SYNOPSIS.

Han, Bonstelle, a brilliant photographer, prepares for the day's work in his studio. He is reminded by Floide that she is a student of a party who is to give in the studio that night, and that her business is in real estate. Mr. Bonstelle, who is a student of a party who is to give in the studio that night, and that her business is in real estate. CHAPTER III—Continued.

"Mercy, Hall! Not here! Not now! Not yet!" She took a few steps from him, and turned to look him over, even as he had looked at her. She looked on a woman looks at a man in a milliner's, then shook her head, as if she were not sure it was becoming. "No, Hall, I'm afraid I must have a little time. I can't decide just now."

"Renal!"

"No, Hall. You must be patient, dear. Give me a week."

"See here!" Hall spoke deliberately. "Will you let me know tonight? You're coming to my party here, tonight, aren't you?"

"Why, yes, I was."

"Will you give me your answer then?"

She hung fire for a moment. Hall gave a gesture of agony. It was his supreme effort and had a touch of genius. Mrs. Royaton, seeing, capitulated. "Well, then, all right, tonight."

Hall tried again for an embrace—even while repulsing him she let her taste her lips, then she feebly pushed him away. "Oh, Hall, you mustn't! Not yet, anyway. I haven't accepted you, yet. Oh, I can't decide. I've got to think it all over calmly."

"Lord, not calmly, Renal!" he exclaimed. He gave a look at her. "The suspense will be terrible!" he said, and with elaborate emphasis, "my darling!"

"Oh, faint heart never won fair lady!" Mrs. Royaton teased fully two inches taller than when she had come in. "Now, I must go, Hall. Good-by!" She held out her hand, an attempt to a slave. He kissed it with fervor. And with that she smiled, and walked out.

For ten minutes Floide had stood stealthily by the door, trying to listen. She had barely time to spring back to her desk.

"Good-by, Miss Fisher!" Mrs. Royaton paused conspicuously. "I think if you used about cream for your face it would do it a great deal of good. Try one of those wrinkle-bands, why don't you? They're really very efficacious." She jerked into the dressing room to put on her veil.

Floide waited a moment in respectful silence, then burst into the studio to find Hall gazing at a stupor out the window, hands in pockets, a glow on his face. "What did she say?" she whispered. Hall didn't hear. "What did she say, Mr. Bonstelle?" Floide was purring of suspense.

Hall walked to the couch and dropped down, shaking his head. "She wanted time. Time! Confound it—the only thing I haven't got! What do you think of that? I feel sure I'd done a week's washing!" He all used up. Say, Floide, it takes lots of energy to propose, did you know that?"

Floide regarded him with a stare. "I should think it would—especially when you don't mean it."

"Oh, I mean it all right. I'll stand for it. Four millions! Lord, why wouldn't I mean it? I'd mean anything!"

"I mean when you don't really love her, Mr. Bonstelle. I don't see how you could do it. I could never do anything like that!"

"Well, you ought to be glad you don't have to Floide. Understand? I do. Why, she'll make a good wife, won't she? I don't say I love her, exactly. But, well, I've always liked her. Royaton, she's a good girl. She's got the looks, and the style, and the family connections and everything. I wouldn't be a bit ashamed of her as Mrs. Bonstelle. What's the matter with you, Floide? Don't look so queer!"

"Oh, I'm all right!" Floide said bitterly. "Only—only—"

"Well, I'll be hanged! Why anybody would think it was you who were in a hole, not me. Lord, I thought you cared enough for me to help me out!"

She moved instinctively toward him, instinctively she withdrew. "Oh, I do, really I do, Mr. Bonstelle! How can I help you? Tell me!"

"Well, what am I going to do if Mrs. Royaton refuses me? By Jove! Just think of its being in that woman's power to cost me four and a half millions! It's outrageous!"

"Don't you let her, Mr. Bonstelle!" Floide broke out eagerly. "Oh, it isn't right. Surely there's some other way—a better way than that Mr. Bonstelle!"

"A better way? What do you mean?" Hall looked at her, puzzled.

Floide screwed up her courage, and reached gently for his hand. But as she didn't quite dare take it, she own fell, instead, carelessly, but unseen, upon his sleeve.

"Oh, Mr. Bonstelle," she pleaded, "you ought to have someone who really cares for you—who really loves you, you know—who would love you always. Someone who knows how good you are! Don't do it yourself up to a woman like that—why, she's five years older than you are, Mr. Bonstelle—she's paid for it, almost, and she's been married before, too! Why, you want youth, Mr. Bonstelle—and freshness—and—"

"Oh, I come in!" A high cheerful voice interrupted them. Both turned suddenly toward the doorway to the office.

CHAPTER IV.

