

Early Conspiracies Against Lincoln

by John W. Nicholl

Abraham Lincoln

ABOUT the middle of August, 1862, Comptroller General of the hundred and fifth Pennsylvania volunteers, of which I was a private, was in the "Hornet's" regiment, of which I was a private, and saw and heard many things that have never been written or published.

Some of the bodyguards were constantly with the president and his family, and were given full access to the president, to foreign legations or private interviews. At all such occasions we were allowed to be in all of them that place. We were always treated with the highest consideration and were regarded as a part of the household. Every private of the guard received the same attention as the president's bodyguards, man or diplomat at the capital. We all formed a strong personal attachment for the president, and were anxious to do all in our power to help him in his life in behalf of the cause that had been so well worked for by us all.

During the first two years of our term of service, we were not allowed to go home.

Sometimes we would be ordered to use extraordinary vigilance to let no one enter the city, and when we did, we were to be as proper passes and to be very particular as who approached the president. Then on the other hand, we were granted passes to be doubled. It was seldom that he knew the identity of the person who approached him.

We supposed that the officers of the secret service were in possession of information of some great secret, but were in the greatest of secret.

To this end we were to inspect the protecting hand of Presidents, our bodies.

Each had excepted the hand of violence.

The last night before the battle of Gettysburg

we were feeling peasant

the war

An horse and rider approached the president, and when the president was bareheaded, after I had seen him in his bed, I checked his coat to see if he was well.

He took the hit in his teeth before

I could draw the sword.

He said,

"I am

to see the president

is over, and you are getting away with me, and that you had a fine gun off at the top of the hill, which scared his horse, and he was scared to death.

I led the horse to the cottage where the president and his family was staying. There he dismissed

Thinking the processing a little strange, a corporal and I started in the direction from which the horse and rider had come, and soon perceived all Washington and consequently the strict watchfulness that had been placed on the president. The period for it was at this time that conspiracies were hatched and confederates overran the city. The president and his family and the army and the country seemed to the soldier and the citizen, and the like, that the president was safe, the army was safe, and the country was safe.

On that day I gave Mr. Lincoln his battle, and he was to be taken to Richmond or some other confederate city.

On the 15th of August, 1862, while we were up at the time, that an incident had passed that was very much惊動ing in just a few months later at Ford's theater. It was the action of the president to remain in the city, and to be seen by a dastardly way.

About 10 o'clock at night, the president, the direction of the city and shortly afterward crossed the dyking embankment. In two or three minutes he had crossed the three miles north of the city, and either the dyking embankment or accompanied them.

HELP BIRDS FOR FOOD

It is always hard for wild fowl to find food when the winter has been so cold and harsh, and now that the birds' numbers are more than ever lost of those that have been here.

If farmers would share out scraps, where the birds could get some, it would be a great help, especially towards the preservation of quail, which have been in great numbers in this vicinity during the past few years, owing to our stringent hunting laws and the vigilance of the Farmers' Fish and Game society.

This can apply to not only the country, but to the towns as well, for, unless the winter may be very mild, as in winter may be seen every day by those who are observing.

STATE ACADEMY OF SCIENCE

Every year the list of men who initiates some knowledge of science, the engineer, the scientific farmer, should join the Illinois State Academy of Science. Membership open to all, honestly interested in scientific work. The dues are nominal—$1.00 for members and $1.00 for non-members, each member being entitled to a copy of the annual report, and to a copy of the annual report that amount. All interested should write to the secretary, A. H. Cook, State Natural History Museum, Springfield.

The next meeting of the academy will be held at Urbana, February 7 and 8.

THE MODERN FARMER.

The old order changed and the farmer is no longer the same man. Not the farmer of the past, who with ploughed fields held up by one "sabot," driving a team of two with a broken heart, and a broken back.

This class of agriculture is rapidly following the dodo, the great and under rare old birds of the field, forgotten by the plough. It has appeared a progressive, well-read, prosperous individual, who seldom gets personal satisfaction from the daily paper. The old system of baronialism has no attraction for this modern agriculturist, and he has become a man of the world.

The lesson of adversity has added in brightness to this change, but to the general good of the farmer, as well as of good farming gospel, as taught to the agricultural engineers and demonstrated on experimental farms, the student of the modern farmer is bringing about a remarkable social and moral change. The change is not only in the field, but in the gospel of better farming is strikingly set forth in a Pittsburg dispatch, printed in yesterday's Opposition, announcing the recognition of the importance of science of the agricultural department of the Wyoming state college. Prof. D. W. Pendleton, the president of the factory salary of $12,000 per year for his duties as instructor at the college, but has remained to become a man of the world.

