KILLING OF INFECTED CATTLE IS RESUMED

Judge Irwin of Elgin Who Granted an Injunction Restraining Veterinarians Dissolved it Last Friday.

DVORAK'S CATTLE KILLED TODAY

A compromise has been made in the cattle epidemic dis-agreements between owners of infected cows and the state and federal authorities. Judge C. F. Irwin of Kane county on last Friday modified his injunction against slaughtering and Dr. Dyson, state veterinarian, says that killing will be resumed at once under the law. The state board of live stock commissioners will appoint three appraisers in each county, cattle men will probably understand that in the long run their interests are being protected and they will be more ready to allow cattle to be fairly appraised and disposed of, for under the law the state need only pay $35 per head for animals regardless of their value. Safety first."

The delay at Springfield in appropriating money for the immediate payment is caused by the deadlock existing on the election of a speaker in the house. The federal government is pushing on its obligation rapidly. Dr. Albert Gieske, assistant state's veterinarian, who is working in this vicinity with Dr. C. McCollin of the United States government, states that all the cattle killed here, about three hundred, have been settled for as far as the federal authorities are concerned, which means one-half of the appraisement, and $35 where state secure is made. Several farmers around here have been given checkes amounting to about $2,000.

Dr. Gieske is most emphatic in urging farmers to follow the advice of the authorities, for the disease will linger in the country for years if not prevented now. He called at the Dvorak farm early this week to try to induce John Dvorak to consent to slaughter of his cows without further opposition, but found the man had gone to the city; however; today the state and federal representatives and helpers, killed the cattle without Dvorak signing the vouchee of agreement. The herd on this farm, four and a half miles west of town on the county line road, number thirty-two and are almost well after their attack; excepting some of the young stock, but the danger of contagion still exists. A new infected herd developed southwest of here, two miles east of Elgin in Hanover township, this week and 61 cows are infected.

After cattle have been killed on a farm an interval of sixty days quarantine is demanded by the inspectors who make three trips of inspection and also visit all farms within a radius of three miles from the infected place. Some farmers object to having their property looked over if their cattle have not been ill, but this is largely ignorance.

P. A. Hawley First Vice-President.

At the annual meeting of the Milk Producers' association in Chicago Monday afternoon Phillip A. Hawley of this village was elected first vice president. The meeting was harmonies most of the time but there were moments when trouble threatened. A fight on the election of officers was prevented by the board of directors; another point at issue was the votes by proxy when 75 were thrown out by President E. J. Follows as not in legal form. Resolutions were adopted against the state quarantine regulations; the federal prohibition of interstate shipment of cattle from Cook, DuPage, Lake, McHenry and Kane counties unless subjected to the tuberculin test which was declared "inefficient and discredited."

H. S. Early of Sycamore was elected president to succeed Fellows who has held the office for five years; W. J. Kittle of Crystal Lake was re-elected secretary, P. A. Hawley, first vice president; F. H. Hope of Pleasant Prairie, Wisconsin, second vice president; Thomas R. Kane of Hobart, Indiana, third vice president; John F. Martin of Antioch, treasurer.

George W. Page entered his Rhode Island Red chickens in the Park Ridge poultry show which opened January 27 and closed last Saturday. He took four first prizes and the silver cup for the best pullet in the show, 27 varieties competing. These chickens were exhibited at Elgin in January and took the following prizes: first and second for hen; first, third and fifth for pullet; first, third and fourth for pen; second and fourth for cock; third and fifth for cockerel; silver cup for best display and silver cup for best pen.

VILLAGE BOARD HELD MEETING

There being no further business the board adjourned.

Short Storm Makes Wire Trouble.

Since Sunday night the telephone and telegraph wires of this vicinity, as well as in other districts, have been in great disorder. The telephone company reports that 225 phones out of the 400 in the local exchange were out and that no long distance communication could be had from Monday morning to Tuesday noon when two toll lines were repaired, but the remaining twenty toll lines out of Barrington will not be in complete order for days. Woodstock and Harvard were cut off from the world entirely and no local connections could be made for many hours. All wires are down and coils of wire stored in nearby towns were rushed to these towns by express; sixty, each weighing 175 pounds, went from the Barrington office.

Short storms cost telegraph, telephone and electric service companies many thousands of dollars and the extra work for employees is heavy, but it's considered a "part of the job" and they accept conditions with the bravery of soldiers. The telegraph service to Chicago from Barrington was not cut off but no messages could be sent north after Monday night for two days. Trains are delayed, but their progress was more affected by the heavy snows in the northwest than by wire trouble.

The Public Service wires were in terrible shape Monday night and a dozen towns around here were without lights all night, but the village of Barrington experienced only slight trouble which did not last long.

Woman's Club Program Extra Fine.

The regular meeting of the Barrington Woman's club was held at the home of Mrs. Reuben Plagge on Grove avenue Wednesday evening and was one of especial note in that a very prominent woman in Chicago and Illinois affairs was present to lecture. The gathering numbered about eighty who were nicely accomodated in the spacious home of this club member; half of the people were guests of the club whose members are very hospitable in sharing good programs with non-members.

Dr. Cornelia DeBoy, a practising physician of Chicago and who was recently a member of the Chicago Board of Education, spoke on educational matters throughout the state, especially in reference to the bill now before the state legislature in regard to establishing vocational work in the public schools or providing especial schools where trades will be taught. This lady of small stature and feminine appearance, is forceful, intelligent and highly informed woman of public affairs today, to listen to whom is a liberal education on many topics.

Mrs. M. Parrigon of Austin, professional whistler and reader, a member of a well known Chicago quartette was another talented woman on the program and it is needless to state that her abilities were enjoyed.

Mrs. Gunnovjeve Webster Wolfram of Des Plaines and Mrs. Plagge gave several piano duets in a manner that showed them to be excellent musicians.

Zion Pastor Ill in Chicago.

Roy. H. Haag, pastor of the Zion Evangelical church, was taken suddenly ill with hemorrhages while in Sears, Roebuck and company's mail order house in Chicago Tuesday afternoon. A brother who lives in the city was summoned and the sick man taken to the Deaconess hospital where he will probably be confined for a time. Mrs. Haag was called in from Barrington that day and went in again on Wednesday to remain with her husband.

ITEMS OF INTEREST TO LOCAL PEOPLE

Happenings of the Week Told in Short Paragraphs—What's Doing in and Near Our Hustling Village.

There will be an old folks' dance in Seip's hall, Palatine, Saturday evening, February 6.

A number of Barrington people attended the dance given at Palatine last Friday night.

Mrs. William Shearer gave a card party Tuesday evening for the young women's card club.

The Royal Neighbors will give a chicken pie supper in the near future. Watch for date and place.

George Wessel and family will move on March first from Franklin street to the farm he bought east of town, known as the Reese farm.

Mrs. William Johnson of the Old South farm returned home Thursday from the Policlinic hospital, Chicago, where she underwent an operation for appendicitis.

About a dozen piano pupils of Miss Almeda Plagge played on the program at a recital at the home of Mrs. Richard Thornton on Williams street last Saturday night.

The ladies of the Royal Neighbors lodge give their second dance of the season this evening at the village hall with Moore's orchestra of Woodstock to play for the dancing.

Dr. George A. Lytle will occupy the pulpit at the Methodist church Sunday morning and in the evening the Rev. Gross, pastor of the Palatine Methodist church, will preach.

The Thursday club met this afternoon at the home of Mrs. H. T. E. White on Grove avenue where Mrs. William Cannon had charge of the program on the subject of birds of all kinds.

George Hager, L. L. Porter, Fred Hobein and Frank Plagge were in Waukegan Monday to which they were called to testify to the value of the real estate owned by the late George Miller.

Mrs. Ida Bennett entered the Francis Willard hospital in Chicago on Wednesday where she will receive treatment for liver trouble and perhaps be operated. She has been ill for a month, most of the time in bed.

Arthur Waggoner, who recently came here from Aurora, is living in the Beinlich house on South Hawley street. Mr. Waggoner has taken the place of Lawrence Dowles as car repairer in the E. J. & E. railway yards here.

The Dorcas society of the Baptist church held a "dime social" Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. George Schroeder of Lill street, which 11 ladies attended. Another one will be held at the home of Mrs. Carrie Kendall next Tuesday.

A large white wedding cake was on exhibition at the Hams bake shop Wednesday, the artistic effort of Bert Hams. It was surmounted by a bride and groom in full marriage regalia under a canopy of sugar vines and attracted much attention.

Mrs. Charles Theis, and the Misses Edith Hams and Genevieve Pomeroy, were to have sung at a recital in Kimball hall, Chicago, last Saturday night but the storm caused a postponement of the program to be given by the pupils of Miss Elva Chrysler.

Icy walks have been a menace to all this week and those who make it a point of keeping their walks cleaned off have been forced to be as careless of the safety of the passing public as the man who never cleans his walk. Branches are down and litter many streets and walks.

Mrs. T. B. Peckham and Mrs. O. H. P. Graham will entertain the Ladies' Aid society of the Methodist church at a "silmo social" next Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Graham on Hough street. A cordial invitation is extended to all members of the society and other ladies of the church.

The usual monthly missionary program in the Methodist Sunday school next Sunday will be a class composed of members of the Women's Foreign Missionary society giving interesting information relative to the origin, plans and working system of the society.

Sam L. Landwer of Grove avenue attended inspection and drill Monday night at the Illinois Naval reserve headquarters aboard the U. S. S. Commodore stationed in Chicago harbor. Mr. Landwer is enlisted in the Band Division and is required to report for inspection in full uniform once a month and for band rehearsals once a week.

On account of the storm every toll line running out of our exchange was out of order Monday.

Miss Mamie Hokemeyer is spending a two weeks vacation with her parents at Shepherd, Michigan.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Buesching were entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. D Fink Sunday.

Mr. Sigwald of Arlington Heights visited at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Hirn the first of the week.

Among the Chicago visitors Monday were H. D. Meyer, Albert Boldt, Charles Kohl, Herman Koffenberg and William Butt.

The baby son born to Mr. and Mrs. Roland Beutler last Sunday died the day of his birth and was laid to rest in the Lake Zurich cemetery.

The dance given by the Modern Woodmen of America lodge at Hawthorne last Friday evening was well attended by people from Lake Zurich.

WAUCONDA

Mrs. Reimer, sister of W. J. Sauer, is a guest at the Sauer home.

Taxes are lower here by about 40 per cent, the first time in years.

Harry Galloway of Libertyville is spending a few days with friends here.

Alvin Kimbell and Roy Murphy attended the mask ball at McHenry Wednesday.

Mrs. Stancliffe of Prairie View who has been visiting her daughter, Mrs. Sauer, has returned home.

Friends in Wauconda hear that Mr. and Mrs. Frank Geary of Salt Lake City have atwo weeks' old son.

Mr. Crabtree is quite ill from the effects of a fall last Sunday. His advanced years are against his rapid recovery.

Misses Tillie Bauer and Ruth Spaith attended the ski jump at Cary Sunday, also Mr. and Mrs. Asa Crabtree and a load of passengers.

Frank Hammond was called to Elgin Friday to the death bed of his half sister Mrs. B. Waite, who was unconscious and who died Saturday. Mr. and Mrs. John Blanck attended the funeral on Tuesday, Mrs. Blanck was a niece of Mrs. Waite.

Little Girl Breaks Arm.

Helen O'Brien, four years old, oldest of three daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Robert O'Brien of Station street, fell from a dining room table on Friday afternoon, January 29, and broke her left arm in two places. She had climbed on the table to play. The breaks are in the elbow, one about half an inch above the joint and the other in the tip which forms the point in the elbow; both are quite serious and the arm will be stiff for several months, but eventually it will be all right it is expected and will not bother her in later life. She does not suffer with it at present.

In spite of the bad weather last Saturday many people took advantage of F. W. Stoll's special goldfish sale, in fact he did so well that he sold out most of the larger size fish before every one was supplied, and will be obliged to continue the special sale this week Saturday, February 6, giving one fish free with every two purchased.

Notice.

Notice is hereby given that no dogs shall be allowed to run at large on account of the epidemic of foot-and-mouth disease. Keep your dog at home or he will be shot by the authorities.

EDWARD PETERS,
2t Village Marshal.

THOMSON'S ARTICLE ON TAXES

Congressman From the Tenth District Writes Second Letter in Regard to Taxation in Washington.

I want to continue the subject of my letter of last week and give you some more facts about the so-called "half-and-half" system in use here in connection with the maintenance of the local government of the city of Washington and District of Columbia.

Since 1878 the federal government has paid one-half of the municipal expenses of this city. It has paid for one half of the schooling of the children of the city, one-half of the expense of construction of the municipal public buildings, one-half the cost of paving streets and alleys, building sewers and so forth and one-half the cost of maintaining the police and fire departments—in fact, one half of all the expenses of the city. Last year the expenses of running the municipality were about $14,000,000. Of this the federal government contributed about $7,000,000. This is more than most of the states of the union collect and spend for the entire expenses of their state governments. It is more than the state of Illinois spends for all its expenses, including the pay of all state officers, its legislature and the maintenance of its university, eleemosynary institutions, penitentiaries and different state departments. There are only six states in the union that spend more for the maintenance of their state governments than the federal treasury contributed last year for the support of the city of Washington.

