FINANCIAL DEAL IN DETAIL

Henry Clay Pierce on Witness Stand Asserts That Senator Joseph Bailey Was the Recipient of Securities as Assignee.

St. Louis, April 28.—Testifying here Friday before Special Commissioner Muench in the suit of the National Bank of Commerce to recover from him securities alleged to be worth $1,500,000, Henry Clay Pierce told how he had become involved in the Tennessee Central railway deal to the extent of nearly $7,000,000 through financial transactions engineered by officers of the bank. He blamed his entanglement mainly on what he termed a "mistake of confidence" in the late J. C. Van Blarcom, president of the bank.

Pierce testified regarding the connection of former Senator Joseph Bailey of Texas, that it was his understanding that the $1,500,000 stock of the Nashville Terminal company, which the National Bank of Commerce sought to recover, was turned over to United States Senator Joseph W. Bailey of Texas, as assignee of the Tennessee Construction company, after the loss for which was pledged had been paid.

He said: "In 1901 or 1902, I was forced into a larger interest in the Tennessee Central enterprise than any other individual subscribers to the syndicate, when my son-in-law, Richard, in my absence and without my knowledge, signed my name to a guarantee to buy $1,000,000 of the first mortgage bonds of the railway. Since the collapse of the syndicate it has been necessary for me to advance over $4,000,000 in cash to the Tennessee Central railway to pay its expenses."

"After the syndicate collapsed, Senator Joseph W. Bailey of Texas, was made the assignee of the Tennessee Construction company and all of its properties were turned over to him. He was authorized to take charge of the affairs of the company and wind them up."

"Senator Bailey sold over $4,000,000 worth of property of the company, and it was my understanding that from the sale of these properties the loan at the Bank of Commerce, for which the Nashville Terminal stock was pledged, was paid, and that the stock then went back to Bailey as assignee for the construction company."

"The stock was later pledged to the Standard Trust company of New York by Senator Bailey, and remained for three years. It was finally delivered to me by Richard on my order, and the trust company had notified me that it had no further claim to it."

Montenegrin Army Marches Northward After Partially Evacuating Scutari.

London, April 30.—The mystery surrounding events in the Balkans is becoming deeper. No further news has been received of Essad Pasha's exploit in Albania and the situation at Saloniki is difficult to understand. A dispatch from Saloniki of current date confirms the report that orders were given for the Bulgarians to evacuate all places occupied by the Greeks, but that later these orders were countermanded and that official statements were made to pretend they were never given. A Bucharest dispatch to the Daily Telegraph expressed the firm conviction that immediately peace is signed between the allies and Turkey a new war will commence between Serbia, Bulgaria and Greece.

Austrian troops are moving towards the Montenegrin frontier where 80,000 are already assembled, while the greater part of the Montenegrin forces have left Scutari for the north apparently to oppose the Austrian advance.

Miss Borden is said to be in a highly nervous state caused by her experiences since her dramatic escape from the sanitarium at Pompton, N. J., and her flight to this city. Miss Borden was located at a hotel where she was staying with two girls and was asked to return to her father. She promptly consented. Mr. Borden was waiting for the girl when she arrived. Later it was said that the reconciliation was complete.

A person authorized to speak for Mr. Borden said: "Mr. Borden's daughter has been restored to him by the ill advised and foolish persons who attempted her escape. He has authority. The case is simply that of an undisciplined girl who found the study in discipline her father had laid out for her disastrous."

AUSTRIA'S LAST SAY

FRANCIS JOSEPH GIVES MONTE-NEGRO 24 HOURS TO EVACUATE SCUTARI.

60,000 SOLDIERS ARE READY

Troops Are Massed Along the Montenegrin Frontier Awaiting Outcome of Ultimatum—Diplomats Regard Situation as Acutely Serious.

London, May 1.—Wednesday morning Austria-Hungary delivered a two-four-hour ultimatum to Montenegro, commanding King Nicholas to surrender and evacuate Scutari by Thursday. If this is not complied with Austria will immediately declare war against Montenegro and begin the movement of troops across the Albanian and Montenegrin frontiers. This decision was semi-officially announced Tuesday night in Vienna by Count von Berchtold, foreign minister, following his two-hour conference with Emperor Francis Joseph.

Austria's decision to take immediate independent action was announced in the following official dispatch received in London. "Austria-Hungary, finding that the ambassador's conference produced no results, has decided to take matters in her own hands and carry out the decision of the powers that Scutari must be evacuated."

