COMMERCIAL MEN MEET

And Discuss Future Plans; Forty Members Expected to be Enrolled on Charter-Next Meeting Nov. 10

The Barrington Commercial association met in regular session Friday night in the bank rooms and a goodly number of merchants and professional men were in attendance. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved, followed by reports of committees on membership and rating.

The charter, which will be recognized as a state organization, will remain open for members all this week and probably longer. It is estimated that at least forty members will be on the roll when the charter closes, and this will be a sufficient number to insure a permanent and successful organization. Clerks and helpers in different stores about town are permitted to join at a cost of $1.00 as charter members and several names have been handed to the secretary as a result.

President Meyer said he believed the young men of Barrington were entitled to such privilege and as soon as the association is better organized he favors having the commercial rooms open to members on evenings and would provide suitable reading matter for them. This plan met with universal approval and was thought to be good means for keeping the young men off the streets.

The rating score as compiled by the committee was ready by Secretary Schoder, which also met the approval of all members present. Rating slips will be given out this week to members, who will list their customers according to the way they have settled accounts heretofore at each store. When this is completed a rating card will be issued. This matter will come before the meeting next week for consideration, which meeting will be held on Friday night, November 10.

Rev. Methodist Episcopal minister, Rev. T. Atkey Brewster, formerly of Crystal Lake, is the new Methodist Episcopal minister assigned to the charge here by the superintendent of the Rock River conference. He is coming to Chicago which came to a close Monday. Rev. Brewster will succeed Dr. W. J. Libberton who finished his labors here October 1.

The new minister will preach his inaugural sermon at the conference next Sunday and will move his family into the parsonage on Cook street within a short time. Rev. Brewster comes to Barrington as an able minister and leaves Crystal Lake with the well wishes of all his friends. Dr. Libberton was not given a regular appointment, but will supply pulpits in this district as he is needed from time to time.

Rev. W. E. Grose of Palatine goes to Crystal Lake and will supply McHenry. Rev. Floyd E. Foster succeeds Rev. Grose at Palatine. Cary and Wauconda are to be supplied. Rev. G. H. Newland of Thornton goes to Dundee, succeeding E. N. Canfield who goes to Blue Island.

The conference paid $30,000 as the amount of the tax on Methodist churches in the conference districts for the presbytery's pension fund during the coming year. At the annual meeting of the Ministers' Union association, Mr. Alfred Peck of Betty Memorial church, Chicago, was chosen president.

National Pay-Up Week a Success

National Pay-Up week which closed last Saturday proved a benefit to Barrington merchants in many ways, and as a result all felt satisfied with the outcome. Old outstanding accounts were paid up which were considered practically worthless. No bitter feelings existed in the transaction as merchants and customers alike were interested in the movement.

A vote of thanks is extended by the business men to those who took advantage of pay-up week and settled their accounts. It is the plan to have a national pay-up week once each year.

Two More Chevrolet

Frank Hestler and John Popp have each purchased a Chevrolet touring car from local agent, P. C. Leonard. This machine is becoming quite a favorite here and is said by many to be worth the money. It sells for $490.00, E. B. Flint, Michigan.

Several little girls of Barrington have organized a Rainbow club with Louise Dowdall as president, Mildred Gleske, secretary, and Marion Schroeder, treasurer. Other members of the club are Erma Mae and Dorothy Gleske, Lucille, Stiefenhofer and Lois May Plagge.

Settlement Notice

Parties knowing themselves to be indebted to me will confer a favor by settling accounts at once. Books will be found at the Price market. Please call on or before October 15—P. J. Albrecht.

PROMINENT COUPLE WED TO-DAY

Walter Cannon and Miss Myrtle Plagge Figure in Nuptial Event at Chicago—Are Now on Honeymoon

The marriage of Walter Cannon, proprietor of the Ideal garage, and Miss Myrtle Plagge was solemnized at 10 o'clock this morning in Chicago, the ceremony being performed by Rev. Dr. H. H. Thoren.

The news of this wedding will not come as a surprise to their Barrington friends, as their engagement was known to many, although the exact date of their marriage had not been given out.

Following the ceremony the young couple left Chicago for a ten days' wedding tour in the groom's runabout. They are at Ottawa today visiting relatives. Later they intend to visit Starved Rock, then go to Peoria and take a boat trip down the Mississippi river to St. Louis.

Mr. Cannon is the son of E. C. Cannon and is one of Barrington's best young men. He has conducted the Ideal garage on Williams street for the past six years and is held in high esteem by his business and social community. He enjoys a good patronage and is fully deserving of the same.

Mrs. Cannon is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank H. Plagge, well known Barrington people. She is held in high esteem by all who know her and is prominent in society circles. She represents the happy combination of a thoroughly proficient and educated out-of-door young woman. Her ability as a singer is also recognized in this community.

Upon their return to Barrington they will go to housekeeping in the Aurnand property on Bough street which has been fitted as a modern home for them by the groom. They will occupy the upper apartment.

