THE DECREASE OF DOCTORS.

A Boston physician is quoted as saying that the people's health is improving and the doctors are starving. He adds that "if the doctors keep on decreasing to numbers as fast in the next 25 years as they have in the past 25 there will not be many left." The doctors, like the poor, will be "few and far between." For do what we may to promote health and to avoid disease there are times necessarily when the physician's services are required. Probably if everybody took the trouble to keep his house in sanitary order and guarded himself against illness and maladies to the best of his ability the most of the doctors soon would be looking for a different sort of a job. But the average man does not do these things, says the Louisville Courier-Journal. The doctors themselves preach prevention and the campaign for better health never ceases from one end of the country to the other, but there are millions of people who do not get interested. The doctors, the boards of health and the sanitary engineers are working constantly for better health conditions and there is improvement almost everywhere, but the results achieved would be infinitely greater and more rapid if the general public could be awakened to the importance of co-operating in the work.

This country is so big and has such wealth and vast agricultural resources that it is never safe to let anything much about the harvests of a year unless they come. It is easy to exaggerate the effect upon the country of serious damage to one crop in one locality, or even in a group of states. For example, the talk of a shortage in the wheat crop may produce altogether premature and misleading, says the Cleveland Leader. Nothing whatever can be known about spring wheat for the present, and the winter wheat situation differs widely in different parts of the country. In Kansas, for one great wheat-growing state, the prospects are good for a yield nearly or quite double that of 1911. In Oklahoma, another important state on the wheat map, there is a notable change for the better by comparison with last year. Texas will have millions of bushels more than last year, and this state produced a year ago. Missouri promises an important gain over the figures for 1911. Such facts go far toward offsetting the widespread and serious damage done in Ohio and other states of the more northern winter wheat belt by the severe weather of January, February and March.

A court of domestic relations in Chicago has decided that a wife is not obliged "to follow her husband and hold out her hand like a monkey for money," but is entitled legal to her share of his means. This case will be regarded as an intellible assault upon sacred and vested rights by the class of husbands who think a wife has no use for money beyond carfare, and that while the wife does her part of the business of the domestic firm, the husband is the only one entitled to handle the cash.

A St. Louis woman testified in a divorce suit that her husband "pelted her with money, compelled her to spend $1,000 a week in clothes alone, and that she could not count all the money he gave her. And yet she was not satisfied. It may be remembered that some time ago another woman wanted a divorce because her husband was too perfect. The unrest among women of which one hears so much must have a queer twist in it.

A Chicago authority blames fault for the spread of tuberculosis. If the agitation keeps on, sooner or later some form of retribution will fall upon these false and faithless household servants who, down the centuries, have been an influence on a single floor with pocketfuls of meals. Justice is slipping her bandage off.

King George has proved his courage by going down in a submarine. But it's not the king's courage that the news is saying that he doesn't dare put a bit of pencil at a court reporter's pen.

PROTESTING AGAINST NOISE.

There is to be an international otological congress at the Harvard Medical School next August, which will be attended by 500 distinguished physicians and "savants from all over the world. One of the prominent topics will be the suppression of noise. It is contended, says the prospectus of this meeting, that the hustle and bustle of city life, the tooting of whistles, the roar of trains and other noises are taking their toll from the health of the community. The ear is said to be abnormal and diseased, the sensitive mechanism of hearing, in an effort to exclude the never-ending annoyance, is thickening. Gradually the roar of the city works upon the nerves and brain, producing irritation and exhaustion. Nervous prostration, a disease of the city, is the result. Deafness, another, and suffering to the weak and convalescent still another. The more noise a community has the closer it is to barbarism, says the Ohio State Journal. A man has a natural right to the quiet of the air. Any favor of the right, except it be for the general welfare, shows a lack of civilization. The idea of permitting a man to annoy a whole street by crying some ware, or a railroad train awakening a community by puffing through it after midnight, or a trolley car crashing through a ragged switch, disturbing a whole neighborhood, or a great autovan rumbling along a residence avenue, burring every home in its noise—these and more like them are uncivilized practices and are allowed because the rights of some are not yet recognized.