Of course the $7,000,000, or thereabouts, contributed annually by the federal government for this purpose is not created out of nothing. It is paid into the treasury by the various states. The state of Illinois annually contributes for this purpose, nearly $350,000. Can anyone give a sane reason why the people of Illinois should make this contribution to the support of the citizens of Washington while they at home are paying a much higher rate of taxation for these benefits, than the people of Washington are? Why should the people of our cities and towns, who have to pay for their own sidewalks, pavements, sewers and water systems, be required to bear one-half that burden for the citizens of Washington, especially while the latter is carrying little over one-half the burden of taxation that is being carried by them? The system is utterly indefensible. When the proposition is reduced to figures and to dollars and cents, the "half and half" system won't hold water. It could not hold hay. The interested citizens of Washington baffled by cold figures, appeal to patriotism. Of course we should all be proud of our national capitol. We should not be niggardly in providing for its maintenance. Certainly not, but should we not be just first? Pride in our capitol city should not be carried to the length of making the people who do not live here or own any property here, pay the taxes that ought to be paid by those who do choose to live here and enjoy the pleasures and benefits of the capital city. They point out to us that the original owners of the land making up the city of Washington gave the federal government a large portion of it for its use. But who can estimate how much the remainder was enhanced in value by reason of the location of the capitol here? The father of our country made the people pay a bonus to get located here. What would he think if he came back and found that we are now paying $7,000,000 a year for the privilege of staying here?

You are all more or less familiar with the beautiful and numerous public buildings located here and the spacious grounds and parks that surround them, all maintained by the federal government. At least 90,000,000 of the people that helped provide these buildings and grounds and annually contributed for their maintenance, have never seen them and never will. The people of Washington and the District of Columbia get the benefit of all this without contributing a penny. There is not a city in the country that would not contribute millions for the creation of such buildings and grounds in their midst. The federal government is doing its full part by this city in spending the great sums it has and annually does, in providing and maintaining its property here. When we know that in addition to this, the people of the country are also contributing annually for the expenses of the local government of Washington, a greater aggregate amount than any one of the states spends for its entire government (with six exceptions) and that in meeting their half of these expenses of the city the people of Washington are paying a considerably lower rate of tax than is

LARGE ATTENDANCE SUNDAY AT SKI JUMP

Despite the Rain and Slush Nearly 4,000 People Were Present at the Hill Near Cary.

JUMPS SHORT ON ACCNUNT OF RAIN

World's Champion Ragnar Omtvedt's Longest Jump 115 Feet But He Fell and Injured Hip.

The crowd at the annual tournament of the Norge Ski club at Ironwood hill, northeast of Cary, last Sunday afternoon was large, nearly four thousand people viewing the dare devil leaps of the ski jumpers. The drizzling rain of the early afternoon and later downpour did not dampen the enthusiasm of the spectators nor the efforts of those contending. A band enlivened the spirits of all and the coffee and sandwiches on sale were in great demand. The crowd was made up largely of those who had come from a distance for the absence of people from this section of the country was very noticeable; either the interest out this way in the ski jump is hot so keen as it used to be or else country people "know enough to stay in out of the wet."

Ragnar Omtvedt, world professional champion, failed to make his record of 169½ feet; he covered 115 feet on his final jump, falling and straining his right hip. Axel Hendrickson, professional, shot down the big steel shute, turned a somersault in the air and sped down the hill in perfect form. Barney Reilley, the only skier not a Scandinavian, made good jumps. He was raised in Norwegian country in Wisconsin and speaks the language like a native.

All entrants were present and the program not hindered by the terrible weather.

The amateurs put on a classy showing and, although few standing leaps of over 100 feet were made by the colin spurners, Norge Ski club officials believe they have some future professional champions.

Norge Ski club members are considering holding another tournament this month. For the first time in years the promoters came near breaking even.

New Postmaster Appointed.

Postmaster General Burleson of Washington, D. C., has appointed George W. Spencer of Barrington as postmaster of the local office to succeed Henry K. Brockway. Mr. Spencer has not received official notice from Washington but his name appears in the published lists of appointments. Mr. Brockway's term ends on February 17, but it is thought it will be April first before the change will take place, as the government generally orders the current quarter of the year completed before a new man takes over the office.

Mr. Brockway has been postmaster for eighteen years; he was appointed by President McKinley on August 21, 1897 and took over the office on October first of that year. The Barrington office was then in the fourth class and appointments were for six years; twelve years ago it was made a presidential office of a four year term and Mr. Brockway was appointed under Presidents Roosevelt and Taft; the change from one class of office to another made the extension of Mr. Brockway's time into this Democratic administration. He succeeded the late M. B. McIntosh who served three years, filling out the term of William Meyer, the first appointee, who died after serving a year, he was a brother of Mrs. John Schroeder; John C. Plagge held the office four years and previous to him, D. Loomis was postmaster which takes us back over thirty years in the history of this office.

Mr. Brockway has no definite plans for the future.

Franz Castle for Judge.

Franz W. Castle, of Elgin, known to many Barrington people, has announced his candidacy for the judgeship of the city court. This court has existed since 1859, one judge being elected each four years for the two cities, Elgin and Aurora. At the last session of the legislature, an act was passed which provides that hereafter a judge shall be elected in each city, the election to take place February 22nd. The court has the same jurisdiction, both civil and criminal, within the city limits, as does the Circuit court.

Mr. Castle, who is the brother of Village Attorney Howard P. Castle, and who was born on the Castle farm just east of this village, has been associated for the past sixteen years with the firm of Castle, Williams, Long & Castle. He was very prominent in the successful campaign of a year ago by which Elgin was voted dry, and he has the endorsement of the Elgin Anti-Saloon League.

SYNOPSIS.

Daniel Slade suddenly advances from a penniless miner to a millionaire. He is ambitious to become governor of the state. His simple, home-loving wife fails to rise to the new conditions. Slade meets Katherine, daughter of Senator Strickland, and sees in her all that Mary is not. Slade decides to separate from his wife and takes rooms at his club.

CHAPTER V.

Mary Slade sat down to the breakfast table with a certain sense of bewilderment. It was the same this morning as it had been each successive morning since Dan's departure. She could not bring herself to the realization of the fact that Dan had not come home—apparently did not intend to come home.

She had waited up the night he had gone to the club, just as she had waited up every night of their married life, no matter where her husband was or how late he might be coming home. As the night hours lengthened into day she was forced to the conclusion that Dan meant to stay away for the night. That he wouldn't be home at all through the day never occurred to her. She reasoned that a night's sleep would clear his mind and that he would have recovered from his "tantrum" the next day. But Dan didn't "run in" that day nor the next. The days had become weeks, yet neither by telephone nor letter had he sent as much as a word.

Finally Mary had mustered up her courage and telephoned his club. It took courage for Mary to use the telephone on any occasion. She was afraid of the sound of her own voice the moment she began to talk into the transmitter. This time she feared Dan's displeasure and his possible harshness. "Mr. Slade was out, had left no message; they did not know when he would return," was the disappointing result as she hung the receiver on the hook.

This morning, as the maid served her breakfast, she resolved to try again. The situation was getting unbearable. It was bad enough to live in the great house and be surrounded by servants with Dan there. Without him she felt like a prisoner of state and looked on the servants as so many jailers.

Leaving her breakfast practically untasted, Mary again ventured to the telephone. With faltering voice she repeated the number. "One-three-nine-four;" with beating heart she inquired for "Mr. Slade;" with sinking courage she received the answer that Mr. Slade had gone out, leaving no message. Again and again during the day she repeated the call, only to receive a similar reply. The possibility of her husband having left such a message to be delivered to her, whether he was there or not never occurred to the truthful, simple-minded little woman. But Slade did not want to be reached by her, and if an untruth, more or less, were necessary, the telephone boy was easily bribed.

Meanwhile Slade was eagerly looking forward to his new life. Never a man to waver, he did not once look back to the wife he had so coolly deserted. He was being dined and banqueted and feted, being everywhere hailed as the candidate for governor. He was sniffing the first breath of future glories with keenest delight. This was the sort of thing that made a man feel big! This was the sort of life to lead—with men bowing and salaaming all around him. He walked with a firmer tread. His shoulders were thrown back a bit more arrogantly. His chest was more noticeable as he walked down the street.

The innate conceit and self-esteem of the man made him overlook the fact that the party needed a rich man. He was quite satisfied that he was being boosted by Strickland and the others because of his brains, his unusual ability, his oratory and his power to lead men. He was happier than he had been for years. Every day the new life looked brighter and the old less desirable.

If he gave a thought to Mary it was a passing one. Mary was "comfortable." She had everything that money could buy. The servants would be taking good care of her, of course. Of the lump in Mary's throat as she sat at the lonely breakfast table and as she went through the still more lonesome ordeal of the formal dinner, he knew nothing. Of the woman's aching heart and her eyes bright with unshed tears as she tried to keep up before the servants and make excuses for his absence, Slade was heartlessly oblivious. Or perhaps it was self-esteem again, that made him unable to feel for her—the self-esteem of the successful man who feels no wounds when fighting for what he wants, and neither knows nor cares that others feel them. He had a heart, but it was unpleasantly like Pharaoh's.

But of Katherine Strickland's statuesque beauty and her cosmopolitan manner he was delightfully aware. During the weeks since he had left home Slade had been calling regularly at the Strickland home, partly to consult with the senator and partly for the purpose of posing for the bust which Katherine was modeling. As they sat hour after hour, he posing comfortably, she working deftly and talking even more cleverly, Slade and Katherine had come to a mutual understanding. The more they saw of each other the more each became convinced that their paths would inevitably converge.

Katherine talked animatedly and entertainingly of social life abroad and of the gay times in Washington, and Slade's heart warmed and his eyes flashed as he pictured himself a part of that charmed circle. With keen penetration he saw the longing of the girl's nature, her iron will, her determination to gain social honors at almost any cost. He flattered himself that when he said the word Katherine Strickland would be ready to cast her lot with his.

From the smoking room of Senator Strickland's big house came the strident sound of men's voices raised in excitement, and, it would seem, acclaim. Now and again the senator's smooth, oratorical voice would sound and then Slade's slightly deprecatory, yet firm and pleased. Then would follow the patter of applause, laughter and the sudden dropping of voices that signified earnest converse.

To Katherine Strickland, sitting in the softly lighted library adjoining, every sound had its meaning. Her eyes sparkled with keen interest. In her cheeks glowed the deep rose of excitement and exultation. In that other room she knew they were making history. In that other room they were putting up a man for governor, a man she admired and who had aroused her interest as no other man had ever done.

Nothing could stand in that man's way, she thought, with a catch in her breath, nothing could stop him now that he was fairly started. How different this domineering, forceful personality from Bob Hayes, the man who had first won her girl's heart, and yet for whom she had never been willing to renounce her interest in the political and social life which obsessed her with the same compelling force as it did Slade.

With an effort she brought her mind back to the present and to Mrs. Wesley Merritt, who had dropped in on her way from a dance to pick up her husband.

"You simply weren't listening to a word I said," Mrs. Merritt complained in her affectedly affectionate way. "I was asking if you know Mr. Slade very well."

"Yes," Katherine replied, lightly, "we know him very well."

"And does he ever mention his wife?" in Mrs. Merritt's most perfectly feline manner.

"Never once," admitted Katherine, without even an attempt at an evasion.

"And you have never met her?" Mrs. Merritt was in her glory if she could probe.

"No, I have never met her."

"How extraordinary! My husband—why, Wesley Merritt's name spells hearth and home, domestic purity—while Slade's! They tell me he hasn't seen his wife for weeks, and it's town talk that he's living at his club. And to think he's never mentioned her to you!"

Katherine had quietly rung for a servant, and as Mrs. Merritt finished, remarked casually: "Martin, see that these letters are mailed at once."

Unabashed, Mrs. Merritt was moving eagerly about the artistic room, comfortable in all its appointments, its richness enhanced and mellowed with age, a blend of color that nothing but years can give.

Fannie Merritt was a decided blonde. Her decision had been made more than ten years before. It was a decision that once made, must be abided by, and the woman had been living up to it ever since. Her gown was the last word of sartorial elegance and style. Daringly decollette it clung to her long, svelte figure with loving emphasis, and trailed round her exquisitely dressed feet. Her hair did credit to the hairdresser's long and patient efforts, and long, bizarre diamond pendants flashed and sparkled from her ears. If ever a woman had become a slave to her own personal pleasure and dress, that woman was Fannie Merritt. Too self-centered and selfish ever to crave motherhood, she lavished a kind of affection on a watery-eyed little poodle, which repaid her with lap-dog gratitude.

Tonight she was restless and ill at ease. Like Katherine, her mind was full of one thought—Slade, Slade, Slade—but thoughts that took a different direction. She was sick of his name, sick of hearing of his money, sick of the talk of his power and of hearing him named as "the man of the hour." He was winning the very honors she had coveted for her husband, and taking them right out from beneath his very eyes and nose. There didn't seem to be a doubt of Slade becoming governor, the very position for which her husband had been striving for the past six terms. Slade with his millions needed the governorship no more than a pampered child needs a new toy, while to her husband success or failure this time meant either the retrieving of his fortunes or his utter ruin.

The abstraction of the two women was broken by the sudden entrance of Hayes.

"Whew!" he whistled. "They're having a time of it in there. Good evening, Mrs. Merritt, your husband is certainly making it warm for Mr. Slade."

"Indeed," laughed Mrs. Merritt, gratified for the moment.

"Dear, dear!" she exclaimed as she watched Hayes gazing wistfully at Katherine and looking very handsome and manly in his well-made evening clothes. "It's quite like old times to see you together." Unhappy herself, it gave her a certain pleasure to make other people unhappy. The jealousy she had long felt for the younger and more beautiful woman found expression now in her purring tones, as, with amiable cruelty, she reminded them of their earlier intimacy. She took delight in making Bob writhe and Katherine whiten as she recalled their passionate young love when only the senator's stern interference had kept them from wedding.

