"You are dissatisfied about setting out your business this year," said the professor.

"I always wait until the weather is good," responded the man humbly. "That is my variable course."

How Professor Bransford Got Tangled Up in Carrying Out His Wife's Living

The people didn't merely look at Professor Bransford—they stared. He was a man of means, and he had been married for twenty years...

"You are aware, sir, that you are carrying a joint debt of ten years' arrears?"

"Goddess me!" said the professor. "I don't know what you mean. My wife told me to put her things back on the bed, to place this in the trunk, to take the baby out of the house, to get the baby in the oven, marry!"

"I don't know whether it is the vice-Sunday that was the trouble."
