passed off without the expected socialist demonstration, much less any disorder or rioting.

The reception accorded Emperor William by the people of London has been respectful, but compared to that given some other royal visitors of recent years, it was in no sense enthusiastic.

The atmosphere which has prevailed during his appearance in public has been tinged with decided coolness, and there is no doubt that the English officials are relieved that the passage of the German emperor through the streets of this city was attended by no disagreeable incidents.

A large section, if not a majority of English people, persists in believing Germany to be Great Britain's one enemy among the nations and this enmity has been fanned recently by continuous warlike front-page headlines in the leading newspapers and reviews, as well as from military experts, that Germany's chief naval and military activity is directed toward the conquest for the invasion of England—that Germany plans to surprise England some day when she is fully prepared to surprise suddenly, just as Japan surprised Russia.

"The German invasion" is becoming a hobby of the anti-Germans and a subject of ridicule and jest in believing the idea has, however, unquestionably affected the mind of the public and it is tending to surround with suspicion Emperor William's professions of his desire for peace.

Harris, claiming $20,000 with interest from October 23, 1903.

WHEN MONEY WAS SCARCE.

Practically Unobtainable During Period of Missouri's History.

"However, scarce money may be at times at the present," said an old Missourian, "the oldest inhabitants will recall when it was almost unobtainable and other commodities had to be used as media of exchange. The wolf's scalp was worth a dollar because it was a state bounty upon the death of a wolf, and venison hams and deer skins also had a purchasing value. Skins of the fur bearers were likewise abundant and valuable. When the first sheriff of Audrain county, in 1837, went to Jefferson City to deliver the county revenue, he met an old friend on the way who, needing money, wanted to borrow the actual coin part of the county's revenue. The good-hearted sheriff lent it to him and went on to the capital and delivered only the scalp. By the time of the next settlement the loan was repaid, and the sheriff made his next settlement complete. No note or other obligation than the mere word was given."—Columbia Herald.

THE PEACEFUL COW.

She was even more afraid of cows than most girls, so when she spied a placid animal recombent under a tree, peacefully chewing cud, she at first refused to go through the pasture at all. Her husband calmed her fears to some extent, and they started by, when the cow slowly commenced to get up, hind legs first, as they always do. At this the little lady shrieked with terror, and said: "Oh, Bob, hurry, hurry, he is getting ready to spring at us!"—Harper's Magazine.

TO PRETENDERS.

A Wholesome Word for Guidance.

Just a word to you, "Collers" and other glaring examples of Modern Yellow Journalism, and Cigarette.

Environment gives you a viewpoint from which it is difficult to understand that some people even nowadays act from motives of old-fashioned honesty.

There are honest makers of foods and healthful beverages and there are honest people who use them.

Perhaps you are trained to believe there is no honesty in this world. There is, although you may not be of a kind to understand it.

Some of you have been trained in a sorry class of pretenses, just as training does not train the old-fashioned person trained without knowledge of pretense and deceit.

These letters came to me absolutely without solicitation. We have a great many thousands from people who have been helped or entirely healed by following the suggestions to quit the food or drink which may be causing the physical complaints and change to Postum Coffee or Grape-Nuts food. You are not intelligent enough to know the technical reasons why the change makes a change in the cells of the body. Your knowledge, or lack of knowledge, makes not the slightest difference in the facts.

You can print from old and worn presses will produce and sell them as a manner to enhance their tawdry beauty. "Learned" editorials are but commercial, and seek only "dollars" and much by pretence.

When you branch out into food values you become only ridiculous. Stick to what you know. The field may be small but it is safe.

This first letter is from the President of the "Christian Nation," New York, Oct. 2, 1907. Battle Creek, Mich.

Dear Sirs: I am, this morning, in receipt of the enclosed mighty good letter from one of my subscribers, which I forward to you, and which I am sure you will be glad to use. I am personally acquainted with this lady, and know that she has no object in writing, other than to do good.

Cordially,

John W. Pritchard, Pres.

Brooklyn, N. Y., Oct. 1, 1907.

Dear Mr. Pritchard: Noticing Postum Food Coffee advertisement each week in your reliable paper, I concluded to try it, and feeling it a duty towards those who may have suffered as I have from indigestion, desire to state what wonderful benefit I have received from Postum although using only a short time, and not do. I alone realize and appreciate its good effects, which I forward to you. "How much I have improved and how well I look," and I tell the facts about Postum every time, for since using it I have not been troubled with indigestion. It is invigorating, healthful; does not affect the nerves as ordinary coffee, and if properly made, a most delicious drink. Although I have had much faith in general advertising, yet, finding Postum does me much better for me than I expected I am more inclined to "Preach all things, hold fast that which is good." I am so thankful for good health that I want to know what a blessing Postum has been to me. You may use these few lines as an ad. if you so desire and my name also.