"Let me see," she recollected, "when I was your confidante, you were twenty-one, Katherine, and you, Rob, were twenty-four. I can feel Rob's hands gripping mine yet: 'O, Fannie—please see her for me—the senator doesn't approve of it.' And the tears you shed on my shoulder, Katherine—why, it feels wet to think of it."

"O! Fannie!" Katherine's voice was not as firm as usual.

"I always said," the woman persisted, "Rob, she'll come home to you in the end—"

"I think I'll go back and listen to the discussion," and Bob flung disgustedly out of the room. At the door he almost collided with Merritt. Katherine had hurried out to see a reporter who wanted the wherefores and the whys of the dinner party to Slade.

"I can't possibly get away, dear," Merritt explained to his wife. "I've been buttonholed by some men from up the state. Shall you wait or go home—first?"

Mrs. Merritt refused to be dismissed in that peremptory fashion.

"I'll wait," she returned with acid sweetness. "Then if you are not ready I'll run along."

"Slade's had an ovation tonight," Merritt informed her, nodding toward the smoking-room. "The big out-of-town men are all here. Some of 'em in there yet. He's big, Fannie. He's big. We can't deny that. The brute attacks his point with all the force of a sledge hammer."

"Yes, that's what you lack—punch!" his wife turned on him petulantly.

"You're showed under," she complained, bitterly. "If you'd taken my advice you wouldn't have come to this Slade feed tonight. What's your paper for," she demanded, "if you can't attack your rival candidate in its columns? Anyone would think you wanted to make him governor—instead of yourself."

"I can't attack him publicly," Merritt retorted. "He'd put up glue factories facing our property and, with a lake breeze blowing our way—phew! My position is very difficult. Of course, election's a long way ahead, but I'm the only stick in his puddle."

"Yes, you're a big stick!" she taunted. "Why don't you do something?"

"What can I do?" he groaned. "I've been told tonight by no less than four men that they won't support me again. And Strickland's speech introducing Slade was a masterpiece!"

"Yes—Strickland's masterpieces are concocted by his daughter, we all know that. Just as I write your stuff," she finished with hateful emphasis on the possessive.

"My dear, I wish you'd be more careful!" warned Merritt, making sure that the door leading into the smoking-room was closed.

"Your 'Message to the Farmer'—that made you famous! What did I ever get for writing it?" and with self-satisfied deliberateness she arranged herself carefully in a low-seated chair near the fireplace.

"I never denied that you had a man's brain," placatingly, drawlingly, mockingly, "darling."

"Yes—I'm the family mosquito that buzzes behind your ears. God help us if it wasn't for me. Did you ask the senator for the $10,000 I want?" she demanded.

"He can't," Merritt was huddled in the nearest chair. The subject had been causing him appetiteless days and sleepless nights. When a woman of Fannie Merritt's persistency and tenacity wants something a man can't get then that man is very likely to be nagged into desperation.

"You look out, Wesley," she answered, alarm breaking the careful modulation of her voice. "That's the first time he ever refused us."

"He's broke—dead broke. I don't know how he can keep this up. The senator's nearly out. That's why he's sticking to Slade."

Wonderful.

Her soldier son in India had sent a cablegram, and Mrs. Blunderleigh's voice rang with pride when speaking of it to her impressed neighbors. "Yes, they be wonderful things, they telegraphs," said she. "Just fancy, it's come from Indy—all they thousands o' miles." "And so quick, too," put in her best friend. "Quick ain't the word for it," put in Mrs. Blunderleigh. "Why, when I got it the gum on the envelope wasn't dry."

Explains Baseball's Popularity.

Nothing equals baseball as a popular sport. Baseball stimulates the mind and invigorates, instead of exhausts the body. It can be played in any field, at almost no cost. Expense is the handicap which keeps tennis and golf out of the running as great popular sports. A baseball game may be played in two hours—an advantage which will ever make it more popular than cricket as an international game.

How to Help Backsliders

By REV. HOWARD W. POPE
Superintendent of Men, Moody Bible Institute
Chicago

TEXT—I will heal their backsliding; I will love them freely.—Hosea 14:4.

Backsliders may be divided into three classes.

1. Those who have never been converted, but who have once considered themselves Christians. The churches are full of people who at some time received a religious impulse, and who perhaps expressed their purpose to lead a Christian life, but who never really received Christ.

Such people must be shown in a kind and loving way that they have been mistaken or they will never be willing to make another trial. It is well to point out some of the evidences of the new birth, and let them see that they have never experienced it.

Romans 8:1 shows that the Christian is delivered from the guilt of sin. Ask them if they have ever been wholly free from a sense of guilt, and for what reason. I John 3:14 proves that we have passed from death unto life because we love the brethren. I John 3:21, 22 shows that an obedient Christian will have answers to prayer. I John 4:13 insures the fellowship of the Holy Spirit. Test a person with such passages and he will soon recognize his true position.

At the close of a service I was introduced to a young man who said to me, "I have tried this thing two or three times, and it did not seem to work, and I do not care to try it again." He spoke of conversion as if it were something like vaccination which did not "take" in his case.

"Were you ever really converted?"

"I do not know."

"Did you ever get a new heart?"

"I doubt if I did."

"You have been trying to live the Christian life without any Christ to help you, haven't you?"

"That just describes it."

"It is no wonder you have had a hard time. It is like trying to run a watch without a mainspring. You might shake it and the wheels would run a minute or two, but it would soon stop. Neither is it possible to lead a Christian life without the help of Christ who is the mainspring of it all.

"If you had in your heart to help you, the very Christ who gave the commandments, would you not be able to keep them?"

"I think I would."

"Listen then," I said, and I quoted Ezekiel 36:26, "A new heart will I give you, and a new spirit will I put within you; and I will take away the stony heart out of your flesh, and I will give you an heart of flesh. And I will put my spirit within you, and cause you to walk in my statutes, and ye shall keep my judgments and do them."

"This is God's offer to you—a new heart. Will you accept it?" In a moment or two he was on his knees asking God for a new heart.

II. The second class consists of those who have drifted away from God by disobedience, and are not anxious to return. They are like the prodigal before his money was spent. They are living a worldly life, and so long as health and prosperity continue, they get along fairly well without God, though they have many rebukes of conscience, and frequent longings for the good old days of fellowship with God.

With such people Jeremiah 2:5 is a good verse. Ask them what fault they could find with God that they have wandered from him. Jeremiah 2:13 is also good. Ask them if it is not true that their present life is evil and bitter as compared with the fellowship and joy which God provides for those who obey him. Show them the ingratitude and sin of such a course. Quote Jeremiah 2:19 and show them the folly of turning from a fountain of pure water to a broken cistern or a muddy pool. Then ask them if the self life is not a broken cistern as compared with that well of water which Christ opens in every heart that receives him.

III. Backsliders who are tired of sin and are anxious to return to God. They are like the prodigal after his money is spent, and after months of hunger and loneliness in the far country. For such Hosea 14:1-4 is a good passage, "O Israel, return unto the Lord thy God; for thou hast fallen by thine iniquity. I will heal their backsliding, I will love them freely; for mine anger is turned away from him."

The most effective passage, however, is Luke 15:11-24. This not only pictures the wretched condition of the backslider, but it shows the steps by which he must return, and the royal reception which awaits him. No one needs pity more than the backslider. He is despised by the world, he is a reproach to the church, he is alienated from God, and he condemns himself.

Religion should be the rule of life, not a casual incident of it.—Disraeli.

PROPERLY BAKED HAM

SOMEWHAT LENGTHY PROCESS, BUT WORTH WHILE.

Expert Gives Explicit Directions for Preparation of Dainty—May Be Soaked in Claret or Cider, as Is Preferred.

An old ham is best, but any thoroughly smoked, sound ham will do, writes Martha McCulloch Williams. Scrape it all over with a blunt-edge knife, then sprinkle well with a good washing powder and scrub in tepid water with a coarse cloth. Wring the cloth dry and wipe the ham, then rinse it in clear cold water and put it to soak over night. The next morning scrape it afresh if any superfluous matter has been loosened, rinse, and put it, skin side down, to cook in cold water, having a rack or plate in the bottom of the boiler to prevent scorching. Bring the ham to a brisk boil, then throw in a pint of cold water and let it stand two or three minutes; skim off the scum, then throw into the pot a dozen whole cloves, as many allspice and black peppercorns, a small pod of red pepper, slit lengthwise, and a blade of mace. Watch closely, and when boiling begins lessen the heat so that there will be bare simmering. The water must stand two inches above the meat—fill the boiler up as it wastes away. Keep on the lid, but loosely, and let the ham simmer until it is very tender—the time depends upon the age, weight and hardness of the ham. When the haunch bone shows a little through the meat the ham is likely to be done. Let it cool in the water in which it was boiled, take it out, drain well and trim off the rusty fat from the edges, and a little of the smoke darkened flesh underneath. (The hock had better be sawed off before boiling, but if that has not been done, loose the projecting bones and cut to a neat end.) Skin carefully. Then stick all over the fat portion whole cloves in a lozenge pattern, after which dust thickly with black pepper and paprika, sprinkle lightly with soft sugar, and fit the ham into a deep agate or earthenware vessel. Pour in sound claret or sweet cider and let it soak six hours. Then put on a low rack in an agate pan, pour the soaking liquor around and bake very slowly from one to two hours, according to size. Baste with the liquor in the pan two or three times each half hour; as the liquor evaporates add either cold water or more wine or cider. If the ham is very fat cool the pan after taking it up, and remove most of the grease on top; then add a dash of boiling water, a light seasoning of herbs and ten drops of onion juice; cook for three minutes, stirring constantly, and then pour into your gravy boat. Pass with the ham; else use the savor stews and minces.

It is, perhaps, worth while to add that in judging a ham, dry, black-green mold upon the flesh side is ranked by epicures the hallmark of excellence, highly desirable.

To approximate fairly the famous French concoction, jambon au madere, you should pour the boiling water off the ham while it is still hot, after the ham is done, then let it simmer for an hour in enough of either claret or cider to float it, turning the ham from time to time and letting it cool in the liquor.

Some Oyster Hints.

All styles of panned, creamed or stewed oysters should be cooked over an open fire or live steam, because they should start to cook the moment the heat strikes the pan or chafing dish and continue at a forced rate until finished.

The cooking of oysters can be greatly improved by the use of the chafing dish instead of the saucepan in connection with the recipes where the latter is mentioned.

Oysters most easily secured and mostly desired are Saddle Rocks, Rocks, Rockaways, Lynn Haven Bays, Shrewsburys, Blue Points, Cotuits, Lynnhavens, Cape Cods, Buzzards Bay, Norfolk, Cape May Salts, Cherry Stones, Chincoteagues and Oak Creeks.

Chocolate Pancakes.

This makes a delicious dessert for luncheon and one that is quickly prepared: Mix together two eggs, yolks and whites, with two heaping tablespoonfuls of sweetened chocolate that has been grated (if unsweetened brand is used, then the mixture must be sweetened to taste), half cupful of milk, half cupful of flour. Beat all together well. Fry like ordinary pancakes, brown on both sides and roll them, lay on a hot platter, sprinkle with powdered sugar and serve immediately.

Tagging the Piece Bag.

Here is a sensible way of tagging the contents of a piece bag: On the outside of the bag fasten the largest procurable safety pin. When dressmaking is over attach samples to this pin of every remnant that goes into the bag. A great amount of time and patience is saved by this simple device, for one can see at a glance just what the bag contains.—Racine Journal.

Cream Cheese Tarts.

Make tart shells of pastry, and fill them with a cream cheese, half a cupful of cream, a cupful of currants, three eggs beaten well and two tablespoonfuls of sugar. Bake for about half an hour.

FRUIT LAXATIVE FOR SICK CHILD

Every mother realizes, after giving her children "California Syrup of Figs" that this is their ideal laxative, because they love its pleasant taste and it thoroughly cleanses the tender little stomach, liver and bowels without griping.

When cross, irritable, feverish, or breath is bad, stomach sour, look at the tongue, mother! If coated, give a teaspoonful of this harmless "fruit laxative," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food passes out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. When its little system is full of cold, throat sore, has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, indigestion, colic—remember, a good "inside cleaning" should always be the first treatment given.

Millions of mothers keep "California Syrup of Figs" handy; they know a teaspoonful today saves a sick child tomorrow. Ask at the store for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups printed on the bottle. Adv.

INDIAN HAD SENSE OF HUMOR

At Least Enough to Get Off Good Joke on the Cross-Examining Lawyer.

From Fenimore Cooper and other authorities we have gained the impression that the Indian is a stolid, severe individual, with no sense of the white man's humor, but one red brother showed himself quite a civilized joker the other day in the United States court at St. Paul. He was a witness in a hotly contested case, and a lawyer was after him in the most approved style to cast discredit on his testimony. After apparently frightening the Indian with the awful consequences which would follow the slightest deviation from the truth, the lawyer solemnly said:

"Now, sir, I want you to tell me the exact truth, without any shuffling or evasion. I want you to look me square in the eye and tell me how you get your living?"

The Indian looked straight at the lawyer and, with that grave air familiar to all acquainted with the red man, simply said: "Eat."

The courtroom roared and the lawyer let the witness go.

When Greek Meets German.

A Companion subscriber, jealous of the claims of the classic languages to superiority even in the length of the words the ancients could upon occasion invent, writes thus:

"I notice that the Companion says, 'No one can compete with the Teuton in word joinery.' But what do you think of the following word that you can find in Liddell & Scott's Greek lexicon? 'Lepadotemachoselachogaleokranioleipsanodrimupotrimmatosilphioparaomelitokatakechumenokichlepikossuphophattoperisteralektruonoptegkephalokigklopeleiolagoosiraiobaphetraganopterugon.' The meaning is 'A dish compounded of all kinds of dainties, fish, flesh and fowl.'" That is certainly an elaborate way of saying "hash."—Youth's Companion.