Upon receipt of this message Sir Edward Grey, British secretary of State, called a hurried meeting of the foreign ambassadors. "It was learned also that Italy has made a strong protest in Vienna against Austria acting alone against King Nicholas and that during the day Italy has brought much pressure to bear upon Montenegro to induce King Nicholas to surrender Scutari. Dispatches from Vienna show that no effort has been made during the day to disguise the seriousness of the situation in Vienna. The aged emperor, Francis Joseph, has declared that Europe has forced him to go to war. The government is known to be making preparations for a real war. Everywhere throughout the empire troops are on the move. Within another day more than 60,000 Austrian troops will be mobilized along the Montenegrin frontier."

In diplomatic circles here it is felt that Austria is firm in her demand that Scutari must be evacuated and it is not denied that this unexpected move has given a serious turn to the Balkan situation.

WILSON REAL PILOT

THIS IS "MOST PERSONAL" ADMINISTRATION THAT EVER HELD SWAY IN COUNTRY.

RULES WITH THE BIRCH ROD

Greater Legislative Acts of Present Congress Will Bear Name of President Rather Than Their Legislative Champions

By GEORGE CLINTON.
Washington.—It begins to look today as if all the greater legislative acts of the present congress will bear as titles the name of Wilson. If the Underwood tariff bill goes through both houses in the form in which it has been prepared, the Alabama reforestation bill will be eliminated from it by the public and it will be called the Wilson bill. Members of congress say this today, and they go much further by adding that the currency reform and anti-trust bills, no matter of what house or senate parentage, will bear the name of the man who today "rules" from the White House.

Senator Owen of Oklahoma, who is chairman of the new senate committee on banking and currency which will consider currency reform legislation, already is preparing for the day when he with his fellow Democratic committee members must meet the real pilot face to face in the president's room in the senate wing.

Democratic senators and representatives say that this is the "most personal" administration which ever held sway in the country. These same senators and representatives a few years ago objected, strongly to what they called the big stick methods of Theodore Roosevelt. Mr. Roosevelt, while big stick at a distance and got results. Mr. Wilson is taking the schoolmaster's way of close contact with his pupils and is using the birch rod in the privacy of the capitol lecture rooms.

Perhaps it is too rough a way to put it to say that the birch rod is being used for from all reports it would seem that the kindly persuasive method has been adopted by the president. In lectures a bit, it is said, and his theme is "The Duty to One's Country," although the theme has occasionally varied to "The Duty to One's Party."

President's Course Approved.
It is known in Washington that Mr. Wilson is getting hundreds of letters daily from all parts of the country upholding his "course of contact" with the senators and representatives. In the last ten years it has become apparent in Washington from the letters which have been received at the White House and at the capitol that the ordinary American citizen has come to believe that congress, the senate particularly, has been a law unto itself rather than a law unto the country.

When the president took congress and an attempt was made to rebuke him in return the White House received ten letters on commendation for its course. When the president received the house of representatives by the house of representatives.

This Democratic congress will undertake to revise the Sherman laws, to reform currency, to provide for efficiency and economy in the department service of the government, to pass some legislation looking to Philippine independence, to change the present course of conservation endeavor and to do some other things of high moment. On every one of these things Mr. Wilson has said something, and it is therefore granted here that he intends to say a good deal more when the proper time comes for the consideration of each piece of legislation. He will send messages certainly on currency reform, because he has said so, and probably on the other subjects. These messages it is not believed will be read in person, but it is thought that he will go to the capitol after bills have been prepared on each subject and sent to the proper committee, and that he will give to the Democratic majority of each committee at close range his views of what form the bills should take when presented to house and senate for majority consideration.

Will Cut Expenses.
Men close to the administration hint that the president wishes to have his administration go down into history as one which accomplished an actual saving to the government of $100,000,000 a year. It was the desire of Mr. Wilson's predecessor to office that history should record a saving of this amount to his administration, but Mr. Taft did not succeed in doing any more than building and starting the machine which may turn out this big piece of economy. His cabinet officers are advised, Mr. Wilson the credit for accomplishment, but give Mr. Taft the credit for making accomplishment possible, and the place of record in history is given to his administration and give Theodore Roosevelt a part of the initial credit.

During the last three administrations there were cabinet officers who were not given the credit for making accomplishment possible, and Mr. Taft did not succeed in doing any more than building and starting the machine which may turn out this big piece of economy. His cabinet officers are advised, Mr. Wilson the credit for accomplishment, but give Mr. Taft the credit for making accomplishment possible, and the place of record in history is given to his administration and give Theodore Roosevelt a part of the initial credit.