Some Iowa farmers advocate pigs as antidotes for dandelions. Just fence in your lawn and turn a pig inside, they say, and the dandelions will soon be gone. No doubt, but what about the lawn? "Pigs in clover" is a well-known phrase, for morning machines are heavy enough to trample hog-wallowd ground, but the ordinary lawn mower would make slow progress over a thoroughly footed field. The pigs, we are assured, will go after the dandelions in earnest, because they like them; they will not merely nibble off the tops, but roll down into the soil and get the roots. That sounds like a good thing. But after getting all the roots of the dandelions what then? Possibly a well-manured pig would not molest the grass, but all pigs are not well-manured. Bastes, or any ordinance, are so esthetic regarding the matter of pig culture in front lawns that the Omaha Bee. It may be over-much skepticism, but somehow there is an ill odor of suspicion about this pig scheme making good.

The New York Telephone Company has given twenty of its office men outside work as solicitors, and has supplied the vacancies created in their former positions by engaging women. They will be known as cashiers. Their business is to hand the large sums of nickels, dimes and quarters which reach the offices of the company from pay stations in different parts of the city. It is safe by officials of the company that they have found women seem to be getting the best of the yield to temptation than men in handling cash. And yet there are men who assert that women have no sense of business honor.

Louisville is the nickel town of the country. No case is on record of a man or woman who has been fined less than $1 and giving a larger amount than the cost of the purchase that the shopkeeper didn't include several nickels in the change. If you trip around town shopping you'll find your pockets full of 5-cent pieces until you take your car to the victim of a conspiracy until a native tells you it's a habit the town can't shake.

A New York young woman lost $205 through the breaking of that feminine receptacle of funds that seems to be getting more usual. With this arouse a demand for government guarantee of deposits in the stock exchange.

Chicago authorities are asked to prohibit the rear seat on motorcycles on the grounds that it encourages "loose" riding. What gifted press agent for manufacturers of tandem motorcycles invented that glorious advertisement?

Taming of Rodney

When Rodney was 18 and developed such a violent and romantic passion for the blond little girl in the corner candy shop across the street, he was nights holding their distracted heads and bemoaning Rodney's fate, for they were positive that matrimony, and perhaps an elopement, would crown the affair.

The little candy girl thought so too, for when Rodney of a sudden calmly announced that everything was over between them she talked of a breach of promise suit after she had finished weeping and asking why he didn't love her any more. To the latter query Rodney had bent a stolid mind and had finally delivered the verdict that he was blessed if he knew. Apparently his affections came and went with the wind.

After that followed love affairs with a long series of girls. Finally Rodney's family became so accustomed to this sentimental state that they went right on with their usual three meals a day and paid no attention to it. If Rodney was not at the point where he had at last found the girl of his heart and everything was settled he was at the next point where of a sudden he had decided that it was all a mistake and he did not really care for that particular girl.

Finally he met Stella. She had paused for a few days in the city on her way to her home in San Francisco or Seattle or Reno or some point in the distant west. Rodney instantly fell a victim to her charms.

Stella was one of those girls who are so slim that you think them skinny until you observe that instead they are merely little and willowy. You think her only moderately good looking until you direct her face and conclude that there never before were black eyes quite so big, skin quite so white and fine and lips so clearly cut. As for her slow smile—well, that was positively irresistible.

Rodney rushed out to San Francisco or Seattle or Reno or wherever it was, just two weeks after Stella left. He said he had loved her and he had. His business was to fall still more deeply in love with Stella. Soon there came a day when, loitering under the trellised arbor in her yard, he told her how he felt and that he wanted her to marry him.

There is no reason to blame Stella for liking him, because Rodney is eminently likable and his wooing had been spectacular and therefore attractive. She said yes—and Rodney departed on his arm, because he simply had to go back home.

The next morning Stella got a telegram from him, sent from the train on which he was speeding eastward. It read: "Consider it all a mistake and at an end. An miserable. Will write you by the time the starved Stella had got Rodney's explanatory letter and perused it and completely failed to understand it. Rodney had discovered to his alarm that he did not experience his usual elation, at being free from an entanglement. He had a heavy heart and a yearning which he finally figured out was a desire to see Stella again. He really loved her!