There, standing between the pillars, was a young woman looking in, unembarrassed, with a careless smile on her face. She was the sort of girl who affects extremes in style, and at her dress, the straightest, narrowest, shortest skirts. But they were becoming here, and they were becoming there. funeral!" She walked slowly back to the office and gave Miss Dalys the message, then sat down dismally at her desk and hid her face in her hands. The tears dropped down upon the blotter; at regular intervals Floide's shoulders rose and fell as her emotion swayed her. She began to sob at her eyes, with her handkerchief.

Carolyn Dalys, little, freckle-legged, walked into the studio with easy unconcern. "Hello, Hall!" There was always a half-cooked chicken in her voice. "Got those proofs ready, old man? Darn you if you haven't!"

"Really, Carolyn, I've been awfully rushed. I haven't had a—something very important came up today."

"Oh, you can cut all that out. Hall. The simple reason is you're lazy. And I'd just began to believe that the little first cut there," she added her head toward the office, "had succeeded in making you work. Well, never mind, I can go somewhere else."

"Oh, come now! They'll be ready tonight, I promise you. Perhaps this afternoon, even, too! Fact is, I just haven't been in the mood to develop the plates, that's all."

"She nodded, smiling. 'Artistic temperament,' eh? Well, it's becoming! I suppose I'll have to wait. Say, Mrs. Royaton seemed to have an idea that she was the only one invited to your party, and when she found I was coming tonight, she was just a bit—well, astute."

Hall saw his chance and opened the campaign with energy. "Lord, the idea," he exclaimed, "as if I wouldn't have you if I had anybody! Why, you always are the first one I ask, Carolyn. You know that?" He turned on sentimental lights in his eyes.

"Really!" Carolyn said curiously. "Of course! You know I'm awfully fond of you, Carolyn."

"Really!" Carolyn repeated, her lips beginning to quiver with a mist. "Yes, by Jove, I'd hardly dare tell you how much."

"Oh, oh!" she replied lightly. "I'm feeling awfully stodgey this morning. It might make me up."

She made no more of it. She was a joyous glancer and swung herself over to the other side of the studio and, fingered a piece of embroidery. "Fire away, I'm waiting!" she laughed. Then she whistled a piece of a tune, picked up a color plate and squinted at it. "Oh, look at that! That medley of yours, isn't it? Miss Galt? Bully. What a stunning costume!" She stood inspecting it.

Hall, meanwhile, was watching her sharply. He noted the angles of her costume, the freshness of the huge band of violets, the whiteness of her gloves, her pique, expensive hat. She was so at ease and independent and unconscious, that it was as if some wild animal had entered his studio. How well she knew her world, how conscious she was of her superiority over most of those she met, her equality with any! She had consummate poise; her self-esteem never wavered. She breathed the earnestness, culture and self-sufficiency of her social sphere; it protected her like an armor. It was as if, being Carolyn Dalys, she was insulated against any form of embarrassment. Carolyn was a particularly cleverly very rich, but she was "inside," and those "insides" have freedom. Hall himself had been, in his time, "inside" too. In fact, he had been working for a sustenance, never been elected. His own family could stand the strain. He knew, therefore, how to appreciate Carolyn's place. Mrs. Royaton was a "smart" set—the set that gets into the newspapers—but Carolyn Dalys still lived on Lower Fifth Avenue. She was one of the foundation stones in the social structure of which Mrs. Royaton was a more conspicuous pinnacle.

Delivering Letters Spoken a Year Ago.

Post office inspectors at Seattle, Wash., are endeavoring to deliver to the original addresses 500 letters stolen more than a year ago from the Seattle post office by W. A. Byers, a former postal clerk and hidden by Byers under a heap of ashes in the fireplace of the former home.

At the time Byers was arrested nearly 3,000 letters were found concealed in an office which he maintained for the purpose of law. He pleaded guilty and was sent to prison. Recently L. T. Merry moved into the hotel which Byers had formerly occupied and in cleaning the fireplace uncovered the letters.

HIDDEN IMPURITY

"If American women know how much of our coffee lies on the ground for days, before the berries are finally swept up and harvested, greater care would be exercised in purchasing this food. For this coffee is impure. But its moldy odor is lost in the roasting, and the partial decay is concealed until it comes up harsh and bitter in the cup. This fact is not generally known to importers, for few of them have studied conditions existing prior to the arrival of their ships in port."

So writes F. C. Harwood. And Mr. Harwood knows. His long experience in the tropical coffee growing countries, his deep intimacy with plantation owners, his close study of their customs, their methods and the "Tricks of the Trade" has acquired for him a fund of knowledge which places him far in the lead of coffee connoisseurs, both here and abroad.

Denison's Coffees are selected by F. C. Harwood, personally, and it is here that his power in the Coffee Industry manifests itself to the qualification of Denison's Brands. His wisdom and critical discernment in the selection of coffee growers the world over, and their respect gives him first choice of the world's finest crops. Thus, only pure, hand-picked berries find their way into Denison Coffees. His care is your safeguard against impurity.

The Bonnie Country Ladies.