His cabinet officers are advised, Mr. Wilson the credit for accomplishment, but give Mr. Taft the credit for making accomplishment possible, and the place of record in history is given to his administration and give Theodore Roosevelt a part of the initial credit.

Frederick A. Cleveland, who is chairman of the commission on economy and efficiency, is in frequent conference with President Wilson. A year ago the Democratic majority in the house wanted to do away with the commission and its activities, but the wiser counsel of the leaders prevailed, and the three commissioners are working today as hard as they did during the previous administration. Mr. Wilson wants to save $100,000,000 a year, but it can be set down safely that he thinks it is possible this amount of the saving may be doubled.

Will Cut Revenues.
The Democratic tariff bill, if it passes congress and is signed by the president, in anything like its present form, will cut the yearly revenues of the government to an amount very nearly equal to that which has been set down as the president's desire to save by economy and efficiency in government. The income tax probably will more than make good the cut caused by the reduction in tariff rates, but if $100,000,000 could be saved the government could do away with its income taxation, if it chose, and still have a yearly income equal to that of the present year.

The economy and efficiency commission has survived many a storm, and it seems to be in fine condition today, but it may be in a very real sense the president of the United States. It is virtually assured that Mr. Wilson intends in a message to urge the adoption of a good many of the reforms which Mr. Cleveland and his associates on the economy and efficiency commission, Walter W. Warwick and Merritt O. Chance, have recommended. Some of the plans which have been suggested for economy and efficiency have ceased to worry anybody. The Democrats last year were made to believe, or at any rate seem to be, that the commission's plans were adopted thousands of men and women at work in Washington would lose their places, the government would be crippled, and that money could be saved only at the expense of efficiency.

The government clerks have learned that the plans of the commission, if adopted, will not mean loss of places, but very likely the creation of more places, the salaries of which will be paid out of the savings made while the government, using the surplus of the saving, can extend its beneficent operations into a good many fields which it has not yet entered.

Take Kindly to Economy Plan.
Representatives in congress who believe in public buildings for the home districts and who also believe in river and harbor improvements are more necessary than the people generally seem to be willing to admit, have been taking a good deal of pleasure in saving hundreds of millions without causing anybody to lose his job, and with the seeming certainty that the government's beneficent functions can be extended.

With $300,000,000 or less saved every year the men who like "port harbor" legislation think that there will be less opposition to public buildings and river and harbor improvements, even those of the strictly necessary kind, if it means little else, reference whether it is a selfish motive or not which has brought the change of view in congress. It will lead probably, it is said, to support for the plans of the economy and efficiency commission.

The government's expenses increase year by year, and it is a natural law, because the needs and the numbers of the governed continually increase.

New Order Please.
When the office-stenographers need apply again to put up over the door of the White House early last month there was a great noise, and it was not a protest or less charged with suggestions of profanity. Now it is said that the senators and representatives in congress are not so much interested in the order of things. They have gone to the cabinet officials with their pleas for preferment for office for their friends and family members. Under strict instructions from President Wilson to listen patiently to every proper presentation of a man's case and to decide on the merits thereof.

Woodrow Wilson has made a great many "political" appointments to office and before he gets through he probably will make a good many more, but Democratic claim, and some of the Republicans admit, that it seems as if the professional politicians of the country are not getting as much of the mere spoils of office as some of the party men think it their just due after having been kept away from the counter for sixteen long years.

In nearly every case appointments by presidential order, whether he is a Democrat or a Republican, are given to men who are not necessarily in the offensive areas for which the word political so frequently is made to stand. Probably 90 out of every 100 of the appointments to office which Mr. Wilson or his cabinet officers have made, or are to make, will be appointments of Democrats, but it does not necessarily follow that they will be given office because of political considerations.

BAD WATER HOLD-UP

It Was Only for Moving Pictures but Passengers Thought It Real Thing.

By FRANK FOLSON.

The journey across the desert is not a distracting one, and any diversion is gladly welcomed, so that, when the flashily dressed man stood up at the end of the Pullman and began to address the passengers, everybody went forward and gathered around him, laughing and clapping. They thought he was going to offer something for sale.

However, he had nothing to sell. He had a favor to ask, he said, and everybody became silent and listened attentively.