OUR NATIONAL DISEASE

Caused by Coffee.

Physicians know that drugs will not correct the evils caused by coffee and that the only remedy is to stop drinking it.

An Arkansas doctor says:

"I was a coffee drinker for many years and often thought that I could not do without it, but after years of suffering with our national malady, dyspepsia, I attributed it to the drinking of coffee, and after some thought, determined to use Postum for my morning drink.

"I had the Postum made carefully according to directions on the pkg. and found it just suited my taste.

"At first I used it only for breakfast, but I found myself getting so much better, that I had it at all meals, and I am pleased to say that I have been relieved of indigestion. I gained 19 pounds in 4 months and my general health is greatly improved.

"I must tell you of a young lady in Illinois. She had been in ill health for many years, the vital forces low, with but little pain. I wrote her of the good that Postum did me and advised her to try it.

"At the end of the year, she wrote me that she had gained 40 pounds in weight and felt like herself again."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Postum comes in two forms:

Regular Postum—must be well boiled. 15c and 25c packages.

Instant Postum—is a soluble powder. A teaspoonful dissolves quickly in a cup of hot water and, with cream and sugar, makes a delicious beverage instantly. 30c and 50c tins.

The cost per cup of both kinds is about the same.

Here's a Tangle.

How easy it is to mix up the average business man was demonstrated the other day when the son of a local merchant leaned against his father's knee and innocently asked:

"Daddy, is today tomorrow?"

"No, my son, of course today isn't tomorrow," answered the father.

"But you said it was," continued the son.

"When did I ever say today was tomorrow?"

"Yesterday," answered the son.

"Well, it was; today was tomorrow yesterday, but today is today, just as yesterday was today yesterday but is yesterday today, and tomorrow will be today tomorrow, which makes today yesterday and tomorrow all at once. Now run along and play," and the father collapsed into his chair with a sigh of relief.—Louisville Times.

St. Genevieve.

St. Genevieve, the patron saint of Paris, was consecrated at the age of seven to the service of religion by St. Germanus, bishop of Auxerre, who chanced to pass through the village of Nanterre, where she lived, about four miles from Paris. She acquired a great reputation for sanctity. The church of St. Genevieve, completed in 1764, was named in her honor. During the revolutionary period it was withdrawn from the service of religion and called the Pantheon, but was afterward restored in name and to ecclesiastical uses.

QUIT MEAT IF KIDNEYS BOTHER AND USE SALTS

Take a Glass of Salts Before Breakfast If Your Back is Hurting or Bladder is Irritated.

If you must have your meat every day, eat it, but flush your kidneys with salts occasionally, says a noted authority who tells us that meat forms uric acid which almost paralyzes the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken, then you suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids, to cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's urinous waste get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acids of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

IF HAIR IS TURNING GRAY, USE SAGE TEA

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and abundant with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair fell out or took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, ready to use, for about 50 cents. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair and is splendid for dandruff, dry, itchy scalp and falling hair.

A well-known druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and abundant. Adv.

"PERFECTION TO THE FINISH," A GOOD MOTTO.

The problem of the unemployed is one that usually confronts the whole country during the winter months. The thousands demanding shelter and food in the large cities of the country would seem to indicate great distress among the laboring classes.

A Chicago official gave as the chief reason for the large "army of unemployed" in that city the refusal of the men to accept work when offered them. Out of 347 men assigned to work one day, according to a report made to Mayor Harrison by the superintendent of the municipal employment bureau, 199 failed to report, and 100 of these had been provided with street car tickets. According to the superintendent there were 2,555 jobs available, but it is daily becoming more difficult to find men who will take these places offered them.

"We want work," says one young man in New York, "but we're not going to work for starvation wages. Offer us $3 a day jobs and we'll go to work, otherwise we won't. What's the use of working and starving as well? It's easier to starve loafing."

If a man is a capable, careful worker and can give service worth $3 a day it would seem only fair that he should be able to get it, but how often, if the characters of the great army of unemployed and sidetracked people were analyzed, it would be found that most of these people have been accustomed to half do things. It is seldom that a person who does whatever he undertakes to do as well as it can be done is out of a situation, unless he possesses some other serious character defects. It is a fact that, although there are hundreds of thousands out of employment, almost every great concern in the country is constantly on the lookout for better employees, better clerks, better bookkeepers, better stenographers, better service everywhere. With a raised standard of service salaries would naturally increase.

I should advise a youth starting out in the world to take as his motto, "Perfect to the finish," for its adoption early in life may mean all the difference between success and failure.

"Oh, that is good enough!" has been the unsafe stone in the foundation of many a life which has caused the building to topple. A habit of incompleteness formed when young is the secret of innumerable failures.

The world is full of people who bemoan their hard luck and are constantly pitying themselves because fate is against them, because they cannot succeed as others do. The real cause of their failure generally lies in themselves. They do not throw their whole souls into their work. They only touch their employment with the tips of their fingers. They are half-hearted, absent-minded and lack energy, push, perseverance; they have no ambition-fires to melt the obstacles in their pathways, to weld together in one continuous chain the links of their efforts.

The world wants your best, and you should resolve early in life never to give anything but the best of which you are capable. Put your best thought, your best work, your best energy into everything you do. Make up your mind that you will never do anything by halves, no matter what others may do. Your life is worth too much to be thrown away in half doing things, or botching anything you undertake. It is not enough to do a thing pretty well; it should be done as well as it can be done.

POISON OF FATIGUE—ITS TRAGEDIES.

Nerve specialists say that a great many suicides are the direct result of exhausted brain cells.

Not long ago a boy in New York was driven to suicide from overtaxing his brain in an effort to pass difficult examinations in school. The boy was ambitious and was obliged to do errands before and after school in order to buy his clothing, and then he would sit up and study half the night. When the examinations came around he was in no physical condition to take them. His mentality was utterly depleted. The boy became despondent, melancholy, and several times tried to blow out his brains with a revolver; a last desperate attempt succeeded.

Hundreds of cases of this kind might be cited when boys and girls all over the country are driven to suicide, or permanently injure their health by overstudy, excessive brain stimulation.

Who can estimate the tragedies which have resulted from exhausted brain and nerve cells—from the poison of fatigue?

How often we pick up a newspaper and read of horrible accidents due most frequently to overtaxed nerves and overworked faculties. Quite recently a terrible railroad disaster, in which many precious lives were lost, was traced to the fact that the engineer had been compelled to work continuously for some thirty-six hours under a most terrific tension. This man had previously earned a high reputation for carefulness and strict attention to duty, and yet, on this occasion the poison of fatigue had so demoralized his faculties that he disregarded danger signals, thus causing the loss of many precious lives.

We all know that our ability deteriorates, that our efficiency is cut down when we are mentally exhausted. Our courage, our initiative, our perceptions, our power of fine discrimination and appreciation, as well as our observation and our hearing are impaired, because the blood and other secretions are loaded with poison, which benumbs the faculties.

No man can do his best when he is obliged to spur on his jaded faculties; when he feels his mentality lagging, and is compelled to force it to yield by pressure. There must be spontaneity in the thought or there will be no vividness of imagination, no certainty of memory.

I know a business man who has tremendous brain power, but much of his work is exceedingly ordinary and tame, because he does it when his brain is jaded and fagged. He is constantly working under a great strain. The result is that his judgment, which is very remarkable when he is rested, is much of the time poor, and he is frequently irritated because he makes foolish, unaccountable blunders.

We cannot cheat nature without paying the penalty. We may force the brain to do a little extra work one day, but we get the protest in reaction the next day. The brain will always do its maximum of work during the year if it is only required to give out each day the force which is generated in that day without drawing upon the reserve. Who overdraws from this daily supply faces mental bankruptcy.

When overfatigued many people make the mistake of sleeping just nine hours—when, as a matter of fact, they should sleep until they feel absolutely refreshed, renewed. It is only then that the debris, the broken-down tissues, all the poisons from the previous day's run, have been eliminated.

We have all had the experience of retiring at night completely discouraged over something we were trying to accomplish, and waking in the morning with an entirely changed mental attitude—new hope and a new resolve. This is due to the fact that the poisons have been eliminated during our sleep, which has also increased the resisting power of the body and filled the blood with new building material, new courage, new energy, new life. In fact, after a refreshing sleep we wake into a new world, a world of hope and expectation. This is why we should make it a life rule not to decide important things at night when tired and discouraged. We are apt to do things then which we will regret in the morning, after the poisons have been burned out of the system and we are made over into new creatures.

Bismarck on Russian.

Although Bismarck knew Russian well, he declined to take any notice of dispatches addressed to the German foreign office in that language. "My predecessor," he once related, "wrote to all the diplomatists in German, and they replied each in his own language—Russian, Spanish, Swedish and what not. I decided that all communications received in languages other than German, French, English and Italian should be left unnoticed. Budberg, the Russian ambassador in Berlin, wrote me screed after screed always in Russian. No answer was returned, and at last he came to ask the reason for my silence. 'There is a great pile of documents in Russian downstairs,' I told him; 'yours are probably amongst them. We have no one who understands Russian, and I have given instructions for all documents written in a language we do not understand to be put away in the archives.' It was then arranged that Budberg should write to us in French."

A Boy's Work.

As a general rule, the man that is worth anything to his country and the world is he who, when a boy, had learned to work. The only channel of reform lies in the direction of a boy's life. "The only worth, the only truth, the only happiness is in doing. This does not mean drudgery. It is the employment of one's thought or one's hands in the accomplishment of something of value to life. There is no value in mere learning. A man may know all mathematics and all classics and then be no more than a mere figurehead. And this disposition to work cannot be talked into a boy. It comes the same way a flower does—out from under some gentle influence. What that influence is is the greatest problem of life.—Columbus Ohio State Journal.

Quite Simple.

During a school tea a kindly lady sat regarding one of the young guests with evident alarm. Undismayed by the lady's glances, the young hopeful demolished plate after plate of bread and butter and cake. At last the lady could stand it no longer. Going up to the urchin she said:

"My boy, have you never read any book which would tell you what to eat, what to drink, and what to avoid?"

"Why, bless yer, ma'am," replied the young gentleman, with his mouth full of cake, "I don't want no book. It's very simple. I eats all I can, I drinks all I can, an' I avoids bustin'."

Her Only Excuse.

"Did you hear about Mrs. Midly's latest? She actually kissed her husband good-by at the railway station."

Sick Women Made Well

Reliable evidence is abundant that women are constantly being restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

The many testimonial letters that we are continually publishing in the newspapers—hundreds of them—are all genuine, true and unsolicited expressions of heartfelt gratitude for the freedom from suffering that has come to these women solely through the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Money could not buy nor any kind of influence obtain such recommendations; you may depend upon it that any testimonial we publish is honest and true—if you have any doubt of this write to the women whose true names and addresses are always given, and learn for yourself.

Read this one from Mrs. Waters:

CAMDEN, N.J.—"I was sick for two years with nervous spells, and my kidneys were affected. I had a doctor all the time and used a galvanic battery, but nothing did me any good. I was not able to go to bed, but spent my time on a couch or in a sleeping-chair, and soon became almost a skeleton. Finally my doctor went away for his health, and my husband heard of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and got me some. In two months I got relief and now I am like a new woman and am at my usual weight. I recommend your medicine to every one and so does my husband."—Mrs. TILLIE WATERS, 530 Mechanic Street, Camden, N.J.

From Hanover, Penn.

HANOVER, PA.—"I was a very weak woman and suffered from bearing down pains and backache. I had been married over four years and had no children. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound proved an excellent remedy for it made me a well woman. After taking a few bottles my pains disappeared, and we now have one of the finest boy babies you ever saw."—Mrs. C. A. RICKRODE, R.F.D., No. 5, Hanover, Pa.

Now answer this question if you can. Why should a woman continue to suffer without first giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial? You know that it has saved many others—why should it fail in your case?

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No one sick with woman's ailments does justice to herself if she does not try this famous medicine made from roots and herbs, it has restored so many suffering women to health.

A Splendid Chance.

"Turkey raising is an arduous business," said a wholesale poultry dealer of Baltimore. "Day and night you must look after your birds the same as you look after horses.

"California turkeys are very fine. They are very well taken care of. It is no snap to work on a California turkey farm, I tell you.

"I was visiting a California turkey farm last month when a boy applied for a job.

"'Your references are good. I'll try you,' said the farmer.

"'Will I have a chance to rise, sir?' the boy asked.

"'Yes,' said the farmer, 'a grand chance. I'll want you to have the feed mixed by four o'clock every morning.'"—Washington Star.

WAITING FOR YOU

Yes, waiting for every farmer or farmer's son—any industrious American who is anxious to establish for himself a happy home and prosperity. Canada's hearty invitation this year is more attractive than ever. Wheat is higher but her farm land just as cheap and in the provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta

160 Acre Homesteads are Actually Free to Settlers and Other Land at From $15 to $20 per Acre

The people of European countries as well as the American continent must be fed—thus an even greater demand for Canadian Wheat will keep up the price. Any farmer who can buy land at $15.00 to $30.00 per acre—get a dollar for wheat and raise 20 to 45 bushels to the acre is bound to make money—that's what you can expect in Western Canada. Wonderful yields also of Oats, Barley and Flax. Mixed Farming is fully as profitable an industry as grain raising. The excellent grasses, full of nutrition, are the only food required either for beef or dairy purposes. Good schools, markets convenient, climate excellent.