Expense not having to be considered by Rodney, he traveled back to the coast and metaphorically cast himself at Stella's feet. Stella smiled her slow, sweet smile, regarded him musically and then practically summoned the gardener to sweep him out with the other rubbish. Rodney went and sat by the sea after that and meditated upon death and raved at himself. Stella regularly hung up the receiver whenever she found him on the phone, so after a while he returned home, a blighted being. Everybody knew he was a blighted being because he made no secret of it.

Stella was his only thought and his sole conversational topic, till finally his family struck. They told him to clear out and go and marry Stella by main force or else fall in love with some one else before he returned home. So he hunted up Stella.

Rodney was very much in earnest and very desperate and he made Stella listen. Eventually she gathered his sentimental history from friends of hers who knew him well. But Stella was a wise girl and saw possibilities. "I'm going to take a chance that you mean what you say," Stella told him. "Anyhow I hope you do mean what you say, because I—well, I'm foolish enough to like you myself! I think I'll marry you after all."

"Today!" Rodney cried, jubilantly. "I should say not," said Stella, with decision. "I'm going to give myself six months to change my own mind." The six months during which Rodney was on pins and needles for fear she would suddenly and definitely throw him overboard did him a lot of good. He was a reformed character when his wedding day arrived. You would have thought that he had never known there was another girl on earth had you seen the way he gazed at his wife.

He isn't quite sure even yet that she won't change her mind.—Chicago Daily News.

 Vegetable fibre, or chin vegetal, is made from leaves of a dwarf palm (Chamaecyparis humilis), which clings to the soil tenaciously. World's Debt to Writers.

It was a French news writer that wrote: "Suffer yourselves to be hanged if need be, but publish your opinions!" but in this country writers in early times faced imprisonment and the pillory again and again in order to make their views public; and whatever those may have been, it must be conceded that they deserve credit for courage, at least, in having laid the foundation of that freedom which the press of this country enjoys.—London Globe.

NEW PARTY NAMES FUNK AS LEADER

Bloomington Senator Nominated for Governor by Progressives.

COL. ROOSEVELT IS INDORSED

Recall Initiative, Direct Election of Senators, Anti-Pass Law, Woman Suffrage Among Planks of Platform Adopted.

Chicago, Aug. 5.—Frank H. Funk of Bloomington, state senator, was put forward as the gubernatorial candidate of the new Progressive party Saturday. The new party's convention began at 11 o'clock in the morning and took its final adjournment at 11:15 Sunday morning.

No trouble arose over the question of a third ticket, as every delegate admitted to the convention had signed a pledge to support the ticket.

The other nominees were as follows:

Lieutenant Governor—Judge Dean Franklin, Macomb.

Attorney General—Fletcher Dobyns, Chicago.

Treasurer—Philip Decker, Murgersboro.

Auditor—Edwin Winter, Danville.

Secretary of State—Edward O. Peterson, Aurora.

For trustees of the University of Illinois B. F. Harris of Champaign, Mrs. Raymond Robbins of Chicago and Frederick L. Hays of Springfield, the present president of the board.

The delegates at large are Miss Jane Adams of Chicago, Mary J. Wilmarth of Chicago, C. D. Thomas of Champaign, Frank H. Funk of Bloomington, Medill McCormick of Chicago, La Verne W. Noyes of Chicago and John F. Bass of Chicago.

Form of Pledge Adopted.

The pledge required of all delegates admitted to the convention read:

"We, the undersigned, hereby subscribe to the calls for the national and state Progressive party convention and pledge ourselves to support in the election next November the candidates of the Progressive party in state and national and the platform adopted by the party in state and national convention assembled."

On the recommendation of the credentials committee the convention then drew out John Boyle of Springfield, a delegate who refused to sign the pledge.

David Morrison was seated in place of the ousted delegate.

Dr. Thomas A. Russell, a delegate from the Twentieth ward in Chicago, was ejected bodily from the hall when he made objection to the report of the rules committee.