Very truly yours,

Anna S. Reeves.

275 McDonough St., Brooklyn.

Coffee hurt her, she quit and used Postum. She didn't attempt to analyze but she enjoyed the result. Underneath it all—"There's a Reason."

HERE'S A NEW DEFINITION.

And Many There Are Will Say Senator Platt Was Right.

—Columbia Herald.

A rather cynical joke has been recently credited to Senator Platt. The senator, on his last visit to the Manhattan Beach hotel, allowed a pretty little girl, a western millionaire's daughter, to be presented to him.

The little girl, in the course of one of her many chats with the aged statesman, said:

"Tell me, won't you, senator, what political economy is?"

"Political economy, my dear child," Senator Platt said to have replied, "is the art of never giving more votes than you actually need."

BABY'S ECZEMA GREW WORSE.

Hospitals and Doctors Could Not Relieve Him—But Cuticura Remedies a Speedy, Permanent Cure.

"Eczema appeared when our baby was three months old. We applied to several doctors and hospitals, each of which gave us something different every time, but nothing brought relief. At last, one of our friends recommended us to use Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment. A few days afterwards improvement could be noted. Since then we have used nothing but Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment, and now the baby is six months old and is quite cured. All that we used was one cake of Cuticura Soap and two boxes Cuticura Ointment, costing in all $1.25. C. F. Kara, 342 East 62nd Street, New York, March 30, 1906."

Eluding the Teacher.

Willie came to school for the first time. In one hand he carried a cap and in the other a bunch of bananas.

"You can't come in here with those bananas," said the teacher.

Willie went out. In a few minutes he came back, walking slowly and painfully.

"Where did you put the bananas?" asked the teacher. "I hid them all my little," gasped Willie; "they're safe inside of me!"

Sheer white goods, in fact, any fine wash goods when new, owe much of their attractiveness to the way they are laundered, this being done in a manner to enhance their textile beauty.

Home laundering would be equally satisfactory if proper attention was given to starching, the first essential being good Starch, which has sufficient strength to stiffen, without thickening the goods. Try Defiance Starch and you will be pleasantly surprised at the improved appearance of your work.

STOP WOMAN AND CONSIDER

First, that almost every operation in our hospitals, performed upon women, is the result of neglect of such symptoms as Backache, Irritability, Displacement, Pain in the Side, Pruritus, Sensations, Dizziness and Sleeplessness.

Second, that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, has cured more cases of female ills than any other medicine known. It regulates, strengthens and restores women's health and is invaluable in all cases of female ills.

Third, the great volume of unqualified and grateful testimonials on file at the Pinkham Laboratory at Lynn, Mass., many of which are from time to time being published by special permission, give absolute evidence of the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Mrs. Pinkham's advice.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

For more than 10 years has been curing Female Complaints, such as Drugging Sensations, Weak Back, Pains and Displacements, Inflammation and Ulceration, and Organic Diseases, and it dissolves and expels Tumors at an early stage.

Mrs. Pinkham's Standing Invitation to Women

Women suffering from any form of female weakness are invited to write Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., for advice. She is the Mrs. Pinkham who has been advising sick women free of charge for more than twenty years, and before that she assisted her mother-in-law, Lydia E. Pinkham, in advising. This advice is especially well qualified to guide sick women back to health. Write today, don't wait until too late.

Saying "Hello" to Heart Throbs.

"It is a curious thing," said a prominent lecturer recently, "how some books have a strong radiating personality, so that you feel like saying 'Hello' every time you come across them. Last Christmas I visited friends here at the home on the farm. When the supper dishes had been put away, the chimes down and the evening lamp lighted we gathered beside the organ for a good old-fashioned 'sing'.

On the center table were strewn the Christmas remembrances taken from the Christmas tree on the evening before. Glancing over them I suddenly exclaimed 'Hello! my good friend, Hello!' and as the others looked up in surprise, I picked up a copy of 'Heart Throbs' and read to them from its pages the 'piece' I spoke in school 40 years ago.