Military service is not compulsory in Canada but there is an unusual demand for farm labor to replace the many young men who have volunteered for service in the war. Write for literature and particulars as to reduced railway rates to Superintendent Immigration, Ottawa, Canada, or to Learn to Forget.

Caesar was so ready to forget that even Cicero, who was by no means a constant friend to him, relates, as a singular proof of his noble heart, that he never used to forget anything except the wrong done to him. Indeed, to pardon is a most beautiful revenge; but to forget is still more beautiful.—Petrarch.

The Idleness in Cities.

One overshadowing reason why there are so many idle people in the cities is that there is too much uncultivated land in the country. How long will it take the world to learn that there are not enough roller-top desk jobs to go round, whereas Nature has made it possible for all her children to make their food?—Houston Post.

Costly Cottage.

"Could you be satisfied with love in a cottage, dearest?" sighed the poor young man. "Certainly I could," responded the girl, who really loved him. "But there must be a breakfast room, a music room, parquetry flooring, and a big marble fireplace in the front hall."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Pleasure at Death.

A wise man shall not be deprived of pleasure even when death shall summon him: forasmuch as he has attained the delightful end of the best life—departing like a guest full and well satisfied; having received life upon trust, and duly discharged what office he accepts himself at departing.—Epictetus.

Italian Cigar-Lighter.

In a country village in Italy, Popular Mechanics tells us, we may see a slowly burning piece of rope supported on an iron stake. Its position just outside a cigar store suggests the use the smoker is to make of it. It is a crude cigar lighter, but certainly as suitable as the wooden Indian still used as a sign for a tobacco store.

Onion Cure for Colds.

A bacteriologist explains that there is no mystery about the onion cure. It is not like a charm which may prevail upon a wart to vanish, but is virtually a specific for the cure of colds in that the oil in the onion kills the microbes of "cold."

When Things Are Darkest.

When you get into a tight place and everything goes against you till it seems as if you couldn't hold on a minute longer, never give up then, for that's just the time and place that the tide will turn.—Harriet Beecher Stowe.

Daily Thought.

There is an idea abroad among moral people that they should make their neighbors good. One person I have to make good—myself. But my duty to my neighbor is much more nearly expressed by saying that I have to make him happy—if I may.—R. L. Stevenson.

Strict.

The man with the straggly beard was arranging a purchase with the salesman in a housefurnishing shop. "And will you have a hair mattress or one of sea grass?" asked the salesman. "Give me sea grass," replied the other. "I am a vegetarian."

True Test of Character.

The test of your character should be that you are a joy-bearing agent to the world.—Beecher.

Hopeless.

Greene—"Are there any really indestructible toys?" Gray—"None that I know of, except those that make an infernal noise."—Judge.

Many Disorders Come From the Liver.

Are you just at odds with yourself? Do you regulate living? Are you sometimes at odds with yourself and with the world? Do you realize what ails you? True you may be eating and sleeping well. Yet something is the matter. Constipation, headache, nervousness and bilious spells indicate a sluggish liver. The tried remedy is Dr. King's New Life pills. Only 25c at your druggist.

Man's Lowest Estate.

Whoever can give us the true psychology of hatred may make possible some escape from its malign and harmful influence. We commonly say that love is positive and hate is negative, but how quickly and easily at times the one turns into the other! While hate dominates us we are at our lowest estate.

Twist the Wire.

Pictures hung by a single wire have an annoying way of getting uneven, on account of the slipping of the wire on the picture hook. This can sometimes be avoided by first hanging the picture face to the wall and then turning it around. The single turn this makes in the wire near the hook prevents slipping.

Fighting Tuberculosis.

If there is one dictate above others where medicines are little and recovery depends upon leaving the body free to fight its own grim battle with death, it is tuberculosis. Good food, good air, sane wholesome living, are the specifics which science and common sense alike have discovered.

Humility of Knowledge.

The ignorant imagine the learned, whom they have never seen, to be always crying in dark sentences and fine language; the simplicity and humility of real knowledge—of, a Sir Isaac Newton—passes their understanding.—Catherine Stanley.

Your Share of Eggs.

American hens lay slightly more than three hundred million dollars' worth of eggs a year. That is, every person eats on an average three dollars' worth.—Farm and Fireside.

Common Failing.

How many people apparently prefer to remain morally ignorant, rather than know that truth which would make them morally uncomfortable!

THANKSGIVING DINNER

By MARY DARLING.

(Copyright, 1914, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"No, no," said Forest Harwood, meditatively, "there isn't anyone I can think of, dear."

"I have racked my brain, too, so I guess we'll have to eat our Thanksgiving dinner without guests this year," said his wife.

"I'm sorry Bess and John couldn't come, but they seemed to have planned something of their own," Harwood went on.

"They're going to be married in the spring, I believe?"

"Um-hu," mumbled Harwood, as he became interested in his morning paper.

On the morning of Thanksgiving day Mrs. Harwood announced that she was going to church.

"All right, dear; go ahead and I'll run down to the pond and have a try at the ice. If I find any woebegone looking individuals who seem not to be expecting a bite of turkey, may I bring them along?" he asked his wife as she left for the village church.

"The bird is big and there are plenty of 'trimmings,'" Mrs. Harwood replied.

Harwood reached the pond to find it already black with crowds of skaters. He joined them, and was about to go home after an hour's good exercise when his eyes fell upon John Adams.

"You, John? I thought you were going out of town for Thanksgiving dinner?" he exclaimed.

"I—yes, I had intended to, but it all fell through," the young man returned.

"Come along up to the house then, and have dinner with us. Where is Bess?" Harwood asked tactlessly.

"Bess? Ah—ph, she's having dinner with some relatives, I believe," John Adams managed to answer.

"Come on, Helen will be delighted. She's at church, as usual." And Harwood fairly dragged his friend home.

When Mrs. Harwood arrived she was smiling broadly as her husband opened the door for her. "I've found a guest for dinner. Guess who?"

"I'm not a good guesser—but so have I."

"Nuo is Marian Peck. She was in church alone and we sat together. It seems that she was to dine at her uncle's—John's stepfather, you know, but for some silly reason about Bess she wouldn't go at the last minute. So I asked her to come to us."

Forrest began to look worried. He said nothing.

"What's the matter? Aren't you pleased, dear?" asked Helen, anxiously.

"Oh—ah, yes, but my guest is none other than John Adams, so if it's dining with him that Marian is trying to avoid, she's strictly in it."

Mrs. Harwood laughed. "All we need now is Bess to make it a truly successful dinner party, eh, dear? Next time we'll let well enough alone and dine alone."

The telephone rang and the young wife ran to answer it. She returned in a moment wringing her hands. "Worse and more of it. It's Bess! She's in tears. Says she and John were to have had a cosy little dinner at some romantic inn, they both know about. Her family hadn't been able to get home from Europe, you know. But some way or other she—Bess—discovered that John would be breaking up a family party at home, a party of which his stepfather's niece, Marian, you know, was to be a member, and she refused to go with him. They quarreled, had words about Marian, and she's heartbroken, and lonely and is coming to dine with us! There! Can you beat it?"

"Well be some Thanksgiving!" Harwood remarked in current vernacular.

"Marian, the bone of contention, Bess and John, the quarreling lovers! Fine company!" returned Mrs. Harwood.

When all three guests were in the house, Bess Burleson upstairs taking off her outer wraps, Marian Peck in the living-room by the fire, and John Adams bowling in the library, the host and hostess met in the hall.

"They're here," whispered Helen in her husband's ear.

Forrest nodded. "Don't I know it?"

"I'm going to let it work itself out," explained Helen.

And at that moment Bess descended the stairs, Marian stepped from the living-room and John appeared in the library door.

There was absolute silence as the five looked from one to another.

"What a jolly little party!" said Forrest, boldly.

"Oh—ah—yes—very jolly, very jolly!" echoed John Adams.

And then and there there were explanations.

And with that, thanksgiving and congratulations were mingled so closely that they could not be separated.

Turned Down.

"Last night I hot-footed around to old Mr. Bloxster's house and asked him for his daughter's hand."

"Well?"

"Then I cold-footed back."

Quite So.

"Young Whitcomb should get on in the world. He's a plugger."

"Yes. What's he doing?"

"Dentistry."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Formosa's Leading Industry.

In spite of all its difficulties the camphor industry is Formosa's chief source of revenue. Over eight million pounds of the drug, valued at nearly three millions dollars, are marketed every year. Once the head-hunters are subdued, the annual crop will be much larger and the price to the ultimate consumer much lower than at present.

Fabulous Cockatrice.

A cockatrice was a fabulous animal of the basilisk species. Its distinguishing characteristic was a crest on cock like a hoster's. Sir Thomas Browne, in his "Vulgar Errors," draws a clear distinction between a cockatrice and a basilisk. He even argues for the existence of such an animal.

Letter From California.

Mrs. S. L. Benton, formerly of Barrington but now of Los Angeles, California, wrote a letter to the REVIEW, part of which we publish:

"We from the old home town are so glad to read of the home folks and of the improvements there even though they may be few.

"The long and much needed new depot surely must be greatly appreciated and a great improvement to Barrington. We can hardly realize it is so cold and icy there when it is so warm here just like spring. We have had fresh vegetables out of our own garden every day all winter and the roses and calla lillies have been in full bloom and the hills are so green and pretty since our recent showers. People are planting potatoes and all kinds of garden stuff now. We get fine oranges and lemons for five cents per dozen. Eggs are the only thing we have to pay more for than you do.

"I regret hearing of so many from Barrington being in hospitals and that others have had accidents from icy sidewalks. The good old people who have passed away surely will be greatly missed.

"I spent one day last week with Mrs. Haworth. She surely is very bright and smart for one of her years and enjoys life these days. I expect Miss Nettie Lombard to spend next Sunday with me. There are many here from Illinois I know but have seen but few of them yet though I have been here four months. I have visited at Long Beach several times also Pasadena and Pomona. All are fine places to live. I picked oranges and lemons on Thanksgiving day in Pomona and also roses. The orange groves are beautiful.

"New Years day I saw the grand Flower parade at Pasadena which surely was grand with 100,000 people there. In the afternoon I sat on a porch and wrote a letter. Could you do that in Barrington?"

Rehfeldt-Leis.

Louis Rehfeldt, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gustav Rehfeldt of Lake street, was married Wednesday evening, February 3, at seven o'clock to Miss Mamie Leis of Chicago. Rev. H. H. Thoren performed the ceremony which took place at the Rehfeldt residence which had been arranged with flowers for the occasion and looked very attractive. Miss Freda Rehfeldt acted as a bridesmaid and Edward Rehfeldt accompanied his brother as groomsman, while Miss Evelyn Habermann of Chicago served as matron of honor. Miss Leis wore a gown of white silk.

Miss Habermann and her mother, Mrs. Ida Habermann, and another lady friend from Chicago were the only ones present besides the groom's family; Miss Leis' people are at a distance and her mother is not living. Mr. Rehfeldt is an employee of the Hounte Candy company of Chicago and came to Barrington a few years ago with his parents, his new wife has been self-supporting in the city and they will now live at 3341 Lincoln avenue.

SHORT LOCAL ITEMS.

At the meeting January 27 of the Women's Relief Corps the first birthday luncheon for 1915 was served by Mrs. George Banks, Mrs. D. H. Richardson, Mrs. Elizabeth Fletcher and Mrs. William Ricke whose birthdays occur in that month. Sewing was also done for one of the members.

Wilson White of Maryville, Missouri, is living at the home of his aunt, Mrs. John Jahnke of Liberty street, and attending the Greer Automobile school, Wabash avenue, Chicago, for a two months course in general instruction on motor cars in order to become an efficient garage man.

The following pupils of the Flint Creek school, northwest of town, were neither absent nor tardy during the month of January: Robert and Fred Miller, Thomas, Frank and Robert Hartjen and Ella Kinfield. Twenty-four scholars were enrolled during the month with an average attendance of twenty.

Tuesday, February 2, was a cloudy day and that is said to mean an early spring, for tradition declares that on that day the ground hog comes out of the hole in which he spent the winter to see if his shadow is visible, if it is he judges that the cold will endure for six weeks and if he sees no shadow he rejoices for he knows spring is near.

Lincoln's birthday, Friday, February 12, the Women's Relief Corps will celebrate the day by entertaining the members of the local Grand Army of the Republic at the hall of the two organizations in the Sodt building in the afternoon. That evening the ladies will give a social to the public to which all interested are invited. There will be no charge and a program will be arranged by the Patriotic Instructor of the Corps, Mrs. Sarah Dohmeyer.

Country school teachers from this part of Lake county went to Waukegan on Friday and Saturday to attend the first county teacher's meeting of the year. The number of teachers present was about three hundred who listened to very fine lectures on school interests by professors from the state normal school at DeKalb and Illinois university. Many of the teachers knitted and embroidered during the talks, causing some amusement for their industry and "killing two birds with one stone."

Herman Garbisch is improving this week at the Augustana hospital, Chicago, where he was operated on January 12, for appendicitis. Mrs. Garbisch has gone in from Barrington every day to visit him and says that he expects to be allowed to sit up the last of this week and perhaps come home next week. His long siege of illness following this operation was caused by poison in the system due to the bursting of the appendix which has happened several times during the past few years.

Ladies who called Tuesday afternoon to inspect the new Stone candy kitchen, as invited to do by Frank Stone, found the room in splendid sanitary condition and the equipment, while small, still very up-to-date and adapted to the business of candy making. Ingredients used were neatly displayed and Mr. Stone's talk about candy making very interesting. He recently spent time in Chicago learning about the work and has had a candy maker out here three times recently to learn his methods. An especial gas furnace for cooking in big kettles is installed.