Dr. John Boyle of Springfield was forcibly ejected from the convention hall after creating a disturbance on the speakers' platform. Attempts on the part of his friends to quiet him were in vain and he was finally put out by the police.

Merriam Sounds Keynote.

The keynote of the convention and of the campaign to be conducted by the new party in Illinois was sounded by Charles E. Merriam, the temporary chairman. He outlined a program of reform legislation and urged the need of the third party ticket.

At the conclusion of his speech Mr. Merriam read a telegram from Colonel Roosevelt, addressed to Medill McCormick.

The Roosevelt telegram follows:

"Through you I wish to express all good wishes to the Illinois Progressives in convention assembled. I wish also to congratulate the Illinois Progressives on their stand for a third ticket."

"This is the course that I am most happy to say has been decided upon in Indiana, Michigan and Missouri, and I believe that the course that we are taking here is the only one that will win us the victory."

"I am sure that the conditions render it unnecessary, I am frankly convinced that it is the course that must necessarily be followed and certainly in all cases unless there is a ticket already in the field which the Progressives are willing to endorse, and the nominees which are open and without equivocation in favor of the Progressive electoral ticket."

"We are engaged in a great movement. It is only through the new Progressive party that we can hope to get our people really to face the vital issues of today. The two old party machines are both corrupt and incompetent and we cannot hope to secure from them any sincere and resolute attempt to solve the problems most pressing for solution by our people."

ones is certain—not merely ultimately—but at once.

Roosevelt is indorsed.

Besides naming a third ticket the convention indorsed Roosevelt for president, nominated twenty-nine candidates for presidential electors, named fifty-eight delegates to the national convention and elected a new state committee.

C. R. Hendricks of Henderson county was temporary secretary of the convention. Arthur L. Curvey of Chicago was permanent chairman and John L. Hamilton of Hooperston was permanent secretary. Charles Ringasked as temporary and permanent secretaries-at-large.

The convention occupied the entire day. Orchestra hall was filled to the topmost gallery. The delegates numbered 1,100. More than 1,000 spectators were in attendance.

Miss Jane Adams and other women prominent in civic affairs occupied boxes.

Cheers for the Colonel.

Mention of Theodore Roosevelt's name variably aroused cheers and applause. At the opening of the convention the former president was cheered for seven minutes.

The signal for applause for Colonel Roosevelt was given when two United States flags were drawn aside at the back of the stage, revealing a photograph of the former president, bordered by red, white and blue lights.

The lights in other parts of the hall were turned out while the demonstration continued. Delegation stands were waved aloft. Band-dance handkerchiefs, the emblem of the new party, were much in evidence.

Funk's Vote Unanimous.

Senator Funk's nomination was made by acclamation, although the estimated 14,575 years. Of course the coal demands of Canada will keep on increasing, but it will be a good many years before the quantity of coal mined will equal the present output of the United States. Their annual output is about 600,000,000 tons. At that rate it would take only 145 years to exhaust the estimated Canadian supply of good coal, and about 350 years to get to the end of the total supply. With the increasing population, made up of about four hundred thousand a year (and it looks now as if this number would be reached this year), the coal demands of Canada will be about one hundred and seventy-five thousand tons a year.

The roll was called, but when DeKalb county was reached Captain W. H. Fram of Will county withdrew the name of Mr. Eaton and moved that the nomination of Senator Funk be made unanimous. The motion was carried amid great applause.

When the roll call was stopped Funk had received 47 votes, while Eaton had only 62.

The name of Senator Funk was placed before the convention by B. O. Aylesworth of Cass county. Seconding speeches were made by Senator Walter Clyde Jones of Chicago and Senator E. D. Telford of Marion county.

Mr. Eaton was nominated by Capt. William H. Fram, Rev. Duran C. Miller seconded the nomination.

After the vote Senator Funk was escorted to the platform and made a brief speech of acceptance.

Platform of New Party.

The platform adopted by the convention defines at the outset the object of the new party.

"The national Progressive party," it declares, "is the expression of the determination of the people to take back their government into their own hands. No close observer of industrial and political conditions in Illinois can doubt the compelling necessity for the formation in this state of such a party."

