MARRIAGE RESTRICTIONS.

In all the talk of restricting marriage to persons of sound bodily and mental health, the barringtoners have been so serious in their suggestion of making the persons who perform the ceremony or issue the license the judges of whether or not the candidate for marriage come up to requirements. It remains for a member of the Ontario legislature to put his ideas along that line into the form of a legislative bill. He proposes that no minister or other person authorized to perform the marriage ceremony shall do so in case he suspects that one of the applicants is insane or intoxicated, and an official charged with the duty of issuing marriage licenses shall do so in such cases, says the Buffalo Express. If they do, they will be liable to a fine of $500 for each offense, and may possibly go to jail for a year. The question arises all at once, what clerk will issue a license or what minister will marry a couple in these circumstances? And why should these laymen be required to judge of a person's bodily or mental condition? Why should not that left to experts in the first place? A way out of the situation is provided, however, for if the licensee has any doubts as to the eligibility of the applicants he may require a physician's certificate.

Bishop Anderson of Chicago, supported by a goodly array of pastors in other cities, has declared that the church should not celebrate marriage unless the intending bride and groom bring certificates of health and sanity. A Boston lady, the Rev. Miss B. Williams, now proposes to subject the candidate to three other tests which will require the church to take of a fiancée that the man is able to support a wife; that one from a housekeeper that the woman is able to take charge of a household, and finally she would have evidence that the pair are supplied with "love immortal and divine" which will render things glorious in their lives, says the New York World. These are hard rules. No man ever lived that was perfectly healthy and sane in the opinion of a physician. No young man was ever deemed quite competent to attend to business by an old financier. No young woman was ever adjudged a good housekeeper by a couple of grandmothers. And who shall give assurance of the love immortal and divine?

Two more theaters are to be built in New York, in spite of the complaints of the managers that all of the theaters are losing money. We have not learned whether the builders of the new theaters are trying to be philanthropists or whether it is their belief that the only way in which one may get a seat in a New York theater without paying an exorbitant price is to take a walk in to build one's own theater.

A learned judge holds that a woman has a right to go through her husband's pockets. Possibly the judge does not realize that woman has exercised that right ever since man began to wear clothes.

"A Massachusetts chicken fancier finds a dime in each of four eggs." It looks as though the men who fix the price of eggs have hired a press agent.

The man who says nothing is sometimes surprised to find how popular he is.

Wild West Show Coming.
Tiger Bill's Wild West show and Indian village will show in Barrington Thursday, June 27, at the ball ground. The show will have for attractions "The Stage Riders," "The Fight at the Water Hole" and many other interesting women scenes. If you want to see good riding, shooting and roping don't fail to see this show.

Our Dick Canees July 8.
The Owl club will give a dance in the village hall July 8. A general ticket. Women's organizations of Barrington will furnish music. Dance tickets 10 cents, sponsors 25 cents. The public is cordially invited to attend.

Safe Blown at Lake Zurich.
A safe in the office of Plagge Bros. & Company at Lake Zurich was dynamited at an early hour this morning. The burglars secured about $300 in currency and got away without leaving any clue as to their identity. It is said that the work appears to be that of amateurs and may prove to be a home-land.

Butter Prices Unchanged.
Butter remained at 25 cents on the board of trade Monday. There were no offerings and James Younger bid 25 1/2 cents.

The quotation committee fixed the price at 25 1/2 cents. The price was objected to by Thomas Gallagher and Fred Moles. On their motion it was fixed at 25 cents by a vote of 16 to 8.

Unclaimed Letters.
The following letters remain in the Barrington post-office unclaimed for the week ending June 22, 1912.

Lane Cooper
Mrs. Mark A. Handy
Albert LeBeige
Mrs. P. M. McFadden
Mr. Thos. Roche

H. K. BROCKWAY,
Post Master.

Special Notice.
The pipe-organ recital which was to have been given this evening at the Baptist church by Mrs. H. C. Miller of Chicago was postponed until the second Thursday in July when Dr. H. C. Miller, the organist's husband, and a fine bass soloist can be present and take part in the program.

Satisfactory Bargains

Celia had chosen the suburb of Kew as a splendid place for her experiment in advertising. It was not far from town and the houses seemed to be of a more or less distinctive character.

"The people there no doubt would appreciate artistic interiors," argued Celia as she boarded the train.