"That was enough to set in motion the friendly entertaining spirit of Heart Throbs, and the music was forgotten as we took turns reading the humorous and pathetic bits of prose and verse that have been preserved in this wonderful volume. Some books have great literary value, some have historical significance, but Heart Throbs is the only book I know that slaps you on the back in a friendly sort of way, putting itself to your moods and proving itself to be a veritable emotion. Next to my love of the Bible I love Heart Throbs. It is the most notable book of the times."

Restricted Choice.

"The people and the corporations," said Senator La Follette, the other day, "remind me of a woman and her little boy. There was a very large chicken and a very small duck on the table and the woman, using with the carving knife raised, said: 'Johnny, which will you take, chicken or duck?' 'Duck,' piped Johnny. But the mother shook her head. 'No, Johnny,' she said in a firm, yet kindly voice, 'you can't have duck, my dear. Take your choice, darling, take your choice, but you can't have duck.'"

Laundry work at home would be more satisfactory if the right Starch were used. In order to get the desired stiffness, it is usually necessary to use so much starch that the beauty and fineness of the fabric is hidden behind a paste of varying thickness, which not only destroys the appearance, but also affects the wearing quality of the goods. This trouble can be entirely overcome by using Defiance Starch, as it can be applied much more thickly because of its greater strength than other makes.

Great Comfort.

"Yes," remarked Mr. Russell, impressively, "the doctor says if I don't take a rest and not go so hard I'll be dead in a year."

"Ah!" exclaimed his wife, "what a consolation it must be to you to know that your life's insured."

Where Warm Clothing is Useful.

In a hospital for soldiers' wives in India a poor woman was about to be savagely home. A lady got her some warm clothing for the voyage. Unfortunately the patient died before she could be got away. The matron, anxious to improve the occasion, said to the lady who had provided the clothes, "Ah, well, poor soul, she's gone, but you've got her warm warm clothing!"—Cernelli.

Schoolmaster—Who can tell me what a steward is? Johnny—A steward is a man that does not mind his own business.
Schoolmaster—Why, then, did you get that idea? Johnny—Well, I looked it up in the dictionary, and it said, "A man who attends to the affairs of others."

Bella—How do you know she remembered your birthday?
Bella—By the ostentatious way she forgot it.—New York Sun.

The End of the Feud.

By Charles Sloan Reid.

Copyright, 1907, by Charles S. Reid.

"WELL, ye've got me, Tom, hard an' fast, an' that's a fact."

It was even difficult for the man to speak, so completely was he wound with ropes. Beginning at his shoulder, the ropes, by numerous tightly drawn coils, bound his arms fast against his body and held his knee joints worked as one. The man's captor sat opposite on the ground, dangling his hands over his knees and grinning.

"Yes, Joe, I've got ye. Ye're slippery, Joe, slippery as a greased eel, but I've got ye now."

"It's all on account of them dined inguns I eat this mornin'. Alers would sleep like a dead hog after eatin' inguns."

"I reckon so, Joe."

"Didn't think about anybody wanderin' into this place now."

He looked up and around. They were sitting at the bottom of a deep gorge, with perpendicular walls of granite rising more than a thousand feet above them, and these walls almost surrounded the little basin in a small compass. There was only one narrow outlet.

"But, ye see, I been trailin' ye for two or three days, like a hungry coyote on the track of a crippled jack rabbit."

"I reckon so."

"Hain't been for that don't reckon I'd 'ave found my way in here for some time. Somehow never had tried to come down in here in all my born days 'cause this place sort of seemed to be on your side."

"What air ye goin' to do about it now ye've got me?"

"Hain't decided, but maybe I'll just open a vein in yer neck an' let ye peg out that way."

"Can't ye make it quicker'n that? I allers done my work clean, Tom, ye know it, don't ye?"

"So ye did, mighty clean. Ye're a posky good shot, Joe."

The feud was an old one and had claimed many victims on both sides. In fact, it had reduced the two families to four members. Joe Dunston had an only son left, and Tom Wylie had an only daughter. Hardly a gorge or ravine there was throughout the mountains that had not seen its tragedy, that did not bear some ghastly legend of the feud.

Over there a young man kneeling to drink at a clear spring had dyed its waters with his lifeblood ere he could rise, and down there the bones of a teaching skeleton had remained above ground for months before the tragedy of a missing member had been learned, and so the epochs of the family feud had been marked.

Joe Dunston sat at the bottom of the gorge and cursed himself for eating down that way.

Tom Wylie stood in the cabin doorway watching the trail that led down the ravine, winding from one side to the other as it sought the easier ascent or descent of the projecting boulders.

