Don't try to dairy with beef cows. Any good milk cows of any breed are good property.

A good milk cow sells for more than a cow that does not milk. If there is no saleage you can get for your cow, it is a loss.

Two or three years of milk cows are worth a great deal on any farm. If the cow is not a milk cow, it is a loss, and she will consume without any.

The butter can begin to bring in the milk. It is a good thing to have the butter can at hand.

By A. A. ALEXANDER, WISCONSIN COLLEGE OF AGRICULTURE.

The raised palpit "bunches" noticed on the backs of cattle during the winter season and early spring months are in large numbers of larvae, and are commonly termed "grubs."

The grubs are the product of eggs deposited by the cow or variety of house flies, and are commonly termed "grubs." The raised palpit "bunches" noticed on the backs of cattle during the winter season and early spring months are in large numbers of larvae, and are commonly termed "grubs."

The old and apparently sensible idea of the cow's back is that the parent fly deposits her eggs on the back of the cow, and the cow, when she scratches her back, she scratches the grubs out of the cow's back at a place where the grubs are most numerous.

The grubs are not harmful to the cow, and are commonly termed "grubs." The raised palpit "bunches" noticed on the backs of cattle during the winter season and early spring months are in large numbers of larvae, and are commonly termed "grubs."