Edinburgh, Scotland, has two dozen women street car conductors who are a thorough success in the new line of work. Other women are already recruiting girls and training them to be conductors.

It is said that girls working in the English cartridge factories so fired with patriotism that some of them work thirty hours in a stretch without any rest. Miss Elizabeth Lister has been appointed a stationmaster in South Wales, the first woman to act in that capacity.

The Smithsonian Institution has put Mr. Cadell's report into print. It is an interesting document. Soles of the happenings in the Klondike were duplicates of like happenings in California and Australia during the first years of the surface washing in those fields. These duplications show that human nature is unchanging.

Men went to the Klondike during hardship and death that they might get rich quick. Some of the gold seekers were quickly successful. A large percentage of the successful ones almost literally threw their money away, many came away, and some of them work thirty hours in a stretch without any rest.

GOLD'S SIREN LURE FOR MEN

Hardship and Death Dared by Thousands That They May Gain Riches Quickly.

It was in 1898 that the rush of gold seekers to the Klondike reached its flood. The thirty-sighters probably never will know the fame of the forty-niners, but they have a gold hunch, the gold history of the Klondike, the men of all nations, ancient, modern and modern. The book has a hundred chapters telling of failure and of death to every one lightened with the story of the Klondike.

H. M. Cadell recently visited the Klondike, and there made a study of present conditions. He describes them in an interesting account of the early day rush to the Northwest territory. The Smithsonian Institution has put Mr. Cadell's report into print. It is an interesting document. Soles of the happenings in the Klondike were duplicates of like happenings in California and Australia during the first years of the surface washing in those fields. DESERT AUTO IS NO CAMEL

These Men Forget to Provide Water for Their Desert Ride and Ones Dies.

Failure to think about evaporation in an automobile radiator brought death to one man and frightful tortures to two others, who arrived in Los Angeles from the desert and told of their sufferings. The trio—James S. Roche and John H. Welsh, attorneys, and James G. Clarke, a real estate dealer—left their Sunday in an automobile for El Centro, in the Imperial valley.

Monday morning the car stopped in the sand. The radiator was empty and they had no water. Roche and Welsh started after a mirage which they believed was the Salton sea. Clarke waited a day, and then, believing them dead, made his way to Mineral Springs, where he was reunited after falling himself in a hole and organized a rescue party. They found Roche unconscious and Welsh dead. Roche said they drank lubricating oil.

The exportation of orchids from the Philippine Islands is interesting. In March, 1914, 10,000 plants were consigned to a San Francisco firm and arrived in excellent condition. During May 5,000 plants were shipped to the same firm. The consignments included four varieties—Solitaires, Amables, Studians and Sanderiana.

NEW HOME IS ESTABLISHED HERE

Laura and Billy Anybody Become Residents—Will Take Active Part in City Affairs.

By E. B. HILL.

Getting settled in a new town is an experience to the remembered—especially the first. Billy and Laura had been only a week in Barrington and that time had been one of busy planning and the hurried and one things that came up at the last minute. Laura had told the woman who was helping with the cleaning like the negro who was listening to the prayer of the new minister very attentively. When asked, after the sermon, how he liked the new minister, he replied that he was much impressed with the prayer, "why," he said, "that man asked the Lord for things that the old minister never knew he had with the new couple, they found things to be done which they never knew necessary."

Six days of planning and trying among other things, to make the new furnishings fit in with the dignity of the wedding, and to make a few days before had been one of Laura's problems and it is no wonder that she summed to herself when she saw the table set for the first meal. "Maybe we haven't quite as elaborate things as some of our friends," she said to one in particular, "but I will make that we are as comfortable as any of them and I know that we will like it here—that is if Billy does well. I spent most of the afternoon among the new friends and have generally made up my mind that ALL of my things can be done here as well as it could anywhere. There is one thing that I want mother to see and that is my Sellers kitchen cabinet that I bought from Bloch's. I have listened to my friends praise them but I never knew what big difference they make in the kitchen. Some one said in discussing economic problems that if the work of women 30 years ago could have been lightened as it is now a good many of these problems would not be up for settlement now."

"Of course the difference in the requirements put on the women folks now days calls for more time and the kitchen cabinet does this because it handles our work easier and gives us time to devote to other duties. The cabinet, looked to me like a very expensive when I first bought it but now. Those dining room chairs look as though they had been made from the same tree as the table and I am going to tell Mr. Bloch's so. I never could see why people bought by mail. It seems to me that I have much more satisfactory to buy from the home merchant. There is only one furniture store here—Bloch's—and it would be a shame not to have one. Yet I suppose the loyal support of the townspeople is the thing necessary to keep any merchant. If I have a question of either price or quality I might hesitate but I mean with all things equal. I am sure no one could have been nicer than Mr. Bloch's even when Billy was here. I thought about that rug. The idea of Mr. Bloch's rug when he wouldn't know an oriental if he met it on the street. There is one part of Mr. Bloch's business that I hope we never need him on but it is not the furniture."