Personal and Otherwise

Fred Hawley has returned from a trip to the northwest.

Fred Melster and son leave for Peoria tomorrow in their Ford car to attend a meeting of salesmen representing the National Refining company to be held at Hotel Jefferson in this city. They will return Monday.

Perce James has sold his farm north of this village to Louis Reese, who will take possession following Mr. James' sale on Wednesday, October 25. Mr. James will move to Chicago and enter the lyceum hall as a singer. He expects to be prepared for his chosen profession by the latter part of December and may be expected to appear in Barrington during his early career as a public man. Mr. James has a wonderfully fine voice and we are sure he will make good.

JOL. ROOSEVELT APPEALS FOR THE ELECTION OF MR. HUGHES.

I appeal to my fellow citizens that they shall elect Mr. Hughes and repudiate Mr. Wilson because only by so doing can they save America from that talent of greed, selfishness and cowardice which we owe to Mr. Wilson's substitution of adroit electioneering for straightforward action. The permanent interest of the American people lie, not in ease and comfort for the moment, no matter how obtained, as Mr. Wilson would teach us, but in resolute championship of the ideals of national and international democratic duty, and in preparedness to make this championship effective by our strength. President Wilson embodies in his person that most dangerous doctrine which teaches our people that when confronted with really formidable responsibilities we can shrink from labor and risk, and avoid duty by the simple process of drugging our souls with the narcotic of meaningless phrasemongering. Mr. Hughes is the exact contrary; he embodies the ideal of service rendered through conscientious effort in the face of danger and difficulty. Mr. Wilson turns his words into deeds only if it can be achieved by adroit political maneuvering; by bartering a debauched civil service for congressional votes on behalf of some measure which he had solemnly promised to oppose. Our country is in danger because that we support the man of deeds done in the open against the man of furtive and shifting political maneuvers; the man of service against the man of danger. We must elect Mr. Hughes. We must elect Mr. Hughes.

Special Republican Train

Barrington will be visited by a special republican train Saturday, October 21, when prominent candidates will make short speeches from the car. The special will arrive over the E. & J. R. railway at 12:30 p. m. and will be transferred to the C. & N. W. tracks and depart at 12:50 p. m.

Interesting : School : Notes

Brief Mention of Numerous Occurrences of the Week—Told by Different Pupils

Now that October has come one may find autumn leaves in every room, and in some the leaves are used for the religious lesson. Since Columbus day and Halloween both come in the month, the children of Room 2 are writing stories about Columbus and those of Room 1 are making a Halloween poster and learning a song for that occasion.

Pictures representing the Pilgrims have been used in the history lessons of Room 5.

The eighth grade now has a copy of the St. Cecilia picture, which belongs to the room for this year. The picture is given by the teacher but the framing is kept for the pupils. As a record is kept of each pupil's contribution returned at the end of the year, the class really owns it for that length of time.

Sixteen crayfish for the zoology class were received Monday and now that they have been treated to enter and formally are ready for use. The class expects to spend at least a week in the study of this type.

All members of German II who failed to pass the tests in strong verbs given this week in two more after a week in a "pity sakes," or review, class until their work is more nearly satisfactory.

In the grades Gray's tests in both silent and oral reading have been given. All of this entails an enormous amount of work for both teacher and pupil, and it is to be appreciated, since there is so much detail involved in computing each child's grade.

Last week all pupils in the High School took a silent reading test offered by the state of Kansas. According to the percentages submitted as standard by the authors of the tests, the pupils of every grade in the Barrington High school are above the average. The results of the tests here would indicate that the students concerned rank well in their ability to read and understand. They do not indicate whether these students are making the most of their ability and doing the grade of work which may reasonably be expected of them.

The school band has been organized for the year and will be directed by Warren Plagge, who has proved so efficient a leader in the past.

The purpose of these tests for the Barrington schools is threefold: to enable those in authority to check up on the grade of work done here in comparison with that in other parts of the country; to guide the teachers in the direction of the individual pupil, and to enable the teachers to make wise suggestions when called upon by those parents who desire to co-operate with the schools.

Rank of the Grades

Rank	Grade	Per cent
1	High School	90.21
2	High School	87.84
3	High School	87.80
4	High School	87.77
5	High School	87.21
6	High School	86.40
7	High School	83.10
8	High School	82.05

Illinois Roads

Illinois has approximately 16,000 miles of roads of which 10 per cent is improved, according to a report of W. W. Marr, state highway engineer. The improvement in most instances consists of either gravel or macadam surfaces. There is some concrete and brick road, practically all of which has been constructed since 1915 when the state aid road law was passed.

Condensary Plant Opened at Cary

The Oatman Condensed Milk company which recently opened a large plant at Neillville, Wisconsin, has started business the first of October.

Contracts have been made for 30,000 pounds of milk daily during the winter months at the assigilation price with exception on the milk for the following six months.

