COLONEL STATES HIS OWN CASE

Roosevelt Addresses Big Mass Meeting on Eve of Convention.

NATIONAL COMMITTEE SCORED

Gives the Issues of the Campaign and Outlines His Plans—Declares Crime Was Committed in Settling of Centista.

FROM ROOSEVELT'S SPEECH.

Tonight we come together to protest against a crime which strikes straight at the heart of every principle of political decency and honesty, a crime which represents treason to the people and the usurpation of the sovereignty of the people by irresponsible political bosses, inspired by the sinister influences of mongrel privilege.

We are more fortunate than our fathers in that there is no slightest tinge of sectionalism in the fight we are now waging. The principles for which we stand are as vital for the south as for the north, for the east as for the west.

The party belongs to the millions of the rank and file. It does not belong to the handful of politicians who have assumed fraudulently to upset the will of the rank and file.

A period of change is upon us. Our opponents are men of reaction, ask us to stand still. But we could not stand still if we would. We must either go forward or go backward. Never has there been so imperative a demand upon us as we are now. In the face of a man whose soul is as seared as whose eyes are as blinded, men of cold heart and narrow mind, who believe we can find safety in dull timidity and dull inaction. The unrest cannot be quieted by ingenuous trickery whose whose have been harshly treated by those who profess to give us to mark the cry of justice by loud and insincere clamor about issues that are dead.

We who stand for the cause of progress are fighting to make the country a better place to live in for those who have been harshly treated by fate; and if we succeed it will also really be a better place for those who are already well off.

None of us can really prosper permanently if masses of our fellows are debased and degraded, if they are ground down and forced to live starved and sordid lives, and that they are crippled like their bodies and the fine edge of their every feeling blunted.

Mr. Taft need never again explain what he means by government of the people by a "representative part" of the people. He has shown in actual practice the kind of government of the people by politicians who shall misrepresent them in the selfish interest of some one else.

Chicago, June 18.—On the eve of the Republican national convention Theodore Roosevelt addressed a mass meeting at the Auditorium theater, stating his side of the case in the present contest for the Republican nomination for president.

The Auditorium theater, the scene of the former president's first scheduled appearance since his arrival in Chicago, Saturday, was filled to its capacity with thousands of people who were gathered to order the mass meeting to order.

The enthusiasm of the great crowd was evident from the first. It was not until Senator Borah and William Jennings Bryan, the latter here as a spectator, impartially as each appeared.

Audience in Demonstration. It really spent its time, however, with the appearance of Colonel Roosevelt. Men and women clamored upon seats, waved flags, hats, handkerchiefs—anything they could be seized and thrown into the air to express the feelings of its possessor.

Every point scored by the speaker was a signal for a fresh outbreak of cheering on the part of the audience. There also were demands for summary punishment of the bosses denounced by the speaker, members of the national committee and the Taft leaders generally.

"I hereby warn the members of that national committee," he said, "that any action taken by the convention in which those seventy fraudulent delegates have a part will not be binding on the party or any member of the party."

"It will impose no obligation whatsoever on any Republican or any citizen within or without that convention. If they ask for the sword they shall have the sword."

There were no complimentary remarks in his estimate of the men who have dared so many contested seats against him.

Flight on Chairman. "I call on all fair-minded delegates, whether they vote for Mr. Taft or for the Roosevelt forces, not to vote for any candidate for temporary chairman named and backed by this national committee," he said.

"Every delegate who supports such a candidate is making himself responsible for the political theory—and who for that I say that I mean to see—that the colossal launched into a campaign of the personal of the committee by the very delegates themselves."
