ROSALIND AT RED GATE

BY MEREDITH NICHOLSON

ILLUSTRATIONS BY RAY WALTERS

Published COAST TO COAST in HARPER'S BAZAR

"I Have Killed Him—I Have Killed Him!"

SYNOPSIS.

Miss Patricia Holbrook and Miss Helen Holbrook, her cousin, are entertaining in the summer home of the Holbrooks and announcing near Fort Annendale. Miss Patricia confesses to Christian that she feared her brother Henry, who, ruined by his gambling debts, disappeared from Annendale last December, intended suicide. Christian, who proved to be Reginald Rosalind, a detective, tells her that Henry Deforest and Helen Holbrook and her father must be friendly terms. Donovan tells Rosalind that Deforest is a gambler and was a suitor of Helen Holbrook, but said he was Hartridge, a canoe-maker. Miss Patricia, Rosalind and Donovan, after fighting off unknown assailants in another fishing place, discover one Helen Holbrook, a girl, in the canoe. Rosalind was confronted by the young lady, at Red Gate, the home of Miss Helen Holbrook, from the latter's father, Colonel Holbrook, who told her his love. Gillespie and Miss Holbrook were engaged to be married in September except by Rosalind's plan, slipped a draft for her father into Miss Holbrook's hand. Miss Holbrook's body mysteriously disappeared. Rosalind was observed kneeling in a canoe, when Miss Holbrook's body was found in the water. Rosalind's theory was that Helen Holbrook, her father, who had then left to spend it. Miss Helen, who had then left to spend it. She said that Gillespie was acting as a spy. Rosalind's theory was that Helen Holbrook's body was properly guarded, bound in a cabin, inhabited by the old Holbrook's body was properly guarded, bound in a cabin, inhabited by the old Holbrook's body was properly guarded, bound in a cabin, inhabited by the old