"Ladies and gentlemen," began the flashily dressed man, "I am going to repeat to you what I have just said to the passengers in the next coach. When we reach Bad Water, in ten minutes or so, moving pictures will be shown on the platform. I will be upon the platform to take some pictures representing a hold-up. Some of the performers, dressed as bandits, will attack the mail car, while others will go through the coaches, demanding your money and valuables. But please do not be alarmed. The whole proceeding will be in pantomime, and if you will make a show of compliance, and so aid us, nobody will be annoyed. I ask of you, fellow-passengers, to feign alarm, and if one or two of the ladies will pretend to faint, I will help things along."

Everybody began laughing and eagerly awaited the stop at Bad Water. This was the fourth day of the transcontinental journey, and the passengers were on very good terms with one another. They began to discuss train robberies.

"I'd never give up a cent," exclaimed a stout, perspiring drummer, wiping the alkali dust from his features. "Not for all the train robbers in California. No, sirree, and don't you ask me. I'd duck their pistols and hit out once or twice and then—well, there wouldn't be any train robbers."

"Well, as for me, I know I should just faint," answered a demure young lady. "And before I fainted I'd just hand over everything I had."

"Not with me around, you wouldn't need to," answered the drummer gallantly.

The other travelers did not commit themselves, for at that moment the train began to slow down and there appeared the irrigation ditch which with the station took its name. The flashily dressed man came into view, and a moment later a half dozen men, wearing umbrellas and masks, with pistols stuck all around their waists, leaped forward across the tracks. One jumped into the engine cab and held his pistol to the forehead of the engineer. The mail van was next attacked, and two men made their way into the forenoon of the coaches.

Upon the platform a moving picture operator and set up his instrument and was busily reeling off the film, the passengers, interested in the scene, gazed around him.

"Now, ladies, now, gentlemen," intoned the flashily dressed man in tones of remonstrance. "Won't you please go back into the coaches and be robbed? You're interfering with the operation of the picture show. People will think the picture's a fake, and we'll be exhibited in all the leading cities of America. Won't you go back?"

Two or three did turn back toward the coaches, but the majority stayed where they were. The flashily dressed man came back here and there among them, remonstrating and pleading. His arguments, however, failed. He said more and more that he was in the fresh air than within, and, besides, all wanted to see the whole proceedings. At last, he stepped on the platform and thrust up his hands and disappeared inside one of the coaches.

He then, then, And that's every penny I have in the world.

"It's Big and the other 'Big' somebody screamed. 'This real enough my God, it's all real!'"

Then the flashily dressed man came out of the coach, holding a smoking pistol in his hand. He was followed by two of the gang.

"Hands up, you silly sheep!" he yelled. "Hands up, or I fire. Now, then, back into the coach. One at a time, please. You'll keep them above your heads while like goes through you."

Sheep, he had called them, and like sheep they obeyed. The first to do so was the commercial traveler. There was a look of terror on his red face, and he held his arms erect as ramrod.

Only one traveler remained upon the platform. It was the demure young lady who had been discussing her course of action in the event of a real hold-up. Instead of fainting she stamped her foot violently and actually shook her fist in the flashily dressed man's face.

"I won't put my hands up and I won't give you a cent. And I've got plenty dollars inside my waist and as you won't take it, you coward. There!"

Upon the platform the operator was still grinding off his film. The flashily dressed man, who had been talking to the ladies, approached the young lady, took off his hat, and made her a bow.

"Madam, you are the only man among 'em," he said. "Pray keep your money as a tribute to your courage!"

The passengers had all fished in when the wheels of the train began to move. The flashily dressed man caught the young lady by the arm and swung her aboard, inside the travelers stood huddled together, but there was no more trouble of any kind. The flashily dressed man stood on the step and leered at them.

"Sorry to frighten you all, ladies and gentlemen," he said, "but I've obliged me as I asked of you to do. I wouldn't have had to scare you. We ain't bandits; we're just moving picture people; he was had to get the picture and as you won't help us—why, we just had to help ourselves. Good-bye."

And as the train was now in motion he leaped to the ground and stood smiling at them.

He smiled at the demure young lady, who was reading a text-book on the Montessori method of teaching the young, and she never looked up at him between Bad Water and San Francisco.

RURAL TEACHERS' PAY SMALL

Average Pay Less Than That Received by Street Laborers in Cities.

The statisticians tell us that the average salary of a teacher of the nation in the common schools is less than $400 a year, and in the rural school districts less than $300, the David Phillips House, secretary of agricultural writers in Lincoln, Illinois reports that rural salaries ranging from $150 to $400; Kansas, a salary of less than $250; Missouri, Mississippi and Tennessee, $200 or more. The annual compensation of rural teachers is less than that of street laborers in cities, less than that of bricklayers, plasterers and carpenters in the cities, and the superintendent of Alabama reports that in that state it is less than the average earnings of cobblers.

