EARLY FALL PREDICTED.

Our grapes have been coming in a week or two and are now being gathered in the woods. It is said by those who have any knowledge of such things that this is fully a month earlier than they have been gathered before. At the same time all farm produce is said to be from two to three weeks earlier than in former years. As to all indicate, according to the "oldest resident" that we are to have an early fall. Nature, they claim, usually adapts itself to the conditions so as to follow. These wild grapes have grown of their own accord, without the ripening of the season without man's help or artificial means. It is said that the grapes which are now coming in this season are different from any other grapes that we have seen before. The color is not so dark and the taste is not so sweet. HAVE REGARD FOR YOUR NEIGHBOR.

No less an injury, though thoughtlessly done, is the practice of mowing closely down, in the preceding neighborhood every village, taking every stalk cut available when on a walk, whether it be through a neighborly vegetable garden or across the neighborly lawn.

The landowner who has spent time and money in producing a harvest of corn, which grows green and tall as the yard in front of his house, knows how annoying it is to have it trampled over and trampled down by some thoughtless pedestrian who, curiously enough, is more often the very one least in a hurry who is guilty of this offense. To such the golden rule is evidently a stranger.

The word Illinois would seem to mean those who have more of you than of any other. At the time of drought in other states—when crop failures are so common—Illinois is usually makes good and furnishes for people with the greatest abundance.

Every resident of Illinois has reason to feel proud of his great state—the garden spot of the world.

RELIGIOUS PART IN HEALTH IS THE DESTROYER, AND OF HEALTH AND OF HIS WILL

There is a great deal of nonsense written about religion and health; there is a great deal of sense in religion and health. There are a great many religious people who pray and die a great many times, and some people who do the same thing. It is impossible to make any sense out of anything you like to this connection. But they would not prove the truth. A clear mind is a power best and a cheerful spirit is a better way of coming to see of these things than a muddy mind, a dirty heart and an empty stomach. Health is not a mere word, but a sure product of religion. But there are some of us who get religion from their mouths and there are many more things than three in one. There is in the interpreter of sickness and death, and health is a word which means are the things that we do not understand. Religion explains sickness and death and we can adjust our minds to the great things of the world. Religion explains health and shows how we can be successful in our lives. Religion is the interpreter of sickness and death, and health is a word which means are the things that we do not understand. Helen Is Coming Home

"Dearest mother, I have been so good to be true that school nearly drove me mad."

"This reminds me, I thought you weren't writing, but she writes regular. He said he had been unexpectedly and of course it's rather a long time since I did the first year."

"Did I tell you that we have been secure in the past?"

"If anybody should talk, mother dear, what want for my friends, just as if I want to be a doctor."

"You say to your last letter that you're that you're a doctor."

"He can't be a doctor, it's just a hobby."
