LORIMER REPORT IN

MAJORITY OF INVESTIGATORS SUSTAIN SENATOR'S TITLE TO SEAT ON EVIDENCE.

O. K. RES ADJUDICATA PLEA

Minority Members Declare That Ten Votes Were Secured Illegally and Money Was Corruptly and Fraudulently Used in Election.

Washington, May 21.—Senator Lorimer's vindication by the majority members of the senatorial committee which investigated his election was written into the official records of the United States senate.

Senator Dillingham, chairman of the committee, presented the report, signed by five members of the committee—Dillingham, Gamble, Jones, Johnston and Fletcher. It is a document of 81 printed pages, detailing at length the evidence upon which the committee found that there had been no corruption in the election of the Illinois senator.

Three members of the committee—Senators Lea, Kenyon and Kern—later presented a minority report, opposing the views of the majority and insisting that corruption had been proven.

The minority report holds that Mr. Lorimer's election was obtained by fraud and improper use of money. It is declared that ten of the votes cast for Mr. Lorimer were obtained by corrupt methods and that Edward Hines, the millionaire Chicago lumber man, was instrumental in "putting Lorimer over."

The statement of the minority members is particularly sharp in its denunciation of the methods used in Mr. Lorimer's election. According to these senators the testimony taken by the committee establishes Mr. Hines as "one who looked upon everything and everybody as being purchasable, the only question of doubt in his mind being the amount of money necessary to purchase this or that person."

The majority report sustains the plea of res adjudicata, which is in effect that the case, having once been decided by the senate, cannot again be brought into issue upon the same evidence. In this connection it is strongly pointed out that the claim of newly discovered evidence was not substantiated.

PASTOR IS EXECUTED

CLARENCE V. T. RICHESON ELECTROCUTED SHORTLY AFTER MIDNIGHT TUESDAY.

MINISTERS ARE WITH HIM

Doomed Man Does Not Flinch and Walks to Chair With Firm Step and Every Outward Sign of Calmness.

Massachusetts State Prison, Charlestown, Mass., May 22.—At 12:10 Tuesday morning, in the Charlestown state prison, former clergyman Clarence V. T. Richeson paid the penalty for the murder of Avis Linnell by being electrocuted.

The condemned man walked to the electric chair with more firmness and courage than had been expected by those who had observed him for the past few weeks. He had spent his last hours in seeking spiritual consolation in the Bible and in conversation with his spiritual advisers, who were in almost constant attendance up to the last moment.

Prison Chaplain Stebbins and Dr. Johnson had a nerve-racking experience with the condemned man before they succeeded in having him resign himself to his fate.

Only when he had reminded him that he was once a minister and ought to show a sublime faith in the hereafter did the man announce that he was ready to face the ordeal of legal death without flinching. Before this he had exclaimed:

"It is terrible I cannot stand it. They will have to carry me." After that, however, he seemed to take the attitude that it was his duty to the church to be brave. Under the influence of that attitude he bore up remarkably well, although there were periods when outbreaks occurred.

In a hotel near the Charlestown jail was Douglas Richeson, a brother of the condemned man, who had come here from Chicago. A lawyer asked him to go and say farewell to his brother. He said he was ready. The lawyer sent word to the condemned man, who cried:

"Good-bye! Douglas had best not come here. I could stand it, but he might break down."
The solemn hour of midnight found Richeson praying, after which he retired to his cell. The pastor seemed to find consolation in the part of the psalm:

"Yes, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil, for Thou art with me; Thy rod and Thy staff they comfort me."
"I am ready now," he said.