Republican and Democratic bosses have created the will of the party with contempt for years the platform declares.

The principal reforms to which the new party pledges itself are:

The initiative, referendum and recall.

Change in judicial procedure to insure the speedy administration of justice.

The short ballot.

Direct election of United States senators.

A corrupt practices act.

An anti-pass law and an anti-trust law.

Greater latitude in amending the state constitution.

Would Alter Primary Law.

Amendment of the primary law so that a voter need not reveal his party affiliation.

First and second choice system in voting for candidates at primary.

Direct election by people of delegates to national conventions.

Full public control over all public utility corporations.

Substitution of state tax commission for state board of equalization.

State supervision of all banks and trust companies not under federal organization.

Establishment of state industrial commission to make recommendations on wages, hours and working conditions and determine minimum wage standards for working women.

Compulsory Eight-Hour Law.

Compulsory eight-hour law in all continuous twenty-four-hour day industries.

Legislation of state farm for orphans and state colony for epileptics.

An adequate state housing law.

Passage of a city planning act.

Legislation to insure adequate crews for all railroad trains.

Full enfranchisement of women.

Mixed.

"Pa, I heard 'em say something about the buzzer going in your office."

"Well, son."

"Is that the kind that eats grandpa's chicken?"

Recognition of Genius.

"The great discoverer of our continent was not honored as he should have been during his lifetime."

"No, America is the country that discovered Columbus."

Canada Has Sufficient Coal for 6000 Years

It Has Enough Agricultural Land for the Settlement of Millions.

A report dealing with the coal resources of Canada has been issued by the Dominion Department of Mines.

The estimates given are only based on what is known. In the western and northern regions, which have been little explored, there may be vast deposits of what nothing whatever is known at present.

The department estimates that of bituminous coal there is in Canada 734,100,000 tons; of anthracite 461,100,000 tons; and of lignite over 100,000,000 tons.

The quantity of coal now annually mined in Canada is about 12 million tons. With an estimated quantity of unmined good coal of 74 billion tons, it would require 6,166 years to exhaust the supply.

If the inferior grades were included, supply would last for 14,575 years. Of course the coal demands of Canada will keep on increasing, but it will be a good many years before the quantity of coal mined will equal the present output of the United States.

Their annual output is about 600,000,000 tons. At that rate it would take only 145 years to exhaust the estimated Canadian supply of good coal, and about 350 years to get to the end of the total supply.

With the increasing population, made up of about four hundred thousand a year (and it looks now as if this number would be reached this year), the coal demands of Canada will be about one hundred and seventy-five thousand tons a year.

The opening up of this rich field of agriculture, carried on by the use of brain, and, where energy has not been expended, it has become in a splendid air a case of inoculated energy.

The rapid advancement of railways makes the situation easy. Today one may be located thirty miles from one of the many branches of the different systems. A year from now, the whistle of the locomotive and the long train of cars may pass the farm, the elevator is but a short drive from the home, a splendid market is established, and all the advantages of an old settled community are at hand.

The prospects this year from an agricultural standpoint are exceedingly bright, and, relieved of untoward conditions, the continent has there been a successful crop, will add to its assets. Already some fields of wheat have been harvested, the barley is already cut, and the yield is above its expectation. In fact, the feeling at the time of writing is that never in the history of this country has there been such a large area of crop, all over the three central provinces of Canada, as will be harvested this year.

The tablecloth is becoming a thing of rare beauty and some of the new ones are lovely enough, with their wealth of lace and hand embroidery, to be used for a lingerie gown.

For the round table the linen covers only the top, a 14-inch border of elusively hanging bellow. This same lace is inserted in the center of the cloth and takes the place of the usual centerpiece.

For the luncheon set color is being introduced. Luncheon embroidered in natural tints upon heavy Irish linen gives a charming new touch. These, as a rule, include a large centerpiece and a dozen dotted centerpieces.

The petals of the flowers are done with very thick, fluffy floss and the embroidery can be finished in a very short time.

Other pretty luncheon sets are made of finer linen, the dollies being cut in squares instead of round, while the new punch work and a very little lace French embroidery are introduced.

