

A Wasp in a Garden Was Inspiration To a Nipponese Who Could Grasp Opportunity.

Last week's war in Japan... The hands were clasped behind his back and he looked at me as he reviewed the bridge to think a fresh white paper... This little green wasp had a great many parents to sink out from his nest every week, and he had all day wrapped them in silk; but the silk was expensive material and he needed something cheaper for his purpose... "Why can't I do that some thing?" thought the Japanese merchant.