The Women's Foreign Missionary society met with Mrs. Frank Harrower Tuesday afternoon. In spite of bad weather, 24 ladies were present to enjoy the program on "The Child at Play and at Work." Mrs. J. A. Calkins had charge of the program and Mrs. G. A. Lytle, conducted the devotional exercises. The Mystery Box created much interest as well as calling into play the mathematical ability of the participants. The subject for the March meeting will be "The Child at School." The society will meet at the home of Mrs. Cowan.

Revival meetings which have been conducted this past week at the Salem church have not been as well attended as expected but it is due to the very cold weather at present and the fact that it is hard for the country people to come to town on that account and also because of the foot-and-mouth disease quarantine regulations. Rev. H. H. Thoren has been in charge of the meetings so far; this Thursday evening he will be assisted by the Rev. Herman Lambert of the Adams street Evangelical church and next week Rev. L. C. Schmidt of the the Kimball street church will be here.

Farewell Surprise Party.

Miss Gertrude Hager of Main street, third daughter of Alderman Hager, entered the Metropolitan Business college, Chicago, on Monday to take a course in stenography. She has been an employee at the Barrington laundry for nine years and the twenty girls who are workers there gave her a surprise party last Thursday night. Misses Emma Hager and Laura Wille arranged the party and all the girls enjoyed the evening's fun.

Why 2,750,000 People Read The Chicago Sunday Tribune

The Sunday Tribune has 550,000 subscribers. There are five readers it is estimated, to every subscriber of a newspaper. The Sunday Tribune, therefore, has 2,750,000 readers. It ought to, and WILL HAVE 5,000,000.

Here are some of the reasons:

The Sunday Tribune is the world's greatest newspaper.
The Sunday Tribune is a greater magazine than any monthly.
The Sunday Tribune has the best national capital news.
The Sunday Tribune has the ablest editorial writers.
The Sunday Tribune's comic section is unsurpassed.
The Sunday Tribune's color printing process has no superior and few equals.
The Sunday Tribune's society news embraces New York, Newport and Washington as well as Chicago.
The Sunday Tribune has the two best dramatic critics—Percy Hammond in Chicago, Burns Mantle in New York.
The Sunday Tribune has the best household department, including Lillian Russell, Marion Harland, Bessie Ascough and other authorities.
The Sunday Tribune leads in war news and features, pictures and maps. It has three famous newspaper men—Joseph Medill Patterson, John T. McCutcheon and James O'Donnell Bennett—on the battle ground of Europe. Edwin F. Weigle, the Tribune staff photographer who scooped the world on war pictures at Vera Cruz, is with Mr. Patterson.

These are only a few of The Sunday Tribune's features. Limit of space forbids enumeration of more.

CHARITIES BOARD MAKES NEW RULE

Patients Not to Be Alone When They Leave Institution.

MUST HAVE AN ATTENDANT

Will Not Be Allowed to Go, in Crowds, to Circuses, Public Meetings and Other Places Without Guard.

Springfield.—Hereafter when patients of state charitable institutions leave the grounds of these institutions, it must be with a guard, either an officer of the hospital or a court officer. This order, which has several other modified phases from conditions which have existed heretofore, has gone out from the offices of the state board of administration.

The orders provide in substance:

That orders which hitherto have permitted patients to go about in institution towns are rescinded, and the patients cannot now be paroled beyond the limits of the institution grounds.

Patients cannot longer go, in crowds, to circuses, public meetings and the like.

The new orders do not, however, affect the rule by which patients may be paroled for 30 days to relatives or friends.

These orders have come from a feeling in towns where institutions are located that inmates have been given too many privileges," said Col. Frank D. Whipp, fiscal supervisor of the state board.

It is recalled that not long ago a patient in Chicago state hospital, while on a leave of absence, went home and killed his wife. This, it is said, was one of the contributing causes of the board's action.

"We do not wish to enact a single rule which will retard the health of patients," said Colonel Whipp, "but we feel duty bound to respect the rights of citizens in towns where institutions happen to be located."

Appropriations for Fair Grounds.

The board of agriculture has prepared its budget of expense for the preparation of buildings and grounds at the state fair grounds which will be presented to the legislature in the course of time. Secretary M. B. Davidson is of the belief that the demands are very reasonable and that the assembly will look with favor on at least most of the items. The total required to do what the board has in mind will amount to approximately $66,200, according to a list prepared in the board office.

Among the important items are the following:

Four cattle barns	$20,000
Fire escapes for exposition buildings	2,500
Sanitary kitchen and toilets for the boys' state fair school	5,000
Permanent sanitary dining houses	10,000
Children's nursery	1,200
Free grand stand addition	20,000
Building seats in the coliseum nearer the ground	5,000
Subway under race track	2,500

The large items are the four new cattle barns, which the board considers absolutely necessary if the high standard now maintained in the display of fine stock is to be maintained.

The free grand stand, which will be built without covering, if the appropriation is allowed, is much needed in the opinion of the board and ought to be provided for at the earliest possible moment. A demand for a place where persons can witness the races and the events without paying a gate fee in addition to the entrance fee is in much demand, and it is to stop complaints against the lack of such a stand that the board is taking the present action.

An improvement which the board is also emphasizing and which will cost comparatively little money is the subway under the race track. It is the plan to scoop out the center of the track and use it as a place to park automobiles which at present are a nuisance in every nook and cranny of the grounds.

The sanitary eating houses are suggested strongly by the state board of health and the board of agriculture is desirous of complying with the spirit of the health bureau's suggestions.

Named by Governor Dunne.

Governor Dunne appointed the following delegates to the International Press congress at San Francisco July 5-10: R. O. Phillips, Chicago Tribune; Arthur Crawford, Chicago Herald; Richard J. Finnegan, Chicago Journal; George N. Brunk, State Register, Springfield; S. Leigh Call, State Journal, Springfield; H. O. Crews, News-Record, Springfield.

Articles of Incorporation.

The following corporations were licensed by Secretary of State Stevenson:

Atlas Cut Stone company, Chicago; capital stock, $2,000. Incorporators—Charles Ehler, Samuel E. Moss and John E. Rent.

Catch-Basin Sanitary company, Chicago; capital, $1,000. Incorporators—Rudolph B. Salmon, Luther W. Benson and Charles W. Stifel.

Lane Hardware company, Robinson; capital, $10,000. Incorporators—G. H. Lane, W. G. Eaton and J. C. Lane.

Will Ask Changes in Election Law.

Changes in the state election law creating commissions, which is now in force in a number of cities of Illinois, will be asked at the present session of the Illinois general assembly. Amendments to the state laws, which will reduce the cost of elections to municipalities, and shorter ballots will be recommended in a bill to be offered to the state legislature by a special committee named at a meeting of the State Association of Election Commissioners. The bill will also urge the elimination of a primary election for the selection of circuit judge, with an aim to make the election of the judiciary as near nonpartisan as possible.

The special committee to draft the bill will be composed of J. H. Barnhart of Danville, president of the state association, and a representative from Springfield, Chicago and Peoria, who are to be announced later.

Among the changes to be recommended to the legislature are the following:

To amend the number of registration days as provided for in the present law.

To shorten the ballot, by a provision for more appointive officers, and reduce the number to be elected by the people.

To abolish the primary election for judges of the circuit court and to make the selection of the judiciary as near nonpartisan as possible.

The committee will hold a conference in Springfield in a short time when the bill will be drafted.

Orders Restricting Paroles.

The state board of administration has issued an order restricting the parole of patients from state insane asylums.

The new ruling is divided into two parts. One section provides that no patient of the insane asylums shall be allowed to go into town on shore parole. Superintendents are still possessed of the power to grant 30-day parules to patients, when the latter are going to the home of their relatives or friends. This is now specified by law.

The second division of the new order provides that no patient may attend a circus, theater, street fair or other such entertainment outside the grounds of the institution.

Says State Lax in Cattle Epidemic.

Loose quarantine methods in vogue in handling the hoof-and-mouth plague and the appointment of "hotel political" as members of the live stock commission were criticized by President E. G. Stone of the Illinois Live Stock Breeders association in his annual address before that body at Springfield.

He told the breeders that the plague is the most vital issue now in the state and that all other questions must be put aside and the members "go to war," acting as one man to stamp out the disease. He said the epidemic is a state-wide calamity to breeders and unless it is wiped out Illinois would be isolated from other states.

Lax quarantine methods in the state had permitted Illinois to be the dumping ground for diseased animals from other states, he added, and as a result 14 states had quarantined against Illinois, thus doing a severe injury to live stock interests.

He declared the state board should have quarantined against Michigan and Indiana at the outbreak of the disease there. He urged live stock men to cooperate in fighting the disease and pointed out the success in other states through harmony in operation between federal and state governments.

The meeting addressed a telegram to Col. George Fabyan at Geneva asking him to use his influence in having Wallace Norton dismiss the injunction proceedings recently started restraining the state from slaughtering live stock afflicted with or exposed to the disease, so that the authorities might have a chance to attempt to combat the plague along the new lines which have been laid down.

An invitation also was sent to Colonel Fabyan and President Graham of the Kane County Improvement association, asking them to go to Springfield and confer with Governor Dunne and the state authorities regarding the disease.

The first vouchers of the $600,000 received in Chicago as the government's one half of the appraised value of animals slaughtered so far because of the plague were distributed yesterday. The first payment, which amounted to $18,015, went to Darlington & Co., stockers and feeders, for 516 cattle killed by government inspectors at the yards in November.

Work of disinfecting and cleaning the stock yards progressed rapidly yesterday in spite of the zero weather. Huge boilers filled with hot water were used in flooding the pens to melt the ice and snow so that the disinfectants might destroy any germs. It was expected that the disinfecting work would be completed by Sunday night, and an immediate request will be made then that the new embargo against outgoing shipments of cattle be lifted by the department of agriculture.

STATE NEWS BRIEFS

BLOWS UP BRIDGE

SPAN OVER ST. CROIX RIVER DAMAGED—CONNECTS U. S. AND CANADA.

PRISONER SAYS HE IS GUILTY

Man Named Horn Arrested Near Vanceboro by Sheriff, Declares in Statement That Canada Is Part of the Enemy's Country.

Vanceboro, Me., Feb. 4.—The International railway bridge over the St. Croix river was damaged by a dynamite explosion early Tuesday morning, and soon afterward Werner Horn, who says he is a German officer, was arrested on the American side. The explosion was intended to hamper the transportation of war supplies from Canada to England.

The eastern one of the three stone piers which support the bridge was destroyed by some high explosive with a detonation which rocked the houses in Vanceboro, shattering the windows of the railroad station and alarming the residents on the Canadian side of the river.

Governor Wood of New Brunswick said: "I shall at once take the necessary steps to secure an investigation of the destruction of this bridge."

The bridge was a steel structure, built in 1910. It was 1,200 feet long.

A man named Horn, who says he is a German army officer, has been arrested in connection with the blowing up of the railway bridge over the St. Croix river at Vanceboro and officials of the Maine Central railroad declare he has practically admitted his guilt.

Horn was arrested on United States soil near Vanceboro by Sheriff George W. Hoss. He was taken to Vanceboro, where he was examined by officials of Washington county.

Horn was asked why he had dynamited the bridge, and made answer, according to the police, that his country was at war with Great Britain, and Canada was a part of the enemy's country. As proof he fell in the river, for his clothing had been soaked through and frozen on him.

Railway officials said that the bridge could be repaired for regular traffic within two or three days.

LOSS OF LIFE IN STORM

Chicago, Feb. 4.—The storm-delayed sections of the Northern Pacific's North Coast limited reached Chicago Tuesday, hours late, and their passengers told a thrilling story of the fight against a blizzard and numbing cold throughout Minnesota and Wisconsin. The entire northwest was in the grip of a blizzard again Tuesday that tore down telegraph wires and blocked many trains.

The loss of life has been considerable, according to the meager reports coming in over the crippled wires. Ohio and Indiana faced floods. Scores of men were put to work at Dayton, O., dynamiting ice jams to prevent a repetition of the flood disasters of 1913. Near Quincy, Ill., the South Bear Creek levee went out, flooding the lowlands.

With the Ohio past the 30-foot mark, the flood stage of 35 feet is expected at Evansville, Ind. Farmers in the bottoms are moving out their stock and grain.

BRITAIN TO PAY FOR CARGO

Ambassador Page Tells Washington Treat Food on the Steamer Wilhelmina Will Be Seized.

Washington, Feb. 4.—Walter Hines Page, the American ambassador at London, cabled the state department on Tuesday that Great Britain will actually pay for the foodstuffs cargo of the steamship Wilhelmina, which is on its way from New York to Bremen. Ambassador Page explains that Great Britain will pay for the cargo solely for the reason that the Wilhelmina started before she had knowledge of the German decree which took over the acquisition of foodstuffs in the open sea.

David Starr Jordan, at a peace meeting at the Hotel Astor in New York, said to a reporter:

"Half the world at war, and the counsel we are getting is that we must arm more heavily. That counsel reminds me of the African kings.

"An African king feasted a white explorer royally. Then, at the end of the feast, 300 girls were led forward.

"'Choose from among these 300,' said the king, 'a wife.'

"But the explorer blushed and stammered:

"'Oh, but if I took one, then the remaining 299 would be jealous.'

"'That is easily remedied,' the king answered. 'Take all.'"

Don't Give Up!

Nowadays deaths due to weak kidneys are 70% more common than 20 years ago, according to the census. Overwork and worry are the causes. The kidneys can't keep up, and a slight kidney weakness is usually neglected.