"I don't know but I am fond of my kitchen than any other room in the house and I suppose I ought to be seeing that I will have to spend so much time there. Billy says that I know nothing about mechanics. Just wait until I show you the cooling machinery I got from Grebe. I got the enamel and aluminum ware and those cute little pans—lots more than mother ever had and yet it did not cost me much. It's fun to make selections from so complete a stock as I found there and I am going to send Billy to see the bath room fixtures I picked out. When I get these in I will have a pretty bath room as well as a bedroom. It will surprise him to find as complete a bedroom as Grebe's in a town the size of Barrington and I will be a great hand to enjoy tools of all kinds."

"I do wish he would come, everything is ready and I want this first supper to be good." Late for supper the first night did not put Billy in any of the good standing and what he did come purely local signs of war were evident. "There, now, lady, let's call a truce. I'm as hungry as they make them." Getting moved and settled near the edge on a fellow's "petite." Laura and Billy were the effect that his usual apologetic and no edge and contented herself with merely asking why he was late. "Been talking automobiles and did not notice the time. Today in town I was talking to a man who does lots of work for us—one who has had several different makers. He told me that his next would be an Overland and told me why, as when I found Percy Leonard on the street I went over to his garage to see the car. It's a beauty with the sweet running engine you ever saw, power gears, real riding comfort, and with a control that makes it a cinch for a woman to drive. This alone makes a hit with me."

"Do stop talking automobiles and eat. Good gracious Billy, to hear you talk one would think that no one else ever made a discovery. Well, Mr. Christopher Columbus, I made one this afternoon and I hired a mechanical wash woman at the same time. Ever hear of a mechanical wash woman? Do what I did. Visit the Barrington Laundry. I went all through the plant today and found it mighty interesting. Mr. Clunk told me that he has been here 10 years and in that time the business has changed, or to be more exact home washing as far as flat work is concerned. Then the business was mostly shirts and collars while now the bulk of flat work. This looks as though a lot of other housekeepers used the mechanical wash woman. Well, they ought to. Under the new system the Barrington Laundry does not charge for each separate piece where they used to charge for each piece and charge only for the actual time used in washing and ironing. This makes it cheaper than doing it at home almost without counting the time saved. It is better done—especially such work as they put through their steam ironer."

"For your collars and shirts they seem to have a special machine for each separate thread. Not quite this day and maybe but they have one for the collars alone that cost $550 and then there is a cuff press, blouse machine, and a skirt press, and a collar and body ironer. If I undertook to tell you about each one of these operations this would be called the 'tale of a shirt' sure enough. It just shows you though how well equipped the Barrington Laundry is to handle both your work and mine. Why don't you visit it some day? They tell me that it is the best equipped plant in this sized town in this and several other states. They get work I know from nearly all the towns along the line. We ought to be satisfied with their work all the way from here to where they have in the face of Chicago competition."

"You called me on talking about my interests a few minutes ago and you are doing a pretty good job now yourself. I did not need any particular orders from the doctor to quit this streak. Where did you get it? From Greb's market, eh? That is where the Murrys do all their trading and have bought there for years. Murray is as big a crank on meat as you are. Has he been in the market or out of it lately?"

"You would not catch me ordering until I had seen the store Billy. I was there this morning for this steak and some chicken and I was as clean as my own kitchen. The meats all looked so good that I bought a roast for tomorrow. When it comes to meat I like to have a butcher who knows how to make the selection. A piece of meat is very little to look good to me just because it looks like meat. With Mr. Greb's it is different. With his years of experience he can tell just what you want and he tells you that he selects all of his own meats. By doing this he knows just what he gets and can select just what you want. The roast that I got looks like a lot better than some I have had at home and I do not think it cost quite so much."

"Buying meats from a market that treats you this way is more satisfactory and cheaper than the long run. Then again I can get all my fruits and groceries from him. This ought to result in a saving and I know that it will save time in the delivery."

"Before you came in I was thinking how nice my kitchen is. Isn't it funny mother has a hand stove out at the farm which burns only coal or wood, Nabel has a Jewel that burns only gas and mine burns both. Just think how long mother has used a Jewel and I do not believe she would have another make as a gift. I thought when we bought this one from Mr. Greb that we might have bought just the gas range but this will serve a double purpose and make a saving in the gas bill. The Jewel there are no parts to change and you have to do it just out one fire and start the other. On cold days I can use the range portion and on hot, sultry days the gas. If this Jewel will give me half the service that mother has had from the one she uses I will be satisfied and I really believe it is just what Mr. Greb says it is the best stove made."