Everywhere these teachers are stranded in one room buildings, for the most part unsightly, devoid of the ordinary comforts looking in fact like the hovels of the poor. In New York surroundings, they teach all grades and hold 30 to 35 or 40 recitations a day for four, five, six or seven months in a year, and do this without advice or assistance from competent supervisors or inspectors. Illinois reports 10,600 one teacher schools, 1,150 of them having less than 15 pupils; Kansas, 7,500, 425 with less than 15 pupils, 400 with less than 10; North Carolina, more than 4,000 out of a total of 8,400; Indiana reports 1,000 schools with less than 15 pupils, and 3,000 with less than 10; Missouri, 705 with less than 15, and 2,500 with less than 10.

When the people know the facts and see that the state is not doing its duty, they will face the situation, provide the means and will regard the expenditure for developmental purposes not as a burden, but as a duty. They must get more money into this business of rural education to save what they have already put in—make good the investment. As people of ordinary business sense, they must recognize the necessity of efficiency of production. A nation which is expected to stand in the ranks of the great nations of the world must have a well-trained and efficient population.

At the White House the other day it was said by one who ought to know the president's mind on the subject, that every man who was given a place would expect to fill it. This was said to Chief Counselor in connection with the announcement that the secretary of the Interior, Fred H. Field, had been given the place of chief counsel.

Alleged simultaneously a point also was made by the same person, that every man who was given a place would expect to fill it. This was said to Chief Counselor in connection with the announcement that the secretary of the Interior, Fred H. Field, had been given the place of chief counsel.

ILLINOIS HAPPENINGS

Bloomington.—A. J. Carroll, a piano tuner in Florida, was killed by a street car here. He was struck with a falling mail and fell on the track as the car dashed on him.

Decatur.—Claire Dillon, manual training instructor in the Clinton Hill schools, resigned and left hurriedly when it was discovered through the filing of a divorce suit against him in St. Louis that he had been married three years ago. Dillon has been paying marked attention to young women of Clinton.

Springfield.—Dr. J. O. Salyers was held to the Sangamon county grand jury by the coroner's jury, charged with responsibility for the death of Mrs. Harry Mayhew as the result of an illegal operation. Doctor Salyers was admitted to bail. The husband also was held charged with being present and aiding and abetting the operation.

Decatur.—Nearly $35,000 will be hung up in purses for the two-rose meetings to be held here this year, according to the local commission. At the August meet of the Great Western there will be $14,000, Salem, Mo., having refused to split its week of September 30 to October 4 in the Great Western with Decatur. The latter has decided to hold an independent meeting with $10,000 in purses. This will give the horsemen an opportunity to gamble in Florida, Decatur and Springfield for three successive weeks.

Decatur.—F. H. Bushway, favoring extract manufacture, aged fifty-eight, committed suicide here by asphyxiation. At one time his company was widely known throughout the country and did an enormous business, but in later years was not so successful. Ill health is given as the reason for his act.

Decatur.—Walter Ulrich, a barber here, while removing rubbish from the attic of his home out of curiosity opened a large tin box and found it contained $2,900 in gold, it was left by the father, who died suddenly six years ago, not telling where his money was hidden. The father had always refused to bank his money and no one knew where it was kept. The box was supposed to have contained old silver and was about to be thrown in a garbage box. Ulrich plans to erect a monument for his parents and then purchase a home.

Sterling.—Verna Knox, twenty-four, school teacher, committed suicide blowing head off with shotgun. Resented student with cousin several times telling him she was writing story of a suicide.

Bloomington.—F. W. Johnson, principal of the University High School of Chicago, delivered the principal address before the Federation of Illinois colleges at Lincoln, discussing the secondary written in Lincoln, S. Spalding of Loyola university, Chicago, also spoke.

Springfield.—Three United States senators, a former vice-president of the United States, the governor of Illinois, three former governors, practically the entire membership of the Illinois legislature and hundreds of citizens from all quarters of the state joined in paying tribute to the memory of Stephen A. Douglas on the one hundredth anniversary of his birth. Robert D. Douglas, a grandson of the "Little Giant," was among those on the program.

Peoria.—President Carter of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Engineers, commenting on the decision handed down by the New York wage arbitration board, said: "The decision is fair and perhaps the increase in wages is as great as could be expected under the circumstances. Arbitrations are only a compromise at their best. I feel sure that the eastern firemen will greatly appreciate the uniformity of wage established by the award." The firemen got an increase in pay estimated at from 10 to 15 per cent.

