Rosalie's Parents

By Adelaide H. Conroy Peckham

(Copyright, 1921, by Associated Literary Press)

Both Mr. and Mrs. Brereton were in a state of anxiety bordering on hysteria. Their only child, the pretty Rosalie, had fallen in love with an unknown young man who had, a few months ago, moved into their neighborhood.

There were a number of eligible youths in Beverly, any one of whom would have considered himself only too fortunate could he have become the son-in-law of the Breretons—whose income could be calculated with great nicety.

Jack Chandler was an artist, and Rosalie's parents believed artists to be a poor, undesirable lot. Then, too, not much more was known of Miss Graham, the aunt with whom Chandler lived. The best people here had met with a prompt and proper return, and there things had ended. Miss Graham, it was rumored, was a woman of literary tastes, and indeed was supposed to be writing a novel.

It was dreadful to think dear Rosalie should be associated with such a Bohemian class—but what were they to do? Chandler and their daughter were both of age and, unfortunately, Rosalie had a little money in her own right. All that was left for them was to try the effect of a direct appeal to Miss Graham to see if by any possibility she could do anything. It was possible that after they had diplomatically made her see how Chandler's career might be interfered with, and had intimated how very slim was Rosalie's fortune, she might order the suit. Rosalie could then be taken to New York for a couple of weeks, and all would be well.

The plan offered many objections, and a little promise of success, but neither Mr. nor Mrs. Brereton could think of anything else, and they were not the kind in such an emergency to attend to their hands.

On this special afternoon they dressed with elaborate care for their call on Miss Graham. Just as they should be with a woman of sufficient wealth and position to further them."

Mr. and Mrs. Brereton were too dazed to speak. Miss Graham continued faintly:

"John is very young, and at present might be foolish enough to risk a brilliant career. To avoid this I would immediately take him away from Beverly and send him under contract to finish a series of sketches of the surrounding country for the man—I forget his name—who lives in that fine house on the top of the hill. And so, for I know how unhappy it would make you all should Miss Rosalie be united to a man whose family would distinctly regard the match in the light of a moonshiner. I have come to ask that you may find it convenient should you have some relatives in another town, to let your daughter visit them for a few weeks, or until those pictures are finished. I feel that under the circumstances I am really not asking too much."

Miss Graham paused as if for an approving reply. None came, though the mouths of her two listeners had opened wide.

"I know," she said, "when you think it over you will come to my opinion, and that in this matter, which is such a vital one to me and his poor grandmother, who does not yet know the risk John has been running, I may count on your support."

Ingratulating Miss Graham held out her hand, first to Mrs. Brereton and then to her husband. Mechanically, dazedly, each took it in turn and accompanied her to the door.

When Miss Graham was well out of sight she burst into a ripple of merriment. "That scene goes into my next story," she said.

Late that afternoon there came a most cordial invitation to John Chandler, Esquire, from Mrs. Brereton, begging him to come to dinner quite informal and to accompany Miss Rosalie, her husband and herself to the theater.

The invitation was promptly accepted, and every one remarked how especially that night, and how pleased Mr. and Mrs. Brereton seemed at the prospect that every one knew was a coming match.

To Keep From Losing Breath.

Where respiration is rhythmic there is no loss of oxygen in taking fast, running uphill or going upstairs. The method of preventing breathlessness consists in maintaining the rhythm and the speed of respiration. When the breathing is rhythmic the breathing keeps pace with the step. The outbreathing must be twice the length of the inbreathing and not more than eighteen or twenty complete breath circuits must be made per minute.—Harper's Weekly.

Shibboleth.
Shibboleth, now taken as meaning the watchword or slogan of a particular sect or party, had its origin in the incident recorded in Judges 8:1-16, wherein the word shibboleth was used as a test by the Gileadites to detect their foes, the Ephraimites. The Ephraimites were unable to pronounce the combination sh, and when put to the test called the word "sibboleth," thus betraying their breed and giving away their cause.

Safe With Him.
"I'm going to tell you a great secret." "Yes?" "And I wouldn't have you tell anybody I told you for all the World." "You can trust me, I never told a secret yet. I've got such a good memory that I never remember who told me, nor what it was."

Many who have used the "EMERSON" and other makes pronounce the "EMERSON" superior to any $100 typewriter on the market. It is a wholly visible machine, has every new, up-to-date feature, looks like other high grade $100 typewriters, though it is selling just now at an astonishingly low price and on terms of no money with order, trial free in your own home. If you could possibly make any use of a high grade typewriter, even though it didn't cost you one cent of money, or if you would like the agency in your town on a plan by which you could make big money, or if you would like a position with the company, then be sure, or a postal card or in a letter addressed to "Frank L. Wilder, President, Woodstock, Illinois," say, "Mail me your Free Offer."