"I am prattling pretty near as much about my things as you did about automobiles. Billy had commenced to talk so you and I got into with another share of the conversation. "While I did not like to hear this eagle scream from over plucking any, better than the next fellow I do like to have him make a little noise as he passes by. From what I have seen the Overland comes nearer getting real value, dollar for dollar, than any other make. The major has remarkable power, the crank shaft is supported with five bearings, the ignition is absolutely certain, the starting and lighting system is of the type used on the most expensive cars and the brakes are extra large giving an Overland the greatest security. There are over half a hundred of these cars in and around Barrington and Mr. Leonard tells me that they are giving top notch satisfaction. In fact he gave me the list of owners and referred to any one of them. I guess this auto today are a good deal alike in one fact; that you get $500 worth for that amount and $150 worth for $750. With the Overland you really get a little more for you get the benefit of the huge production. In fact I think you come a whole lot nearer getting $1000 worth of car when you consider the factory saving. The Overland looks it at right here. With Mr. Leonard right here and his garage behind the sale it means expert service and repairs if we need them. I guess it's the Overland for pure."

"Now that I have got all that automobile talk off my mind I'll help you do the dishes if you will go down town with me. This is really our first home and I think that in years to come we will both appreciate the pleasures of the house and town. I want to buy a book and want you to help pick it out because you will want to use it. I have wanted one for a long time and when I was in the Barrington Pharmacy the other day I had a long talk with Mr. Hawley. He handles them and handles films, etc. Being an expert photographer himself he can help us out until we get so that we can take pictures as good as any one."

"There has been several times since we have known one another that we could have taken some pictures and the pleasure we would have out of them today would more than pay for the cost. This is the first town and there will be other first things that we can use the book on. It is easy to learn and by buying the kodak from Mr. Hawley we will have him to fall back on for advice."

"That reminds me that the Barrington Pharmacy handles that Penslar line of cameras that you like so well. I used to laugh at you about the way you swore by them but I quite agree with you now—especially after the way these Penslar Dyspepsia tablets cleared away the remains of your first biscuits. All joking aside though they do carry a nice line of toilet articles which will interest you and it is easy to see that they have as complete a stock as you would want to find simply by looking at the show case. I think I will just leave that eye medicine prescription with him too. If I do go to look at hats I'll probably need some of it or my pocket-book will."

"Telling a woman to even a round about way that you are watching the cost of her hats tends to put her on the defensive as it did Kate. 'I'm just going to drop in to see the new styles for a moment. They won't have their opening until the 15th of September but I want to see her about some changes on my little hat. When I saw them the other day Miss Meyer told me that the styles this year were going to run to velvet. Big hats and little hats but all of velvet. I rather think that I will get a toque later but now I want one of the new Tam-O-Shanters."

"A toque, stupid, is small and close fitting. I understand that Miss Meyer does her own trimming and it strikes me that I will find it more satisfactory to buy here than in the city. In the first place the price ought to be more satisfactory and in the second I ought to get better material. With you men a hat is a hat but with the women a lot of things to be taken into consideration. Miss Meyer will be able to give me a hat that is in good style while it won't be either too loud nor quiet. Between the two, Billy, is where the phrase, 'Gentleness creates lives'."

"You go and order your bread while I get some cigars. Got the same as I got for supper—I went into Ankele's for Palatine ice cream and bought both bread and cookies. From the looks of their show cases they must do a big business among our neighbors."

"Hurry up—I'll be right next door to Rike's; I've been paying my cigars there ever since we have been here. Buying cigars and tobacco from a tobacco store has never been satisfactory to me and then, while I hate to admit it, I do like a game of pool now and then. I don't suppose my saying that I like to buy from Rike will have such an awful effect either on you or the other fellow but it's fact. No, I won't stop for pool, get your bread and we will start home."

U. S. FACES CRISIS TAKE 85,000 RUSSIANS

ARABIC TRAGEDY INVOLVES DIGNITY OF U. S.

Washington Official Says Sinking of liner Puta Honor of Nation at Stake.

Washington, Aug. 21.—This is no time for hasty action. The situation created by the torpedoing of the Arabic is too serious to permit any judgment. Neither the president nor the state department will make a single move in the face until all of the facts have been gathered by American diplomatic and consular agents and are before them.

"The honor and dignity of the nation are involved, but the people can rest assured that their interests are safe."

That was the only word forthcoming from administration sources regarding the situation precipitated by the sinking of the White Star liner Arabic. The statement came from the old man in the government service who knows the president's mind.

By direct order of the executive, all officials were prohibited from talking for publication. The slogan of "suspend judgment until we have all the facts" emanated by the president to Secretary of State Lansing within half an hour after the word of the sinking of the liner reached this country, will be rigidly adhered to.

8 DROWNED NEAR ST. LOUIS

Meramec River Sweeps 35-Mile Strip of Bullfinch—Thousand Fish—County Under Water.