Dequoin.—All efforts to locate Percy Pittman and Jesse Bowles, fourteen, said twelve years ago, respectively, who disappeared from their home in this city a week ago, have proved of no avail. The boys have been traced as far north as Decatur. It was thought they had gone to Springfield, where the Bowles boys has relatives.

Bloomington.—The list of hunting accidents in Illinois has been added to by a fatal one. A man believed to be longer than for any year previously. One more fatality marked the closing days of the present season. The fatal case of Frederick, who was killed when a shotgun carried by Charles Crane, a companion, was accidentally discharged.

Greenville.—Fire destroyed the large livery stable owned by Ott Walworth and the poultry house of A. E. Berry, a total loss of about $6,000. The fire started in the rear of the livery stable, and as both of the buildings are frame structures, there was no possible chance to save them. Several horses and a scattering sheep were saved. There was little injury to the other establishments, the greatest loss being that of the poultry house. The loss at the livery barn was estimated at $4,000, with $2,000 in harness.

BACK OF THE STAMP

Why the Roses Came to Peggy's Cheeks.

By CATHERINE COOPE.

Tom Lynn peered cautiously down through the vines that clustered up from the window box on the floor below.

Would that feminine, chestnut crowned head, with its myriad of stolen sunbeams, be in its accustomed place on the balcony below? Lynn leaned forward, careful not to break one of the tender green shoots that so generously scrambled up and over his bachelor window frame. Lynn felt grateful for the fragrant link that seemed to join his studio to that of the girl with the copper hair.

In his romantic mood, he likened the vine to the invisible tendrils that had escaped from the girl's personality and bound him in a tight mesh. Yes, she was there. Lynn felt strangely at peace with the world now that he could feast his eyes on the riot of hair that lay in two great braids around her shapely head. He shaded at his bird's-eye view of the girl. From his position she seemed to have cheeks like a rose petal.

Once in a fortunate moment, when she was measuring the skyline with her eyes, Lynn had a glorious glimpse of a dimpled chin and lips.

From that moment Lynn had scarcely left his studio, so fearful was he that the girl would vanish from his sight. He spent many hours watching her slim fingers wield the paint brush, for she was making an interesting sketch of the houseboats that formed her outlook.

Only once had Lynn been in the elevator with the girl and it had seemed so entirely wrong that she should flash her smile at the big black man who ran the elevator rather than at him. But when she stepped out Lynn received a swift, shy glance. He remembered afterward that a delicate color had come into her cheeks.

And now as he gazed down at her on the balcony he sighed.

"So near and yet so far," he fretted inwardly and felt a twinge of jealousy when she began to write a letter.

"Why do people spend Sunday writing letters?" he questioned himself.

Lynn was startled then by her voice calling to some one within the studio.

"Oh, Jane! I forgot to get stamps and this letter absolutely must go to-night. Have you one?" The girl stopped inside and Lynn was possessed of a bright idea.

He found his stamp book and tore out a couple of stamps. With swift fingers he wrote his name on the back and let them flutter down to the balcony below. As he had expected, one flew out beyond the railing, but the other dropped down and along to creek where Lynn waited.

"Would the girl see it? Lynn waited impatiently. She came out again, and he could tell by the disappointment in her expression that she had been disappointed in her quest. She stood for a moment in indecision, then discovered the stamp clinging to the letter.

"Oh, how fortunate!" she cried to the breeze within. "I have found one!" Lynn watched her motion the envelope over her head and saw the stamp on it.

He smiled. He had hoped that the letter, in reaching the studio, would have been a surprise. But now he had a surprise of his own.

"The letter!" he called to the breeze within. "I have found one!" Lynn watched her motion the envelope over her head and saw the stamp on it.

"The letter!" he called to the breeze within. "I have found one!" Lynn watched her motion the envelope over her head and saw the stamp on it.

see if the girl's head was there. Yes. And another head, black and wind-tossed, was there also.

The two girls were talking and their voices rose audibly to Lynn. They were evidently continuing a conversation started within.

But how could they get a stamp on "without seeing that name?" the dark-haired girl asked.

"I liked the envelope," returned the other. "I merely found that stamp on my vine and put it on your letter."

It seemed to Lynn that a suppressed current of excitement was in her voice.

