When Henry Hawley reached his home last Thursday afternoon after his daily trip to the city and his usual range of projects, he found about twenty-five of his acquaintances had assembled to surprise him and help celebrate his birthday. He welcomed all in the most hearty way and after a line spent in social chat, supper was announced. Henry enjoyed his dinner in the pleasant rooms of his friend, Philip, adjoining his own, where two long tables were beautifully decorated and spread. Mrs. V. A. Hawley and Miss Meyer served an abundance of good things and fun and jollity ruled till late in the evening. Each partied all so thickly with music and carnival that each took his hand at parting and heard his cheery response to congratulations and good wishes. It was truly a day that had reached the ripe age of 86 years. May we all celebrate many more anniversaries.

PATRIOTIC PREPARATIONS.

Here is money, my boy, to go down to some better line of crates to try.
And cracker and grocers and many a baker.

For ourselves the Fourth of July.
And the cracker will bring with a mangled and cracker, cracker to be and get it in a glorious flourish of the Fourth of July.

You can get some tomatoes as to the cracker.

And perhaps a top pistol as well.
And you can get some cracker to be with it.

And do not forget on your way to stop in at the store of Mr. H. H. Hawley of Adams, cost your cracker and fun.
For the Fourth of July.

—Miss Riley in Lippincott's Magazine.
