SYNOPSIS
Miss Helen Haddock and Miss Helen Haddock... CHAPTER IV

I kept up a rapid fire of talk, but Helen said in a low voice that she believed only in the water.

CHAPTER IV
Helen stood up and said to her brother, "I have thought of you."

"I have thought of you," Helen said, and her eyes were fixed on her brother.

Looking back, I saw Miss Helen standing there, her face pale, her hands clasped.

Miss Helen, who only pronounced a few words, and then she looked at her brother with a look of deep sympathy.

"I have thought of you," Helen said, and her eyes were fixed on her brother.

I was staring at her with open mouth. She was driving a dark horse across the lake, and the beach behind her was wet and dark.

"I have thought of you," Helen said, and her eyes were fixed on her brother.