For breakfast the table linen is much plainer, and these sets include the cloth and a dozen small napkins.

Dark and light colors are very attractive, while others are of linen crash embroidered in cross-stitch.

All of these are comparatively expensive when bought in the shops, but the housewife who has several idle hours during the day can with a slight expense and little trouble give her table linen a distinctive air.

Health Plum Pudding.

Two cups best Graham flour, sifted and then measured. Mix with half a teaspoon of salt, one-half teaspoon of soda and one teaspoon of baking powder, one cup of nuts (either almonds, English walnuts or pecans), a cup of raisins, a cup of milk and one-half cup of molasses. Wash, seed and dry the raisins and four them lightly. Slice or chop the nuts fine, then add molasses and quickly add raisins and nuts; mix thoroughly again. Butter pudding mold, turn in the batter and boil three hours. Serve with lemon sauce.

To Wash Blue Duck.

To wash the child's blue duck suit, shake it free of all outer dirt, then immerse in cold water containing a little in proportion of a tablespoonful to a gallon of water. Let the garment get almost dry, drying it in the shade; then wash it quickly in tepid water, using borax soap, or if you have not this, use a very little pure white soap wherever necessary to remove the dirt, and add a little borax to the wash water. Rinse well, dry in the sun, and iron while still damp, or at least not thoroughly dry.

Seeded Grape Pie.

Take your grapes, pulp them, set aside the skins, bring the pulp to a boil slowly, then press through a sieve, mix with the skins. Take a cup of sugar, mix two tablespoonfuls of flour, put with your seeded grapes, add a lump of butter. Have a nice, rich pie crust; line your pan with it, put in grapes, then your top crust. Cut holes in it to allow the steam to escape. Brush the top with melted butter; bake in a hot oven to a golden brown. Serve a little warm with coffee.

The Dairies Help the Farmer in Western Canada.

being an estimate of the immigration from the United States for 1912, the consumption of coal will naturally increase.

The agricultural districts of Canada have now become so well known throughout the world, and the vacant area of splendid land is still so great that it may be expected that the numbers mentioned will be increased from year to year, and it will not be many years before the immigration figures will reach the million mark.

It may be introduced in there to warrant this large immigration? With millions of acres of land, capable of producing twenty-five to forty bushels of wheat to the acre, or, if in oats from forty to sixty, and even as high as a hundred bushels per acre, or the same splendid yields of flax or barley, the arable industry is so attractive these hundreds of thousands who are filling the present agricultural settlements and pushing forward into the newer settlements year by year, and leave room still for the hundreds of thousands who will follow. There remains not only the agricultural wealth of the country, but there are also the social advantages, the home-making privileges, apart altogether from the financial opportunities, there is the life and the energy born from the knowledge that the settler is more than a unit in the upbuilding, in the making of a country that will soon rank amongst the first in the nations of the world. There is no desire on the part of the writer to dwell upon the success that has followed the American settler in the Provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta and the coast Province of British Columbia, or to speak of the thousands of individuals whose hundreds of dollars have made them thousands, but attention must be paid to the fact that these people have done well. They are followed by their families and their friends, and the country is being built up.

Where, a few years ago, seemingly only months ago, there was nothing but the open prairie, or if we speak of the more central portions of the provinces, the parts districts, there are today well tilled and cultivated farms, large farms, too, and the herds of cattle. Cities and towns are the result of this.

Uniforms and Diplomacy.

The gasettes have announced that the emperor of Germany has decided to name Mon. de Kideries-Wascheter major of the Seventy-first Thüringian Infantry. To please his august master, the minister sometimes wears his uniform, but in it he gives no illusion of elegance. The other day, to console himself, he said: "I believe my colleague, Mr. Poincaré (the French ambassador) would appear more ridiculous than I do if he were obliged to dress as an artist."

Prince von Buelow, who is colonel of the Hussars, rode in the grand review at the head of his regiment. Some years ago, at Strasbourg, the emperor remarked some squadrons that were moving of this year. The railroads are adding to their already large mileage and have got ready for handling the crop thousands of box cars. The government agents and the railways are making arrangements for from fifty to sixty thousand extra farm hands in order that the crop may be successfully and quickly harvested, business men are laying in larger stocks than usual, real estate men are active, preparing for the rush of business that is sure to follow, and everywhere there is the note of optimism, which seems to be perfectly justified.