"And if my little brother did not have a craze for making a smoker's table of stamps I would never have seen Tom Lynn's name. I am going straight to his studio and ask him if he is Le Tom Lynn who used to build and castles with me."

"I know there is a Tom Lynn in the building because I have seen his name."

Did Lynn imagine it or was there just a suspicion of eagerness in the voice. She jumped up suddenly.

"Let us telephone to him, right away and ask him in to tea," she suggested to the black-haired one whom Tom Lynn was trying in vain to catch a glimpse of.

"I really must thank him for his timely sending of a stamp, whether he is the Mr. Lynn you knew or not."

Both girls went within the studio, and presently Tom Lynn went to answer his telephone. He felt suddenly very much pleased and his heart leaped at the prospect of meeting the girl with the copper hair.

"Hello, yes. Am I? Well, I guess I am. Didn't I use to tease the life out of you by calling you 'young, meany, miny, mo,' just because your name is Enid?" Then Tom Lynn said with a sudden swift twist.

"But where are you? May I not come and have tea with you? I was just about to have my lonely bachelor cup."

He smiled to himself. "Yes, in ten minutes. Thanks, goodbye." He hung up the receiver and went again to the window. The girls were not on the balcony. "Primping," he surmised.

When he dropped the brass knocker on Peggy Mackey's studio it was Enid who opened the door. She greeted him shyly, and in her smile he recognized the little Enid of sand castle days.

"The same happy dimples," he told her, and glanced beyond to the other girl whose eyes were saying something that he could not fathom.

When he held the slim fingers that he had watched so often, Tom Lynn felt supremely happy. She seemed very shy and the color came duffily into her cheeks.

"Did you know—about the stamp?" she asked him.

"I cannot tell a lie," he quoted, with a laugh. "I dropped it down to you."

"Tommy Lynn," cried Enid, "I believe you are still romantic—as you were in sand castle days. But I suppose that in what has made you a successful writer. She tripped away off to make the tea, and Peggy looked up at Lynn. There was a mischievous expression in her eyes, and she said, with lowered eyelids:

"The vine from my window box makes a very nice frame for a face," she glanced up swiftly and watched the color mount to Tom Lynn's temples. Then she laughed outright and came confidently nearer him. "Do you know the reason why I keep my paint box so shiny? It is because I wanted it for a mirror. I have seen you up in your window looking at me."

"You are a fraud," laughed Lynn, recovering from his embarrassment. "Then that is why the roses came into your cheeks one day in the elevator, isn't it?"

"Perhaps," Peggy said, "but all I could get was a worm's-eye view."

Metropolitan's Luck.
"Well, Bithers, what luck did you have with your new car?" asked Jarrovy. "More than I ever expected," said Bithers. "Just three minutes after the darned thing blew up another car came along with a busted tire, and the owner bought my old three for ten dollars apiece."—Harpers' Weekly.

Why We Can See Smoke.
Smoke is not composed of gases only, but of solid or perhaps partly liquid particles, which are mixed with the gases and carried along by them. It is these particles of matter that are visible to the eye, and not the gases themselves.—St. Nicholas.

Regulations.
On remarking some time ago that students cannot be driven anywhere by regulations, I was contradicted by the dean of another institution who stated that by regulations they can be driven to the devil. I accepted the amendment.—President Lowell, in Harvard Graduate Magazine.

Going Unappreciated.
Even in these modern times the genius who finds a way to benefit the human race is sometimes persecuted. A Chinese man who invented a machine that would return to the owner after it had been used had been held by the crowd for a while.—Cleveland Leader.

To Prevent China Chipping.

If a thick cloth is placed at the bottom of the pan or bowl in which delicate china or glass is being washed the danger of chipping will be lessened. This will also prevent silver from being scratched.

Cement Stave Silos

AS CHEAP AS WOOD SILOS, AND ARE VERY MUCH BETTER, because they are permanent silos, actually growing stronger with age—they cannot be destroyed by fire and are strong enough to resist any wind—they are absolutely air and water proof and will preserve the silage perfectly under all weather conditions—they are acid proof—they require no attention to keep in perfect condition. THE CEMENT STAVE SILO is a beautiful structure and adds to the appearance of the farm home. In its moisture proof walls the silage freezes less than in other silos, whether hollow wall, brick, wooden or cement. It is the BEST silo because the first cost is the total cost. No expense for repairs, painting, attention and loss from spoiled silage caused by air leaks.

If you are going to build a silo call on, write or telephone me

'THE GRANARY OF NORTH AMERICA.'

GOVERNOR SULZER SAYS THAT OF WESTERN CANADA.