Darkness stole slowly up from the depths of the hollow, and still no sign of old Tom gliding along up the path in his habitually stealthy manner.

"Dad's uncommon late tonight, it 'pears to me." The girl took a step down and sat upon the doornail. Her cheeks glowed like red ripe cherries in the sunshine, for she had been bending over the evening fire taking the corn pone and frying the bacon for the night's meal.

From the table came the odor of the meat. It floated out through the doorway on the evening atmosphere and was appealing to the senses.

"If dad could smell the meat I reckon he'd be comin' in home without waitin' any longer. I wonder what he can be doin' anyhow."

A feeling of uneasiness dived through her as she thought of the feud; but, suddenly rising, as if to escape some burden, she hurried the thought from her. "Tain't that. No, tain't that," she declared as she sat down again.

But the twilight deepened into darkness, the stars came out, the meat grew cold on the table, and its odor no longer told of its savor. Still old Tom had not come. Ruth peered into the darkness at every crackling of the twigs, but nothing materialized to her longing. It had been years since old Tom had spent a night away from home, not since the night when young Tom was shot down on the side of Little Craggy. The girl felt to counting the stars and saying to herself:

"Before I can count a hundred he will be here."

But the hundred grew to 200, then to 300. Then she began to counted them all over again. Hour after hour dragged away, and the moon had climbed to a height in the heavens whence its light shone down the cabin chimney. The occasional hoot of an owl or the cry of a catamount pierced the still night air, but these were with startling effect, though these were but common noises of the night. Again and again came the thought of the feud, but just as often as it came, shuddering, she hung upon Jim's hands for a moment; then she bowed her head upon his breast.

"It can't be, it can't be," she invariably murmured. "Dad's too quick for that."

The moon slipped over the roof of the cabin, and Ruth watched the shadow of the house lengthen away from the doornail, and she counted the points of its serrated edge.

Suddenly while thus engaged the shrill, ear-splitting shriek of a mountain cat struck upon her ear with terrible distinctness and nearness, and at the same instant came the dash of a long, angular body, splashing the moonlight from the high branches of an old chestnut oak and terminating in a weaken from his purpose.

"Yes, I reckon so, Tom. Ding the inguns!"

Tom grinned. "There's just one more, Joe, an' the feud'll be ended—have ye thought about that since ye woke?"

Joe gulped. Jim's big form and handsome face rose in his mind. Jim was the baby and had always been nearest to old Joe's heart. All the rest had gone the way of the feudists. A vision of Jim leaping from some high cliff with a bullet in his heart passed through his thoughts, and Joe's chin sank on his breast.

"Tom, ye're countin' party fast," he said presently, lifting his head again. "Maybe the bullet will come the other way."

"Maybe so. Some have come that way in time."

It was Joe's turn to grin.

"Don't reckon ye've got any talk ye want to make afore I slit that vein in yer neck, Joe?" Tom had drawn a knife from his pocket and was whetting a small blade of it on the leather vamp of his shoe.

"No, guess not, Tom, an' if ye're determined to do it that way there's no use waitin' any more time, though. It ain't the clean thing, Tom, an' ye know it. Ain't nary a Dunston before that died any other way than by a long range bullet. That's all, Tom—all I got to say."

Old Tom chuckled and continued to whet the blade of his knife. At length he tried the point of it with his thumb and was apparently satisfied with its keenness. Then he arose and went over to Joe, where he knelt by the latter's side.

"Look around, Joe," he said, "for where ye see all the sunlight now will be midnight to ye in a few minutes. Ye're a brave man, an' it's a pity for ye to die this way, but there ain't no regulations in the feud, ye know."

Tom began to feel about Joe's neck for the vein and presently reached it outward with his thumb. Joe had thrown his head backward, and Tom was bending low and looking upward under his victim's chin. Presently the sting of the knife thrust started old Joe into madness. His head darted forward with the suddenness of a serpent, and his long, amber-lined teeth snapped down upon the throat of his captor. There was a struggle in the throat; then his windpipe closed, and as Joe's lifeblood gushing from the wound in his neck, dyed the young boy's shirt and the green grass in the bottom of the gorge the death set of his jaws sealed the doom of his slayer. In a little while every quiver of the flesh had ceased, and one more tragedy of the feud had left its story more plainly readable than words could make it.

The midday sun looked down into the chasm. A pleasant prelude to himself in a narrow trail among the burl, while a woodcock ran up the tall, little less trunk of a dead spruce pine and after a shrill call that pierced the desolence of the gorge sent out the long, low roll of his drumming.