St. Louis, Aug. 24.—Eight persons are reported to have lost their lives when the Meramec river, lined by both sides with pleasure resorts, club houses and summer cottages, went several miles out of its banks following a sudden rise, which started Sunday at the rate of a foot an hour. Six persons are said to have been drowned at Valley Park and two at Meramec Highlands. The river is five feet higher, than ever before in its history, and so rapidly did the flood come on that many persons were forced to climb into trees. A report that was not confirmed stated that every building on either side of the river for 35 miles had been swept away. The additional eight lost bring the total dead in the flood following the recent severe rainstorm to 23 in St. Louis county.

SIX GENERALS CAPTURED AT NOVOGORIEVSK.

Number of Cannon Taken by Teutons Has Been Increased to More Than 200.

Berlin, Aug. 23 (by wireless).—Novogorietevsk, mightiest fortress of the czar, has fallen. The capture by German troops of the great stronghold at the junction of the Vistula and Narow rivers was officially announced here on Friday.

Six Russian generals and 5,000 soldiers were captured by General von Beeler's troops when they took Novogorietevsk. The number of cannon has been increased to more than 700.

General von Gallwitz's troops have taken 2,650 Russian prisoners, the statement adds. The Russians retreated east of Kovno and in the district of Davina as far as the road from Augustowo to Gredos.

With the capture of Novogorietevsk the Germans have taken the last of the Vistula fortresses and removed danger that existed as long as that stronghold was held by the Russians. The pursuit of the retreating Russian army can be continued without any possibility of a sudden reverse.

Novogorietevsk was captured under the eyes of Emperor William himself, he having arrived there while the German troops were making their attack.

The fortress fell after a siege of 12 days, during which the mighty German guns poured a hail of shell upon its fortifications. The outlying forts were taken one by one while the German circle drew closer daily to the main fortress.

The German general staff accompanied Emperor William to Novogorietevsk to watch the closing act of the military drama enacted there.

BERLIN ASKS DELAY

TENSION IN CRISIS GROWING OUT OF SINKING OF ARABIC IS LESSENING.

RUPTURE MAY BE PREVENTED

German Ambassador to U. S. Telegrams Washington to Suspend Action Pending Receipt of Berlin's Version.

New York, Aug. 26.—It was due to the action of a German submarine that American citizens lost their lives in the torpedoing of the steamship Arabic such action was contrary to the intentions of the German government, according to official advice received by the German ambassador from Berlin and telegraphed by him on Tuesday to Washington.

It was also said in the communication that the German government will deeply regret such a loss of life and would tender the sincerest sympathies to the American government.

The text of the matter given out by Count von Bernstorff read:

"The German ambassador received the following instructions from Berlin, which is communicated to the department of state. So far no official information available concerning the sinking of the Arabic. The German government trusts that the American government will take a definite stand at hearing only the reports of one side which in the opinion of the imperial government cannot correspond with the facts, but that a chance will be given to Germany to be heard equally."

"Although the imperial government does not doubt the good faith of the witnesses whose statements are reported by the newspapers in Europe, it should be borne in mind that these statements are naturally made under excitement which might easily produce wrong impressions. If American should actually have lost their lives this would naturally be contrary to the intentions of the German government. The German government would deeply regret the fact and begs to tender sincerest sympathies to the American government."

The statement carried no signature. It was given out by Doctor Adler, the ambassador's secretary.

Washington, Aug. 26.—Germany, through her ambassador, Count von Bernstorff, asked the United States on Tuesday not to take a final stand on the sinking of the White Star liner Arabic until all the facts were known. It was the first word from Germany since the incident.

The count telegraphed the state department, saying he made the request at the instruction of his government, and added that the German admiralty had not yet been able to get a report on the sinking.

It is taken to indicate that the German government may have some facts which, in its opinion, justify the action of the submarine commander. It comes as the first ray of promise on a situation which admittedly was growing darker with each hour of silence on the part of Germany.

Now, in view of the ambassador's request, the state department can be said to have waited a reasonable time for word from Berlin. Ambassador Gerard has been instructed to watch for a report, but has not been told to ask for one. The German ambassador's request indicates that one soon may be vantage.

GAMES OF ZULU CHILDREN

Youngsters Have Their Own Amusements, Much as Do Those of Other Countries.

Zulu children are in most particulars exceedingly like any other children who chance to arrive in this world with white instead of black skins.

They play the same games, or, if girls, love the same dolls, as for the matter of that the old Egyptians did long ago.

Indeed, the doll makes believe appears to be carried further than is common in civilized countries. The small Kaffirs build actual huts for them in place of the houses that here are provided ready-made from the toy shop.

They give them stones to grind their corn, mats for sleeping, pots for cooking, and so forth. They provide them with a cattle kraal stocked with clay cows, goats and sheep. They treat them in a realistic manner, singing the appropriate songs.

The owner of a boy doll will manufacture and pay away to him cattle in order to supply it with a wife or wives in the shape of properly—or improperly—dressed female dolls, and with such small dressed puppets as can be played, although it is beneath his dignity to amuse himself with an unweaned maiden doll.

So it is with everything else. They have their parties which last all night, and their clans that play with or more generally fight other clans belonging to the next kraal or tribe.

