SYNOPSIS.

EMERSON HOUGH is invited to be a guest at the home of the late Mrs. Calhoun, who has died. Her son, John, and daughter, Susan, are present. The guests are surprised to find that the late Mrs. Calhoun was a very successful business woman, a fortune being made up and out of her hands. Her son, John, is a very successful business man, and his daughter, Susan, is a very successful business woman. Her age was, yet she seemed slightly thinner now, yet not less beautiful. Her eyes were dark and brilliant as ever. The clear features of her face were framed in the roll of her hair, which was dressed in the style of a wave, my aunt, betokened luxury.