If you have backache or urinary disorders, don't mistake the cause. Fight the danger. More cases of pain, headache, etc., and the use of Doan's Kidney Pills ought to bring quick relief.

An Illinois Case

Mrs. Narcissa Wagoner, Missouri Ave., Carterville, Ill., says: "For two years I had terrible backaches and headaches along with dizzy and nervous spells. I was restless and mornings felt so tired I could hardly do my housework. I steadily got worse and during one attack was unconscious. Doctors said their medicine could be done. The first box of Doan's Kidney Pills helped me and six boxes cured me. I now feel stronger than I have for years."

JAPANESE RED CROSS CORPS GOES TO FRONT

The Japanese Red Cross contingent, bound on a mission of mercy that carries it half way around the globe, photographed in New York before it sailed for England. It is headed by Dr. Jiro Suzuki (at right in first row) and the nurses are the pick of the medical corps of the Japanese army, every one having been decorated for efficiency and bravery.

PAINTS HORRORS OF WAR'S WORK

Nellie Bly Describes Awful Scenes Witnessed in Red Cross Hospital.

SOUL SHRINKS FROM SIGHT

Wounded, Frozen, Starved, Thousands Are Dying in Agonizing Torture and Other Thousands Are Being Rushed to the Same Fate.

By NELLIE BLY.

(International News Service.)

Budapest.—Ten languages are spoken in the hospital, and nurses, German, Austrian, Galitzin, Hungarian and Servian, are employed so that patients will always have nurses who speak their language.

They have also a series of chapels, Catholic, Protestant and Hebrew. Off each ward are small soundproof rooms called "death chambers."

Patients on the point of death are removed to these rooms to spare the feelings of their fellow comrades. Smoking rooms, glass partitioned, are also an adjunct to each ward.

This hospital accommodates 2,000 wounded. The kitchen is superb and needs a column to properly describe it. They showed with pride a large American refrigerator. The doctors and nurses each have their sleeping, eating and rest departments. One large hall gayly decorated with the national colors, is used for the amusement of the convalescents. Every kind of shows are given and concerts.

Men were being received from a train, so we went down to see them. We talked to them, as detachments of 20 were taken at a time to the bath.

I cannot praise too highly the wonderful executive ability of those who conceived and established the astounding perfection of these two hospitals. Nothing is wanting to aid and assist nature to save and heal what man is so inhumanly torturing and destroying.

We had scarcely reached the Astoria when I had a telephone call from Doctor MacDonald.

Called to Hospital.

"I want you to get into a taxi and come here, Miss Bly," he said, "I have received just now the worst cases I have ever seen in my entire life. They may interest you."

I rushed to the American Red Cross hospital. It is located in Mexico street in a large building, formerly used as a home for the blind. I flew in the door and up the stairs over which floats a 50-foot American flag.

Doctor MacDonald, grave and sad, met me at the head of the stairs.

"Come into the operating room," he said, taking my hand. "I have the most frightful case I ever saw."

Mr. Schriner, who had enough misery for one day, had tried to induce me not to come. Failing in that none long. Silently he kept at my side.

The operating room was in confusion. On the floor was blood. Filling pails and in piles were bloody bandages. I tried not to see. I began to when I had not come.

Four American Red Cross nurses stood gravely around an operating table. Doctor MacDonald pointed to two bandaged stumps. I could see one foot was gone at the ankle, the other apparently half way to the knee.

"This is a Russian," said the doctor. "He was wounded by a shot through his body. For eight days he lay in the trench unattended. His feet froze. He was put on a freight train, and when we received him an hour ago his feet had dropped off. Doubtless in the car, for we never saw them, and the last blood the poor fellow had was pouring from his open veins. We carried him here and bandaged him up, but he cannot live many minutes longer. He has no pulse now. Come, look at him."

A Dreadful Sight.

Come, look reader, with me! My whole soul shrank from the sight. The doctor took me by the hand. I kept my eyes away from the face! I was afraid to look upon.

"Look at this body," said the doctor. I looked—I shuddered. The clay pallor of death. The ribs cutting the skin. Bones, bones, no flesh anywhere.

The head turned. Great, hollow black eyes looked into mine. Transfixed, I stood, heartsick, soul-sad. Those great hollow eyes searched mine. They tried to question me. They spoke soul language to soul. The lips parted, a moan, a groan of more than physical agony. He spoke. I could not understand. His words were a sound my ears shall never forget. The appeal, the longing, the knowledge!

"What does he say?" I cried, unable to stand it. "Can no one understand? Can't you find someone to speak to him?"

A nurse smoothed his forehead. An attendant held fast the pale, pale hands.

"The attendant understands," the doctor said, and to him, "What does he say?"

Asked for Children.

"He is asking for his children," was the low reply.

The hollow, black eyes turned again to search mine. I could not endure their question. I had no answer to give.

"Let me go!" I said to the doctor.

The low moans seemed to call me back, but I walked steadfastly toward the door and down the corridor.

"Could emperors and czars and kings look on this torturing slaughter and ever sleep again?" I asked the doctor.

"They do not look," he said gently. "Only by witnessing such horrors can one realize them."

"Miss Bly," cried Von Leidenforst, running down the hall, "that poor fellow just died!"

This is only one case. Travel the roads from the scene of battle; search the trains; wounded, frozen, starved thousands are dying in agonizing torture—not hundreds, but thousands. And as they die thousands are being rushed into their peat-filled trenches to be slaughtered in the same way.

Nellie Bly at the Front.

NO LONGER NEEDS PENSION

Aged Woman Returns Check to Government, Saying She Does Not Need Money.

Washington.—Mrs. Catherine A. Richards of Worcester, Mass., for many years on the pension rolls of the United States government, has sent back her most recent quarterly check for $36 to the pension bureau with the information that she by no longer in need of the money. Mrs. Richards is nearly eight-eight years old. The pension she received was granted to her as the dependent mother of a son killed in the Civil war. The letter said:

"I write to say that, in view of my advanced age and poor health, shall drop my pension, or have you do so; and take my name from the list of pensioners. I do this with kindly feelings toward all concerned, and thank the best of governments for all its favors to me in the loss of my precious son, who gave his life, with thousands of others, that the nation might live. I have enough income to make me comfortable the remainder of the time I may stay, being nearly eighty-eight, born in 1827. Dear sir, I do not know of any papers that I should return. Should there be any, will you please advise, and accept for your kindness and patience shown to me many thanks and good wishes for happiness and prosperity."

GETS TWO LICENSES TO WED

Feared Business Might Interfere With Original Plans So He Prepared for Emergency.

Woodland, Cal.—To make certain that there would be no possible hitch in the arrangements, Charles F. Johnston, local garage man, obtained a marriage license in Woodland recently to wed Joan R. Erringer, a Williams girl, although the couple had originally planned to be married in San Francisco. Later Johnson contributed his second $2 marriage certificate fee to the county clerk of San Francisco, and the wedding was solemnized according to schedule.

It is supposed that the two feared business affairs might possibly prevent the ceremony being performed in San Francisco, and so obtained a license from the Yolo county clerk in case of an emergency.

IN THE FATHERLAND

INTERESTING BITS OF NEWS FROM THE GREAT GERMAN EMPIRE.

WHAT'S DOING IN OLD HOME

Summary of the Most Important Happenings in the Land of the Kaiser —Timely Items for the German Readers.

"To declare war must have fallen heavily upon Kaiser Wilhelm?" was a question put to Count von Moltke, former chief of staff of the German army. Striking his fist on the table and otherwise giving evidence of his emotion, General von Moltke answered: "Very heavily, indeed. Do people ever stop to consider how tremendous is the responsibility of a conscientious monarch who must pledge the blood of his people? That step a monarch like the emperor takes only when the life and death of his people is at stake." "Does your excellency believe that peace soon will come?" "The war can last a long time yet. Our victories in Poland are of the greatest importance. To the French they are bitterly disappointing, spoiling their hopes of an advance. The Russian masses have entirely collapsed. You may be firmly convinced that Germany will not perish; we will be victorious."

• • •

Gen. Erich von Falkenhayn, chief of the German staff, says: "Our present situation is excellent. We have carried the war into the enemy's country on both fronts; we are still there after five months of war. Our present lines are very strong; the advantage is all on our side thus far. It is wrong to interpret the operations in Flanders as an attempt on our part to reach Calais and outflank the allied armies. On the contrary, that phase of the campaign is the result of an attempt on the part of the French and British to force their way north to separate us from the sea and envelop our right flank and rear, relieve Antwerp and oblige us to retire from Belgium. Their plan was the father of counter-stroke the success of this operations in Flanders. They have not outflanked us and we are still there."

• • •

"We call the Germans the Chocolate Soldiers," writes a British soldier from the front, "because they appear to be always eating chocolate. When they are wounded or sick, by night and day, it's all the same. We have found some of their dead with cakes of chocolate between their fingers. During one of our Christmas armistices one of the German soldiers told me that the chocolate ration had been recommended by scientists as a convenient and exceedingly nutritious food, and had sustained them very well in some of their long marches where other foods were not available."

Although he regretted the necessity of the step, Field Marshal Paul von Hindenburg has announced that he would appreciate a partial, and if possible, complete cessation of the congratulatory letter-writing of which he has been both the subject and object. He has found many of them amusing, especially one in which a young school girl asked him to send her a "small" Russian, yet he thinks the mails should be used at this time for more serious purposes.

• • •

Rudolph Havenstein, president of the Reichsbank and one of the foremost financial authorities of Germany, asserts that the country will be able to meet any burden which may be imposed by the war upon its financial and economic resources. "I not only hope but I know that we shall be able to fight through this immense struggle. In the domain of financial and economic affairs, we are equal to every demand, however long the war may last."

• • •

Germany is becoming wrought up over what she believes to be an anti-German attitude of the people of the United States. The growing feeling of resentment has crystallized about the semi-official note of protest against the sale of munitions of war to the allies by American manufacturers. Persons in high positions have expressed themselves in terms of indignation at the alleged display of friendliness for the allies by Americans.

• • •

Dr. Johannes Kaempf, member of the reichstag, was present at a luncheon given at the American club which was attended by American Ambassador James W. Gerard, American Consul General Julius Lay and other prominent Americans. Ambassador Gerard welcomed Doctor Kaempf, who, in his response, called attention to the friendly relations between the United States and Germany and expressed the hope that they would continue undisturbed.

The official Reichs Anzeiger announces that prizes have been set aside for special military achievements. Three of the four prizes are aimed against England and consist of sums of money varying in value from $125 to $625. These amounts will be awarded to the first soldier who steps on the soil of Great Britain as combatant; the crew of an airship which before December 31, 1915, accomplishes the first flight to the English coast and drops a bomb on English territory, and the aviator who drops the first bomb on Dover.

ILLINOIS BREVITIES

Rockford.—Amos Pruteman, a traveling salesman, who moved to Rockford from Springfield recently, was found insane from grief over the death of a friend.

McLeansboro.—The county board of supervisors has offered a reward of $500 for the arrest of the person who broke in the county clerk's office and stole the contested ballots.

Merrijl.—A university extension short agricultural course, opened in this city beginning February 1 and continuing six weeks. It is being held under supervision of A. H. Cole.

Bloomington.—Farmers in the vicinity of Sweet are excited over the discovery of gold. A report has been received from a Chicago assayist showing the deposits of $21 to the ton of earth.

Morrisonville.—Anna Lee Grindy, fifty-two years old, widow of Dr. G. W. Grundy, who died January 21, died at her home here. Both were victims of pneumonia and both were former residents of St. Louis.

Rockford.—Mrs. Amelia Nine, eighty-nine years old, a resident of Carroll county since 1837, is dead. She is survived by a twin sister, Mrs. Adella Sheard. They were believed to be the oldest twin sisters in Illinois.

Peoria.—Mrs. Louise Block, widow of Henry C. Block, a wealthy pioneer merchant, died from the effects of poison taken by mistake. Her throat was burned with muriatic acid which she took for a gargle mistaking it for listerine. Mrs. Block was seventy years old.

Chicago.—Miss Jennie Sears, who disappeared from the University of Illinois January 15 and wrote sad letters from Chicago which led friends to fear she had committed suicide, has been found. Was identified when she called for shelter at a Salvation Army home here and has been taken back to her home in Sullivan by her father, George V. Miller.

Pana.—Mrs. Ella Davis of Tower Hill received a letter from her husband, Thomas Davis, who has been visiting several weeks, in which he stated that when she received the letter his body would be at the bottom of the Arkansas river near Perry, Okla. Davis is a breeder and dealer in pedigreed horses. He is said to have been heavily involved financially.

Olney.—A convention of representatives of county fairs was held here and steps taken for the organization of the Lincoln Trail Fair Circuit. The counties included are Richland, Jasper, Crawford, Cumberland, Wabash, Edwards, White, Clay, Marion, Jefferson, Perry and Randolph. An adjournment was taken to meet at Centralia, February 23.

Dunlap.—The Illinois miners' examining board has announced the following: Murphysboro, February 2; February 23; Canton, February 4; Peoria, February 5; Belleville, February 9; Murphysboro, February 10; Staunton, February 11; Pana, February 12; Elorado, February 19; Duquoin, February 17; Herrin, February 18-19; Danville, February 23; Springfield, February 24-25.

Quincy.—Bert J. Gott, arrested at Rock Island after being indicted here for arson, pleaded guilty in the circuit court to setting fire to the Cassidy homes and one of Quincy's most fashionable residences. Gott made a full confession before Judge Akers, in which he said he was paid $700 by Robert Cox, present owner of the property, to set it afire in an effort to collect $13,000 insurance carried in five companies. Cox has been indicted for attempt to defraud insurance companies.