Ruth Wylie stood in the cabin doorway watching the trail that led down the ravine, winding from one side to the other as it sought the easier ascent or descent of the projecting boulders.

Darkness stole slowly up from the depths of the hollow, and still no sign of old Tom gliding along up the path in his habitually stealthy manner.

plunged a few yards away. There followed one answering squall from an unfortunate pig, and Ruth, springing to her feet, ran inside the cabin and slammed the door shut behind her.

"I reckon I ain't myself no more, jumpin' an' runnin' at the scream of a cat, but there's one pig less, poor thing!"

She threw herself across the bed and closed her eyes with her hands.

"Strange I ain't sleepy by this time an' it past midnight, if I did ain't by daylight I reckon I'd better start out after him. If I could just keep from thinkin' about the feud, if there was only Jim I'd feel easier about it, because Jim is—Jim's about—There, now, if I did only knowed I was a thinkin' 'bout that feud about it—about one of the Dunstons—I don't know what would happen."

A tall, handsome young mountaineer came into Ruth's vision, and, forgetting the feud, she fell asleep.

At the first peep of dawn among the hills Ruth Wylie set off down the ravine. She knew every pig trail or cow path among the hills, and she now traversed them, one after another. She knew every hiding place among the rocks, and she sought in them all. She knew every dangerous passage of the cliffs, every point of exposure to the fire of an enemy in ambush, and she searched at the base of all these rocks.

Tirelessly she pursued her quest all through the morning and until a late hour in the afternoon.

A Hard Debt to Pay.

"I owe a debt of gratitude that can never be paid off," writes G. S. Clark, of Westfield, Iowa, "for my rescue from death, by Dr. King's New Discovery. Both lungs were so seriously affected that death seemed imminent, when I commenced taking New Discovery. The ominous dry, hacking cough quit before the first bottle was used, and two more bottles made a complete cure." Nothing has ever equalled New Discovery for coughs, colds and all throat and lung complaints. Guaranteed by Barrington Pharmacy, 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free.

At the Majestic

Continuing its policy of offering only the best in vaudeville, the Majestic theatre, Chicago, has arranged for the week of November 13th another of its remarkable bills. Eva Tanquary, the cyclonic comedienne, will be one of the star attractions, she captivates her audiences with her personal magnetism. Another big act which will be seen here for the first time is the Song Birds with a company of thirty people, originally produced at one of the gambols of the Lambs' Club in New York, it met with so great a success that it was immediately staged. It is a timely travesty on the New York Grand Opera War. The principal "birds" are Oscar Hammerstein and Con the Conqueror. Adelle Oswald, a Chicago girl who was in a number of the Chicago Opera House musical productions, is a member of the company, playing the part of Emma Scramans. One of the comedy elements of the bill will be provided by Charles Evans and company who present a one act farce called "His Up You, William". Mr. Evans is the Evans of Evans and Hoey. A startling musical novelty will be The Immensaphone, introducing as a special feature an America battle scene. Violet Dale, America's greatest mimic, with imitations of such famous stage favorites as Anna Held, Edith May, Marie Dressler, Fay Templeton, Mrs. Carter and numerous others. Aside from these stars there are a dozen equally entertaining acts.

Grand tonic for the aged and for female weaknesses. Great alterative and body builder; best of all for lame back and weak kidneys. "Guaranteed by Barrington Pharmacy, 50c."

At McVickers.

George M. Cohan's successful music play, "Forty-Five Minutes from Broadway" is playing a month's engagement in McVicker's theatre, Chicago, and is filling that playhouse to its capacity. This attraction has the honor of celebrating the golden jubilee of this historic theatre, that event occurring Tuesday night, Nov. 5th. J. H. McVicker opened the theatre Thursday, Nov. 5th, 1875, with a comedy by Tolin, "The Honeymoon" and an after piece "The Hough Diamond", and now fifty years after Cohan's fine play rounds out the half century. Emma Carus, one of the comedienne of the day, and a woman of delightful personality and rich contralto voice, is playing Mary Jenkins, the housemaid heroine of the piece, and Scott Welsh, a young singer and comedian, is the "Kid" Burns of the cast. Attention to detail is one of the marked features of the performance. For the accommodation of visitors from out of town, arrangements have been made to give three performances Thanksgiving Day. One at 11 o'clock A. M., one at 2:30 P. M. and the final at 8:15 P. M. The engagement will close Saturday night Nov. 30.