The sense of humor is very fully developed in them, and the sense of greediness still more so much so, indeed, that they will stuff themselves with half-cooked and unclean birds caught in the wild, which, if they bring home, they fear would be taken from them and eaten by their elders.

They possess an elaborate system of faggins, and a good fight with sticks, not fists, is the joy of their hearts.

As with our children, the boys look down upon the girls, and look on as a vain occasion when, for instance, a pair of them will share the same pillow or bird's nest, in which they play at being sweethearts, the head boy choosing the best favored girl, or sometimes the prettiest girl selecting her own boy.

Great Man Didn't Scare.

A student once tried to frighten Currier, the great naturalist, and succeeded only in giving the wise man a curious way of showing his knowledge of living things. The student dressed up as a terrible animal and crept into the professor's bedroom one night.

"Currier," he cried, "behold me, a terrible animal. I am a graminity, or you can't," he said.

He saw that the supposed monster had hoofs and horns and he knew that such animals eat grain and grass and not flesh. So he lay on his back and said: "You are not in the least afraid of being eaten."

SURVIVORS TELL OF ATTACK ON ARABIC

But Little Confusion Among Either Passengers or Crew.

NO WARNING GIVEN LINER

Calm Sea and Lifesboats Already Swung Out Help Materially in Preventing a Great Sea Horror—Many Passengers Drained.

Queenstown.—No survivor of the Arabic disaster who was interviewed here said the German liner, which sank the big liner to the bottom, August 15, though several said they saw the liner that a few minutes before torpedoed the British steamer Dunelm, and believed it was the same submarine.

They agreed that the Arabic was sent to the bottom without warning. Three things, the passengers agreed, prevented a larger loss of life. They were:

First, that the sea was calm; second, that the passengers were already swung out to meet such an emergency, and third, that there was no panic and the crew displayed good discipline in getting over the board.

Little Confusion Shown.
From the moment the heavy blow struck by the torpedo, roared the steamer with a violent explosion until she sank beneath the waves, there was little confusion among either passengers or crew. Men who had passed through other disasters and had been impressed in no much as the calm, orderly manner in which the passengers got over the sides within eleven minutes after the vessel was struck.

"The drowned were in two boats which capsized almost immediately after they struck the water. One of them was caught by the liner as she rolled over in her death plunge. Several of the occupants struggled to reach and clung fast until they were picked up by other boats. Those that could not swim went down beneath the waves rolled by the sinking Arabic. Several of the crew, it is believed, were blown to pieces when the torpedo plunged into the vessel's side."

Many Passengers Drained.
Many of the survivors landed here were suffering from severe bruises. They had been thrown about violently when the explosion shook the Arabic. Probably a score of women who escaped in their night clothing were still under care of physicians, suffering from exposure. None of the injured, it was believed, will die.

"Most of the passengers were on deck or at breakfast when we were struck," said Joseph G. de Lormier, Montreal lawyer and described of a former Canadian minister of mining. "Possibly fifty of the passengers were still in their berths."

"It was about nine o'clock, or a little after, when several of the passengers who thought was a submarine, and a distance to starboard approaching a steamer we later found out was the Dunelm of London. While we were watching we caught the faint sound of an explosion, and took it for granted that the Dunelm had been torpedoed."

Attack Prepared For.
"Our course was taking us over in the direction of Dunelm. We prepared for an attack at once. The crew ran about distributing life preservers and swinging out the boats."

"I adjusted my life preserver and ran below to get a suitcase full of important documents. I had just returned when I saw a white streak rippling toward the Arabic, churning up foam at a great rate. Then there was a tremendous explosion. The ship stopped almost instantaneously. She rocked from side to side and began to heel over. Most of the passengers were in the boats in an instant, and there was not the slightest panic. I barely had time to make the last lifeboat. We were launched successfully, but didn't get clear when the Arabic rolled over and went down. She was half turned on her side, and her starboard quarter struck our boat, caving in the side and throwing us into the water."

"I thought it was all over, but I finally came up and swam to a raft. I don't know what happened to the others. While I was clinging to the raft I saw another lifeboat about to sink. They called to me and threw me a line. I tied it around the raft and hung partly to the hawser and to the raft, until I was picked up and exhausted."

"I counted ten lifeboats pulling away. One of them filled with water. Just after it cleared the Arabic's side and sank. A woman, who I later learned was the sister of the Arabic's surgeon, was thrown into the water. One of the Arabic's sailors swam to her and the captain of a French ship that came to our rescue dived off the deck of his vessel and helped get her into a boat. It was a fine piece of work."

Women Cool in Danger.
St. Catharines, a professional singer, who was among the survivors, said there was no panic. The women, she said, were particularly cool; but several of them were very severely injured. They suffered from the cold wind after they got into the boats."