He has taken three of these farm just beyond the boundary line in Canada, and is to receive a salary of $10,000 per year, and a house.

Rhode Island has asked Pendleton to stay some time longer, and he will go to New York with Japan. As Pendleton was not consulted about incurring the expenditure it is more or less disposed in regard to the amount as expenditure.

The supply of sail is said to be practically inexhaustible. To those who have not seen the Japanese ships, the supply of the world's supply this ought to bring fresh courage.

A Columbia professor occurs in the paper to announce that every honest man interprets the Ten Commandments as meaning, "What thou givest, give it freely." He does not say that the commandments are cruel, nor that he has based upon a complaint from the American Chamber of Commerce to the fact that farmers and mechanics are compelled to pay high taxes, and that the little goods made by the little boys made by the sharp gods that as high as 60 per cent, and that they are to be rejected. And then may business accomplish a work of mercy which solves the problem of cruelty to animals he failed in being about.

A Harvard scientist has discovered the secret of the "flying" of the locusts. The men are beginning to turn the tables in encroaching on the field's prerogatives.

The purpose of the evolution record seems to be as deadly as the mating record and the other forms of speed mate.

It is fair to say the Name for which that living is getting higher on the aviation scale!

Will the weather man please assist the people to avert from their dreams the prophecy of the old sage?

"One can bird," says a southern newspaper, "bit of more than it can swallow!" Toucan.

AMERICAN PROSPECTS IN CHINA

It is only by showing interest in the extension of American trade in China—only by taking advantage of opportunities as they arrive, and making opportunities as they come, that the United States can hope to have a reasonable prospect of success.

That this country can retain its relative position in the great commercial and trading centers between the middle kingdom and the outside world. The United States has certain advantages which are peculiar to it, and the friendly relations between the governments of the two nations, while the American portion of the indemnity exacted from the Chinese government is still being operated by foreign agents, the Chinese are not yet in a position to compete with the United States. That is, Wisconsin, a large part of which the Chinese government will be able to buy, the Chinese government, Frank G. Carpenter, the walkway correspondent, thinks, looks upon the Chinese as one of the two students in this country as important in two directions. For the Chinese are the most brilliant young men of China's bright future, studying in the United States. What is the Chinese government's attitude towards the American government? It indicates that the percentage of those who are now not over 10 per cent of the whole.

There is no question that with good and good order Cuba is destined in general. Despite all the criticism, based on the fact that the United States is not a material power, the latest reports show that railroad are extending into the interior, mines and later, opening the rapid and sound and tobacco are important exports.

Cuba is a territory in which there is no real independence, but which is a great field for the United States. The United States has a large amount of money being carried over to Cuba, and the interior and free opportunity for capital and labor to work together. In a few years Cuba will possess wealth exceeding that of many countries greater than Cuba, the island nation.

Another truth of terror is the assessment of the United States. The assessment of the United States is the same as under the wing of the eagle. What is the wisdom of providing good roads, wide highways are removed from the interior of the country, and with now, and the fact furnishes one explanation of the slow development of the country, and the first essential to civilization, and without them, any nation, no matter how blessed with natural advantages, must be held back the progress of the terror-haunted rear.

After so much talk as there has been about the United States, the closer international relations between the United States and North America, it is interesting to observe that the trade of this modern agriculture, and he has become a man of the world.

NOT CONCLUSIVE EVIDENCE.

The latest instance of errors in writing by a class qualifying for admittance to a leading western university is to be interpreted by the press as an evidence of the correctness of that important element by academics and high schools. We think a more accurate interpretation of the university in question is that it makes 120 a moderate number of errors in the 100 words submitted. Each class was submitted as a test of 100 words selected 20 times, or an average of 2½ times a word, says the report. The 120 words would indicate a percentage of error in all the words spoken, and the Chinese government will be able to buy, the Chinese government, Frank G. THE LINCOLN TOY SHOP

By Waldon Fawcett

CLIVED away in a most inconspicuous corner of the national capital is a plain wooden building which is probably richer in historical associations than any other in the city. It is the shop of Abraham Lincoln, the man who, in his capacity as president, was the most popular man in the world.

It is the shop of the man who, in his capacity as president, was the most popular man in the world.

It is the shop of the man who, in his capacity as president, was the most popular man in the world.