Chicago.—Frank Marion Ross, attorney at Kentland and Indianapolis, was arraigned on a charge of cashing worthless checks and had his case continued until February 8. Ross' bride, a delegate of Judge William Cummings of Maryland, Ind., was in court. It was the first time she had left her apartments in the Bradley hotel after her wedding to be put in a cell with her husband. She is known about the hotel as the "radium girl" since Ross' arrest because she has sat practically all day in her pajamas playing with a chameleon cat and refusing to see anyone.

Peoria.—A reported elopement of Oliver P. Wilson, a well to do retired business man of Lincoln, Neb., and Mrs. Hamlin from Denver, Colo., or any other place, ended here in the death of the man. His body was sent back to Lincoln for burial. Wilson was seventy years old and the woman was about thirty-five. They came to Peoria 12 days ago and took rooms as Mr. and Mrs. Hamlin." Wilson was taken suddenly ill and died from the effects of an ulcer of the stomach. At a hospital Mrs. Hamlin said she was his daughter. She told a physician she was his nurse but admitted to the coroner that she was only a "friend." According to a relative in this city Wilson has a widow in Lincoln.

Paris.—The Central Illinois Medical society closed its session at Taylorville with the election of the following officers: President, Dr. R. C. Danford of Pana; vice-president, Dr. G. A. Hawkins of Mattoon; secretary-treasurer, Dr. Samuel Herdman, Taylorville.

Springfield.—Fred R. Merrills of Belleville, a candidate for appointment to the vacancy on the supreme bench caused by the death of Judge Alonzo W. Wilkin of Mount St. Louis, was in the capital. So far Governor Dunne has given no intimation regarding his choice.

THE COLONEL'S GOLD MINE

About thirty years ago he left Wisconsin for that domain. All he had was willing hands, a clear brain and a bright vision. Today he is the owner of thousands of acres, president of several banks.

He has found a veritable gold mine in his thousand-acre Alfalfa field, and what is of particular interest to you and me is that his first Alfalfa Seed, twenty-five years ago or more, was purchased from the John A. Salzer Seed Co., La Crosse, Wis.

The Colonel says: "The best paying crop in hay, or grass, or pasture food is Alfalfa. It outranks everything in money value."

Salzer's Alfalfa is good on your own farm, for three to five tons of rich hay per acre, and with the aid of "Nitragen" (see my catalog) its growth is absolutely certain.

For 10c in Postage

We gladly mail our Catalog and sample package of Ten Famous Farm Seeds, including Speltz, "The Cereal Wonder;" Rejuvenated White Bonanna Oats "The Prize Winner;" Billion Dollar Grass; Teosinte, the Silo Filler, Alfalfa, etc., etc.

Or Send 12c

And we will mail you our big Catalog and six generous packages of Early Cabbage, Carrot, Cucumber, Lettuce, Radish, Onion—furnishing lots and lots of juicy, delicious Vegetables during the early Spring and Summer.

Or send to John A. Salzer Seed Co., Box 700, La Crosse, Wis., twenty cents and receive both above collections and their big catalog.

Ambition and Humility.

The highest ambition is the parent of the truest humility; it makes one realize that our ultimate aim is so high that we need a power beyond our own for the accomplishments of so transcendent a work; that if we are truly to be co-workers with Almighty God himself in the working out of the great scheme that rules the universe, the best is far too great for our unaided efforts, and we may confidently rely upon a power divine to help us in all our needs.

U. S. GOV. LAND FREE

Under special act of Congress the agricultural land of the U. S. Forest reserve of Arkansas can now be homesteaded in tracts not to exceed 160 acres to each person, free of cost. 1,000,000 acres free pasturage range where cattle, hogs and sheep fatten eight months in year without grain. No overflow lands. Country very healthy, and well watered with running streams. We select these agricultural lands, take applicant to lands and locate you. SUFFERED FOR FOUR YEARS.

Mr. J. M. Sinclair of Olivehill, Tenn., writes: "I strained my back, which weakened my kidneys and caused an awful bad backache and inflammation of the bladder. Later I became so much worse that I consulted a doctor, who said that I had Diabetes and that my heart was affected. I suffered for four years and was in a nervous state and very much depressed. The doctor's medicine didn't help me, so I decided to try Dodds Kidney Pills, and I cannot say enough to express my relief and thankfulness, as they cured me. 1515-Buick Cars-1915 the Buick Line of Fours and Sixes for 1915—the greatest line of Cars the Buick organization has ever built. 1914 Buick success has been the talk of the motor world—a reputation merited by an abundance of power—faultless design—perfect performance and efficient Buick service. The five splendid models comprising the Buick line for 1915 is up to their promise to all buyers of Buick cars—and make certain a continued satisfaction and uninterrupted use.

The Car of Power, Speed, Dependability and Durability

The 1915 Buick models actually offer greatly increased value. The reduction of price is possible because of the volume of business, the improved factory methods, specialized labor and one more year's knowledge of experts in this great factory in new economies of construction.

The new Delco system of starting, lighting and ignition, with an increased generating capacity of 35 per cent and automatic spark advance.

Tungsten steel valves. Carburetor supplied by Stewart-Warner gravity feed vacuum system.

Non-skid tires on rear wheels.

Improved quality of leather for the upholstering and liner finish.

High grade stream line bodies, hoods and oval radiators.

These are but few of the Buick improvements, regardless of price, they are giving more value than ever before. They always have and still guarantee the Buick Valve-in-Head motor to develop more power than any other type of automobile motor of equal size, American or foreign make.

being paid by the people of any other city in the country, every sense of justice is shocked.

And yet let any member of the house or senate undertake to point out these facts and, a member of the house recently expressed it, "hold the even hand of justice between the interests of these people and the interests of his own people," and he is attacked in public print as a "pinhead," "chill billy," "lightwad" and "block head." No man can arise in congress and plead the cause of the people of the United States outside this city without being maligned and caricatured. But let him say a few words in behalf of the outrageous "half and half" system. He then becomes a patriot, and as the same member expressed it, "the personification of national pride." He is flattered, cajoled and petted by the social set. He is praised, puffed and heralded as a great man by the local press.

This "half and half" system will not stand the light of day. It has endured since 1878 and all efforts to break down its injustices and iniquities have thus far failed through a liberal use of the methods I have referred to. It will come to an end just as soon as a majority of both houses in congress prove not to be amenable to these methods.

NEIGHBORHOOD ITEMS

Plans are under way at Woodstock whereby they are to establish a summer chautauqua there.

A second band is being organized in Algonquin. A meeting was held in the city hall last week with that end in view.

The village of Algonquin has just completed the installation of a street sign system. The signs are painted white with black lettering.

A special town election was held last Tuesday at Crystal Lake to vote on the proposition of borrowing $8,000 to construct and repair Burton's bridge over Fox river. The proposition carried 82 to 32.

A night school for young men, and perhaps young women, may be established at the Woodstock high school in the near future, if plans under consideration by Superintendent R. W. Bardwell are brought to a culmination.

Theodore Wagner, tenant farmer on the J. R. Smith farm one mile east of Dundee, who became suddenly insane last Monday, did not improve as well as was expected and on Thursday morning was taken to Elgin state hospital.

Frank G. Jones, now in the Ionia, Michigan, penitentiary for forgery, is a contributor to Collier's Weekly, and an effort is being made to obtain a pardon for the literary man. Jones spent his boyhood at Crystal Lake and there married Miss Hattie Ballou.

The Cook County Fair Grounds association organized Monday evening and elected Dr. W. F. Schilding, president, Harry H. Schoppe, secretary and treasurer; and directors as follows: J. H. Schierding, Charles Dean, R. L. Peck, Dr. W. F. Schirding, and Ike Bluce.

Several residents of Lake Zurich went to Waukegan Monday to start legal proceedings against eight Wauconda hoodlums who insulted young women from Lake Zurich who went to Wauconda on a sleigh ride recently. Decayed fruit and eggs were thrown at the girls and one was struck in the eye with a broom.

Ben Throop, until recently deputy sheriff of McHenry county, under Andrew H. Henderson, has purchased a farm in Shenango county, New York, and will take possession of same at once. The Throop family resided at Crystal Lake for many years and his many friends throughout McHenry county will be sorry to hear of his leaving.

Fire Marshal William Richards of Dundee issued orders Friday to the firemen that all hydrants be investigated and filled with alcohol to prevent their freezing. These precautions are not taken alone for the purpose of preventing the bursting of a hydrant of a main pipe, but the numerous fires have made it necessary to take every precaution.

Lake Villa is now facing one of the most serious problems that has arisen during its existence. It is short of funds to meet its running expenses, in fact, "its up against it," and hard at that. In an endeavor to solve the riddle a mass meeting was called for Friday of last week when the citizens of the village met together to see if there was not some way out of the tangle.

Try this for Neuralgia.

Thousands of people keep on suffering with neuralgia because they do not know what to do for it. Neuralgia is a pain in the nerves. What you want to do is to soothe the nerve itself. Apply Sloan's Liniment to the surface over the painful part—do not rub it in. Sloan's Liniment penetrates very quickly to the sore, irritated nerve and allays the inflammation. Get a bottle of Sloan's Liniment for 25c of any druggist and have it in the house—against colds, sore and swollen joints, lumbago, sciatica and like ailments. Your money back if not satisfied, but it does give almost instant relief.

SCHOOL NOTES.

The first room is making valentines.

Report cards were issued Monday. Mid-year examinations will be given the fore part of next week.

The fifth room was the only one in the building to be awarded a half holiday Friday for good attendance and punctuality.

Last Wednesday morning Howard P. Castle spoke to the high school about his trip to Alaska in 1903 and told many interesting things.

Helen Abbott is the star speller of the fourth grade and of the fourth room. She has made a perfect record for the entire semester and did not miss one word in the final "spell-down."

Last Tuesday morning Mrs. G. W. Spooner gave an interesting talk on sponges and starfish bringing a large number of her specimens to the school and devoting an entire recitation period to answering questions.

Don't forget that Wednesday, February 10, is the date of the next number of the entertainment course. Julius Caesar Nayphe, a Grecian by birth, lectures in beautiful costumes, and is assisted by five local young ladies in costume who remain on the stage during the program.

The seventh grade has challenged the eighth grade to a ciphering match. It will take place Friday evening in the class room at half past seven. Parents are invited and urged to attend. Patrons come, accompany your children, they need your company and encouragement.

On account of cold weather last Thursday the spelling contest for the Barrington township schools was not held at Barrington Center. Friday afternoon twelve Barrington pupils went to Palatine to take part in the Palatine township contest. Out of the 96 in the contest, 20 made perfect scores and six of these were Barrington pupils. Four out of eight of our Room six scholars brought back ribbons.

Report of attendance and punctuality for the past week. To compute the percentage, one tardiness is considered equivalent to two days absence.

Report cards were issued Monday. Parents will notice that these did not give the fall term grades in the high school as in other years. This is because of our enforced vacation on account of the diphtheria epidemic which makes the regular fall semester end February 10. February cards will show the fall record. Parents should give these cards careful attention, for it is by this means that they may judge of the child's school work. If the card shows low or diminishing grades the teacher should be consulted to ascertain the cause. Co-operation of teacher, parents and pupil will bring results.

Stop the Child's Colds They Often Result Seriously.

Colds, croup and whooping cough are children's ailments which need immediate attention. The after effects are often most serious. Don't take the risk—you don't have to. Dr. King's New Discovery checks the cold, soothes the cough, allays the inflammation, kills the germs and allows nature to do her healing work. 50c at your druggist. Buy a bottle today.

Test Case in Mann Act.

The United States Supreme court decided February first that a woman is liable to the violation of the Mann white slave act as well as the man when she consents to travel from one state to another with him for immoral purposes. Over a year ago a couple temporarily employed on a farm west of Barrington, were arrested by the Federal authorities for living as man and wife, when the man was the husband of another woman. They were Clara Hotte and Chester Laudenslager. The man is serving a sentence in the penitentiary and the woman exonerated.

The government appealed from the decision of Judge Geiger of the Wisconsin Supreme court to the Supreme court and the final decision is against women violators. It is expected that blackmailing practices on the part of women against men associates will now cease.

Concert This Evening.

The concert of the Schubert Symphony club of Chicago will be given at the Baptist church this evening and promises to be entertaining, enjoyable, excellent and worth while. The solo artists will be Miss Leeta Corder, soprano; Miss Layina Zendt, contralto, and Thomas Purcell, violinist and bass singer. Mandolin, bandolin, guitar, violin and piano will be used. This concert was to have been given in Dundee on this date, but the quarantine caused by cattle disease in that neighborhood caused the cancelling of the engagement and the business agent came here looking for opportunity to appear in the village. The Baptist choir is fortunate to have secured the concert for it is one of high quality.

Death of Dr. Weichelt's Father.

Dr. and Mrs. Arthur Weichelt attended the funeral in Chicago Tuesday, February 2, of the doctor's father, Volkmar Weichelt, aged about seventy-two years, who died on Friday evening, January 29, of pneumonia. Mr. Weichelt was ill only a day and had been exposed to the cold when waiting for a street car in the loop district. His wife died a few years ago and he leaves six sons and two daughters, some of whom are acquainted with people here. The funeral was held at the home at 5635 Ridge avenue at one o'clock and burial was in Graceland cemetery.

No Need to Employ an Architect.

"Nope!" replied J. Fuller Gloom of Smiles, Mo. "I shall not be obliged to employ an architect to plan and oversee the building of my new house. The loafers hanging around will tell me how everything should be done."