"There were four women and 20 men in our boat," said Miss Carr. "We got away safely, and we saw the captain dive off the bridge as the ship settled under him. It seemed that the boat had hit a mine while before we were picked up. When the women became greatly distressed I sang 'It's a Long Way to Tipperary' to cheer them up."

H. Curry, the assistant purser, and several other officers and passengers who were on deck when the Arabic was hit corroborated the story told by Captain Finch.

"I was on the bridge at 9:15 Tuesday morning, watching the Dunelm. She appeared to have been torpedoed, when I saw the white wake of a torpedo 300 yards away," said the captain. "It was no submarine. The torpedo struck about ninety feet from the stern on the starboard side at about right angles."

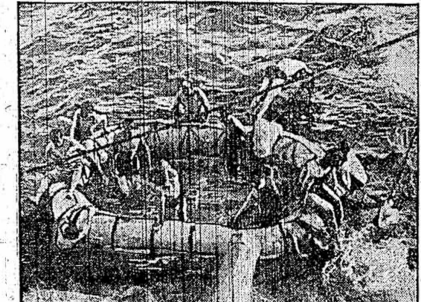

Lifboats Splintered.
"A big stream of water spouted up to a great height, carrying a lot of wreckage and splintering one of the lifeboats. The vessel began to settle almost immediately."

"The greatest order prevailed. The boats had previously been swung out, because we knew a submarine was in the vicinity, and it of them were filled and lowered in no time. Two of the boats capsized for some unaccountable reason, and had it not been for this there would have been scarcely any loss of life."

"I remained on the bridge until the water was lapping at my feet, and they dove off. When I came up my head struck some wreckage and I was slightly injured. I swam to a nearby raft, but was unable to draw myself up on it. Two women with a baby were clinging to one side. I helped them to clamber on the raft, and then hung on until all of us were rescued about 20 minutes later."

Optimistic Thought.
We must not permit sincerity and candor to expose us to the arts of the overhauler."

DUNNE ADDRESSES THE NATIONAL GUARD

Governor Announces New Plan Regarding State Soldiers.

SEEKS TO INCREASE MILITIA

Executive Would Pay Members of the I. N. G. for Every Night They Drill—Declares Million Could Be Raised—In U. S.

Springfield.—In his talk to the officers of the Fourth regiment at the reception at Camp Lincoln, Governor Dunne announced his new plan regarding the state militia, which he proposed to put into effect, and under which, he declared, "it would be no more of a dream to have a hundred thousand men." The plan consists in paying to the men a nominal sum, perhaps a dollar a day, at a rate of perhaps $40 to $50 a year per man, for every night on which they drill.

Governor Dunne said: "In our preparations for national defense, which in these uncertain times have become doubly imperative, two courses are open to us. We can increase the standing army or create a larger infantry and membership in the state militia. The former course is one opposed to precedent, and I think to the wishes of a majority of the people of the United States."

The latter course, he said, is the only one open to us. I have a plan by which I believe that it would be no more of a dream to have a hundred thousand men. I propose to create a membership of about seven thousand to a membership of more than a hundred thousand. If we can pay each of the men a small sum for the days of active work, say a dollar, it would prove a remarkable stimulant for enlistment. To raise our present army to a million men would probably require more than $100,000,000. The same end can be arrived at through the state organization under this plan at a cost of $50,000,000 per year, thus making a great saving."

"The governor then complimented the officers of the Fourth regiment on the soldierly appearance of their men and their camp. Immediately before the reception of the officers the governor had been escorted from the gates to headquarters by the First battalion, under command of Maj. Philip C. Clayton, composed of Companies E, C, and D, of the 1st, 2nd, 3rd, 4th, 5th, 6th, 7th, 8th, 9th, 10th, 11th, 12th, 13th, 14th, 15th, 16th, 17th, 18th, 19th, 20th, 21st, 22nd, 23rd, 24th, 25th, 26th, Safety First

6 PER CENT. REAL ESTATE FIRST MORTGAGE BONDS are steadily growing in popularity and their advantages over other classes of bonds and individual mortgages are numerous. First, the value of the security underlying REAL ESTATE FIRST MORTGAGE BONDS can easily be determined, and the property be personally inspected by the investor before making purchases, whereas on the other hand, experience and tedious study is necessary to exactly value the security of such corporation bonds as Railroads, Public Utilities and Industrials. Furthermore the stability in price of REAL ESTATE FIRST MORTGAGE BONDS has been demonstrated; they have maintained their full par value when other bonds, even of the highest character, have suffered severe declines in times of depression. Also REAL ESTATE FIRST MORTGAGE BONDS are issued in most convenient denominations of $100, $500 and $1000 and the interest is paid promptly on the date of maturity. These moderate sizes enable the investor to buy small amounts of bonds, and, if in need of funds, to sell portions of his holdings.

Our customers have never suffered any loss of money nor any delay in the payment of principal or interest on CHICAGO REAL ESTATE MORTGAGE BONDS bought from us.