The train was crowded. "They are always crowded," was her comment as she trailed through the car looking for a seat. If she could not find an unoccupied seat Celia always chose to sit beside a man. "They usually sit quiet and read their papers," she reminded as she sat down beside a good-looking man, who though ample of frame, did not occupy more than half of the seat.

He scarcely looked up when Celia slipped quietly down beside him. His eyes when the train had pulled out of the tunnel swept in every vestige of the passing landscape.

Once or twice he sat up quickly and peered at some vanishing scene and once his arm touched her shoulder. Celia drew into her corner of the seat. The young man evidently mistook her drawing away for nervousness and after apologizing with exaggerated politeness he returned to a more frigid contemplation of things passing.

Celia felt a certain relief when the train pulled in at Kew. Nor did she observe, in her hurried exit that the young man also had left the train.

Had she known it would not have mattered now for Celia's mind was intent on looking for an old house that would seem lost to all chance of ever having another occupant.

She strolled about and began to fear that there were no old houses in Kew and that she would have to try another suburb. She turned a corner and there! A lovely old haunted-looking house lay in the midst of a hopelessly dilapidated garden.

Celia drew a breath of joy. The sign that bore the agent's name was almost a thing of the past, but Celia managed by dint of close scrutiny to make out the name of an agent in Kew.

She peered into the big rambling rooms within and another breath of joy escaped her. Genius lurked in Celia's eyes. She knew that with the aid of the content of the contents she could turn the inside of that old house into a veritable dream of beauty. She cast a regretful glance at the unkempt garden and shook her head.

"My house will have to shine like a jewel if I want people to see it through this awful run of grounds." But her spirits were in no way dampened by the outlook, but she had her dreams about landscape gardening that would set off the house.

Once within the tiny office of the agent, Celia made known her desires.

"There is an old tumble-down house down there," She pointed her finger in the direction whose she had come. "I want you to let me make over the interior of my own expense." Celia smiled upon the agent.

"I am sorry," he said, and really felt so, "but a chap has only ten minutes to visit his former preserve, and detected a man skulking along under the trees with a large bag on his back. The Puritan was so severely reproached that there could be no more damage if there was no more rabbits, had thought it advisable to re-stock the warren."

Explained.
"What have you got in the pocket, Harry?"
"I know it was too small to be your pocket."

sitting on a garden bench making a mental picture of the ruined garden. He looked up, a trace of annoyance on his face.

"Oh," said Celia and dropped back. The young man was her companion of the train. He stood up, his hat in his hand.

But Celia was not going to miss this great opportunity to advertise her work. She gathered courage and a great amount of alacrity into her voice.

"I beg your pardon, but will it interfere with you in any way if I decorate the interior of this house?" A big color had mounted her cheeks, and it angered her to see this man smilingly appreciate it.

"Not in the least," he told her, generally. "In fact, I was regretting the dilapidated condition of the house. It would be a fearful center for my beautiful gardens."

Celia repressed a smile and inwardly admired his confidence.

"Thank you," she said, a trifle less coldly. "I wish you success," she added, turned toward the house.

"The same to you," he called after her and turned to his plans.

Weeks sped swiftly by. Out of the ruin and neglect of years a house that promised well for the future was in rapid development. Already people passing in great motor cars slowed up as they drew near, and many got out to investigate the artistic property.

The spirit of antagonism that had sprung up between them on the suburban train seemed only to grow in proportion to the progress made of the gardens a coming show place of Kew, and Celia Roane made of the interior a home that many prospective buyers inspected.

Celia, from behind the soft art blinds in the windows, looked out at the big man in the gardens. Each day about that many hours looking at the beautiful flower kingdom that he had created, and always she tried to carry out a sense of harmony in her own work to match his.

Prospective buyers came daily to inspect the property, and as each one left Celia heaved a sigh of relief. It had begun to hurt her—this showing of people through the house that she had created, and always she tried to carry out a sense of harmony in her own work to match his.

"I don't care," she thought, "I don't care if the landscape gardener felt the same jealousy regarding the place. Since the could have sworn that she saw him turn away an artocratic couple who stopped at the great entrance. Celia smiled in her heart and resolved to go down in person and ask Tom Gaynor to come and look at her work. He had not so much as cast a glance in her direction during his long weeks of close proximity.
