VILLAGE AND COUNTRY INTERESTS.

A country town and the farming community surrounding it are brothers, and the one cannot succeed without the cooperation and active assistance of the other.

A farming section without its adjacent railroad and market facilities would be a lucky number—a dead one—with little future ahead. Live farms would then it—would have nothing to do with it—for live men create a surplus, and they must have an outlet for that, which they create.

A farm, adjacent to some live town and shipping facilities is worth double that of a piece of ground with equal fertility located in some obscure section of the country. The relative values of the products of the two farms would be about the same—the one high, the other low.

Therefore, the farming community is dependent upon the town and its advantages for much of the rural property, for the high value of land for the ease with which shipments are made.

Farmers who believe in themselves, who want a prosperous community, should encourage the town and its industries—should draw from the home dealers, should KEEP THE MONEY IN THE HOME COMMUNITY, where it adds to the commercial life of every person.

Every dollar a farmer keeps in circulation at home simply adds that much to the riches of his own community, to the value of his own holdings.

The town and the town merchant, owe an equal duty to the farmer, for without his cooperation both town and merchant would perish.

The town should make the farmer welcome, let him feel that he is among friends, that it is HIS town, that he has a personal interest in its welfare.

The merchant should make it possible for the farmer to buy his goods as cheaply as possible, as he can from some foreign house, and he should keep this fact constantly before the farmer.

He should encourage the farmer to always exhibit a brotherly feeling and spirit, and give the farmer to understand that he is interested in his welfare as well as in the contents of his pocketbook.

It has been demonstrated repeatedly right here in this town that farmers can buy as cheaply from the local dealer as they can from a foreign house.

But the foreign dealer floods the farmer with advertising matter, while some local dealers expect to be taken on faith.

NEED OF YEARLY BUSINESS INVENTORY.

The young farmer who is endeavoring to build up a more efficient and profitable business seldom retains much cash. When money is received he buys a new implement, another animal, improves a building, or makes payments on bills for things bought on credit. During the course of the year he may receive and pay out large sums of money, leaving almost no cash at the end of the year. The annual returns may seem to have been only a fair living for himself and family whereas the farm business may have turned a good profit, which was invested from month to month. Hence it is important for the farmer's guidance and encouragement that he make an annual inventory of his farm investments. This inventory should be a detailed list, with values, of everything used in the farm business, including land, buildings, live stock, machinery and tools, produce for feed or sale, supplies, bills receivable, and cash also a list of all accounts and bills owing. The difference between the total assets and debts shows the net farm worth.

A study of two successive inventories of a farm in New York state illustrates how one young farmer on 100 acres prospered regardless of the fact that he had almost no cash at the end of the year. The total assets at the beginning of the year amounted to $13,030 and to $13,400 at the end of the same year, an increase of $310. The increased investment in live stock, machinery, and tools, and more produce held for sale amounted to $1,073, but this was partially offset by the cash decrease of $163. The farm, independence was also reduced by $233, thus making a total increase in net worth to the farm business of $363. The inventory values covered all depreciation and increases in values, so that this $363 was not increase in the value of the farm investment. It means that this sum was saved from the year's business after all farm expenses had been paid, including interest on borrowed money and all living expenses. The amount of cash at the end of the year, $133, proved to be no indication of the success of the year's business.

Every dollar a farmer keeps in circulation at home simply adds that much to the riches of his own community, to the value of his own holdings.

The town and the town merchant, owe an equal duty to the farmer, for without his cooperation both town and merchant would perish.

The town should make the farmer welcome, let him feel that he is among friends, that it is HIS town, that he has a personal interest in its welfare.

The merchant should make it possible for the farmer to buy his goods as cheaply as possible, as he can from some foreign house, and he should keep this fact constantly before the farmer.

He should encourage the farmer to always exhibit a brotherly feeling and spirit, and give the farmer to understand that he is interested in his welfare as well as in the contents of his pocketbook.

It has been demonstrated repeatedly right here in this town that farmers can buy as cheaply from the local dealer as they can from a foreign house.

Pastor Lockhart's subjects for Sunday are: morning, "The Greatest Call in History" evening, "King David's Two Greatest Sins and What the King of Kings Did With Them."

Easter Sunday at the Baptist church was a day long to be remembered.

Chairs had to be placed in the aisle, the above was full and every available space was taken. The concert and the new vestments brought out quite a number of new attendants. The staging and decorations were all that could be desired and the Hand of Fellowship to new members was helpful.

The 500 calendar souvenirs given away by the church were made possible by the business and professional men of Barrington for which the church and pastor are deeply grateful.

Miss Mary Collier, our esteemed member, is still unable to go with us in our public services; keep her in loving remembrance; all are wishing her a speedy recovery.

Miss Alma Hendrie, one of our efficient Sunday school teachers, and a teacher in the public school, visited her home at Morristown over Sunday and found her father critically ill with heart trouble.