The close ties of friendship existing between the United States and Canada were dwelt upon in address by Premier Robert L. Borden, of Canada, and Governor Sulzer, at the annual dinner of the University Club of Albany.

"Canada and the United States," said Premier Borden, "have a common heritage in the language, the literature, the laws, the institutions and the traditions which have come down to them from the men of bygone days. Perhaps no more instructive object lesson ever has been given to the world than the borderland miles of undefended boundary line from the Atlantic to the Pacific, which bears silent but eloquent testimony to the mutual confidence and respect of the two nations. Time will shortly place upon the brow of each nation the laurel of one hundred years of peace. It matters not so much as to the form of the outward celebration, but let us hope that its full significance may sink deep into the hearts of both nations, and that, whether north or south of the boundary, we may stand with bowed and reverent heads, offering grateful thanks for the Divine blessing of peace, and earnest prayers that in the century to come, mutual confidence, good-will and respect may truly approximate the ideals and aspirations of both nations."

Referring to the natural resources possessed by the United States and Canada, particularly along the St. Lawrence River, the premier urged that they be "preserved and developed for the people."

Governor Sulzer predicted that the "Great Canadian Northwest is destined to become, before long, the granary of North America."

"Many of our best citizens, I regret to say," said the governor, "are leaving the States of the west and going into the Canadian northwest, because of the fertility of its soil, the liberality of the Canadian government and the ability of those people to better their conditions here."

"We should extend to them a helping hand in their new enterprise of progress. Instead of closing our doors by tariff barriers against these countries and their products, in my opinion, we should open them wider and do everything in our power to facilitate closer commercial relations. We want their products and they want our products, and all restrictions to prevent a fairer and freer exchange of goods, wares and merchandise should, in so far as possible, be eliminated."—Advertisement.

RESINOL CURED AWFUL PIMPLES

Whole Face Covered, Now Clear.

Brooklyn, N. Y., Oct. 9, 1912. "I was troubled with two or three pimples coming out on my chin. In a week or so my whole face was covered with them. Friends advised me to use different lotions and salves. I tried them, but they did me little good. If any I finally washed the pimples with Resinol Soap and applied Resinol Ointment before going to bed. In the morning I found the swelling gone, and the inflammation subsided. I continued this treatment for about a week, and found that most of the pimples had disappeared. I kept on the treatment up for about a month, and then my face was clear of all pimples. I have used Resinol Soap since and find that the pimples do not come back." (Signed) Walter A. Stenstrom, 44 Willoughby Ave.

If you are suffering from itching, burning skin troubles, pimples, blackheads, dandruff, stubborn sores or rashes, it will cost you nothing to try Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap. Just send to Dept. 14-K, Resinol, Baltimore, Md., for a free sample of each. Every druggist sells Resinol.

REMARKABLY PRETTY HAT FOR THE LITTLE MAID

Fashioned in the Braids and Pressed Hats, and in Panama-Trimming May Be Entirely a Matter of Preference.

Just an all-around, good little hat which may be worn anywhere, in the pretty little model shown here. This shape is found (or others very like it) in all the braids and pressed hats in the fashion. It is to be found trimmed with flowers, or with feathers in the straight stick-up effects; it is a favorite decorated with stiff ribbon bows wired to stand up in front or protrude at the back. Trimmed in these ways, made in all colors it is a favorite and a smart street style.

When it must do duty for all round wear, including automobiles, it is trimmed to accommodate the veil to be worn with it. The broad, folded ash of ribbon and the large millimeter made rose of velvet, which appear in the illustration show a development which fits the hat for all sorts of wear.

The shape fits well and provides some protection for the eyes. The small face veil for the street and traveling, or the big chiffon veil for driving and its protection of the eyes and face.

R. W. GRACY

Possibly Knew What He Meant.
In an address of welcome to a recent magistrate at Cal. Transcal, South Africa, the Kamr spokesman, the other day thus expressed himself: "We cordially welcome your black and goodness in coming among such pusillanimous and unwholesome ignorant people. We are overjoyed to get such a weak, non-excitable, superabundantly harmonious one as a magistrate."

Strong Land and Language.
"Wonderful soil here," said the traveler. "I've never seen such big corn." "Yes," said the farmer, "and we had to plant a dwarf variety to keep it down to this size."—St. Paul Dispatch.

In the International Family.
"You don't figure very strongly in diplomatic relations," said the great Nation. "No," replied the small, struggling government. "I'm one of the poor relations."—Washington Star.
