The Unknown Blue and Grey

By WILBUR D. NESBITT

There are unknown blues in the valleys And the unknown greys in the hills.

But the unknown blues and greys are hidden from our eyes and hearts.

And no doves will tumble and flutter, And no flies will buzz and hum.

Or the unknown blues and greys are hidden from our eyes and hearts.

There are unknown greys in the fields, And the unknown blues in the hills.

For the unknown blues and greys are hidden from our eyes and hearts.

Where one goes the gods that wrangle, Sends the peace song of the thrush.

Where they are hidden and are waiting, Or the unknown blues and greys.