There is, as has been said, a vast area of the country still open for settlement and homesteading lying in the center north. Speaking of this part a writer who made the trip when the war was in its green stage, said:

"I will now, the whole country is a beautiful sight, as it presents itself a full dress of living green, varied in shade, many places elegantly fringed and interspersed with plantations of shrubbery and patches of sweet acacia, flowers in rose, yellow, white, pink, scarlet, cardinal and purple. In traveling over the virgin soil, I have seen the most charming rolling prairies, sloping hills, deep ravines, mirrored lakes, artistic flower fields, and natural parks that one could wish to be a part of."

The land in general is heavily matted with grass, mixed with vetches and pea vines, nearly up to the knee, and many millions of acres of which are going to waste while beef, pork and mutton are scarce at prices before unobtainable. The comparatively small acreage under cultivation reminds one of a few small garden patches.

"When we consider the estimated crop of 800,000,000 bushels of wheat or its equivalent on these rolling prairies from these garden patches, some faint idea can be formed by an imaginative mind as to the immense possibilities and rich heritage of a glorious western Canada."

The estimate of the wheat crop, as made by the writer quoted, is excessive, but with even 500 million bushels, there will be a great deal of satisfaction on the part of the settlers.

COOKING PEAS AND CARROTS

Many Ways of Preparation to Suit the Individual Taste—Peas Served in Turnip Shells.

One way of preparing peas, and for my own taste there is none better: Blend together two tablespoonfuls of butter and one tablespoonful of flour; one-half teaspoonful of salt and a little pepper, for each pint of peas. When the peas are soft, stir this into the peas and cook five minutes. In preparing them in that way all the flavor and nutritive value of the peas are retained. The care that there is not too much water; there should be only enough to cook the peas in, which is scarcely enough to cover them.

To Cook Young Carrots.—Wash and scrape the carrots, and cut in quarters lengthwise; then holding the quarters together place on a board and cut crosswise through the four quarters in one-half inch slices. Boil twenty minutes or until soft in just enough water to cover. They are very nice prepared by the same recipe given for peas; and just before serving add two teaspoonfuls of parsley finely minced to each pint of carrots.

Peas and Carrots.—One cup of carrots cut in small pieces as stated and two cups of shelled peas. Cook the carrots and peas together until soft. Drain; add four tablespoonfuls of cream and one tablespoonful of butter. Season with salt and pepper. Heat over hot water and serve as soon as hot.

Peas Served in Turnip Shells.—"Use the flat turnips for this dish and choose them near of a size. Wash and pare the turnips and with a sharp knife scoop out the center, leaving a shell one-half inch thick. Steam the turnips and be careful not to overcook them or they will fall to pieces. Put a folded napkin in the serving dish and place the turnips in it; shake a little salt and pepper over them, and fill with cooked peas which have been seasoned with salt, butter, and pepper. Do not waste the turnip which was scooped out, but cook and mash it and reserve for another meal."

WHERE DOCTORS FAILED TO HELP

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored Mrs. Green's Health—Her Own Statement.

Covington, Mo.—"Your medicine has done me more good than all the doctor's medicines. At every monthly period I had to stay in bed four days because of hemorrhages, and my back was so weak I could hardly walk. I have been taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and now I can stay up and do my work. I think it is the best medicine on earth for women."

How Mrs. Cline Avoided

Brownsville, Ind.—"I can say that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done me more good than anything else. One doctor said I must be operated upon for a serious female trouble and that nothing could help me but an operation."

"I had hemorrhages and at times could not get any medicine to stop them. I got in such a weak condition that I would have died if I had not got relief soon."

"Several women who had taken your Compound, told me to try it and I did and found it to be the right medicine to build up the system and overcome female troubles."

"I am now in great deal better health than I ever expected to be, so I think I ought to thank you for it."—Mrs. O. M. Cline, S. Main St., Brownsville, Ind.