It was at the earnest solicitation of the dairymen of the Cary district that the Oatman company located there.

W. P. Oatman met with the farmers and dairymen there, and they met over the milk situation. This meeting resulted in Mr. Oatman making a proposition to the farmers, which was accepted. Contracts were made, the building was rented for five years and opened up for business, all in less than a week after negotiations opened.

The building was erected for a condensary factory and was operated for a time, but has been vacant for the past year. It was presented to the dairy men by the Cary plant and will be used for the dairy plant and will be canned and put upon the market.

The Oatman company is a Dundee installation. It was organized through its officers are Dundee men and the main office is located there. "For these reasons," says the Dundee Hawkeye, "we rejoice at its success and prosperity as evidenced by the opening of these new factories and we feel confident that strict attention to business and a square deal will make this local institution a still greater power in the milk world."

Baptist People Extend Call

A well attended meeting of the members of the Baptist church was held last evening for the purpose of selecting a pastor to succeed G. H. Lockhart, who, because of an injury to his foot, resigned last July, and who noted the church some weeks ago that he would be unable to return.

Eugene M. Phillips was selected as chairman of the meeting and presided very acceptably. The pulpit committee, composed of George Banks, A. C. Lines and Mrs. William Cannon, presented for consideration the names of two ministers, Rev. Harry Farrel and Rev. Edgar Woolhouse, each of whom had occupied the pulpit two Sundays.

A two very full discussion, which followed the presentation of the committee's report, developed an absolute unanimity on the part of those present in favor of Mr. Woolhouse, although everyone recognized the sincerity and ability of Rev. Farrel.

A call was therefore extended to Mr. Woolhouse to become pastor, and it is thought he will accept. If he does it will not be possible for him to move his family here until November, although he is expected to commence his preaching next Sunday.

MISS LANDWEY MARRIED SUNDAY

To Clarence B. Smith of Kokomo, Indiana—Will Make Their Future Home in the Hoosier City

A courtship dating back only a comparatively short time came to a happy culmination Sunday afternoon when Miss Mabel Landwey, accomplished daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Landwey of Limits street, became the bride of Clarence B. Smith of Kokomo, Indiana.

The wedding took place at the home of the bride, the ring ceremony being officiated by Rev. J. H. Horner, pastor of the Salem Evangelical church, officiated in his usual abode manner. The bride was tastefully attired in a simple white crepe de chine garment. Following the ceremony a wedding supper was served.

Those present at the ceremony were the bride's father and mother; Mr. and Mrs. W. N. Landwey, their son and daughter; the Misses Clara and Lillian Landwey; Simon, Elmer, Wesley and Milton Landwey and Rev. and Mrs. J. H. Horner and little daughter.

The young couple left Sunday evening for Kokomo, Indiana, where they will reside at 1620 Buckeye street, the groom having a neat cottage, already for occupancy.

Mr. and Mrs. Smith are well and favorably known in this community, the latter having lived here all her life, where she has a wide circle of friends.

She obtained her education in the schools here, and has always been held in high esteem.

Mr. Smith at present is a machinist in a Kokomo garage, his former home, and is well liked for his good qualities and exemplary habits. About two years ago he was elected manager of the Hawthorne mill, coming here from Kokomo.

The many friends of the contracting parties join the REVIEW in wishing them a happy and prosperous married life.

REVIVAL OF THE ROCK

A STORY OF EARLY DAYS

By RANDALL DARRISH

COPYRIGHT BY A. C. HUGHES &amp; CO.

SYNOPSIS.

Adèle La Chesnaye, a belle of New France, is forced into marriage with a Frenchman, Casson, by her father, Governor La Barre, who is plotting to oust the British from the Illinois River. Adèle had overheard the plot and she had inherited a great fortune from her father and had kept it from her. La Barre and Casson learned of the girl's knowledge and the marriage and the hurried departure of Casson and a company for Fort St. Louis. The bride refused to share a room with her father-in-law, but she had a friend, young René Arctigny, Chevalier, the girl's uncle, one of the officers of the French army, who was a soldier and a man of honor. He found out the plot and he rescued her from the hands of her father-in-law. He then married her and they lived happily ever after.

When a woman falls in love with a man, does it mean that she is willing to give herself body and soul to him if he asks the sacrifice? Is it love when a woman discovers in her heart the willingness to surrender herself wholly to a lover? Perhaps these questions can best be answered by our lady readers—for no man knows the psychology of femininity. You will be deeply interested in Adèle's dilemma—her moral struggle—as told in this installment.

In a way I must have known this before, yet, not until that moment did the fact dawn upon me in full acknowledgment. I sank my head on my hands, my breath choked by surprise, by shame, and felt my cheeks burn. I loved him, and believed he loved me. I knew then that all the happiness of life consisted in this act: while between us across the shadow of Casson, my husband, true I loved him not; true I was to him only in name, true our marriage was a thing of shame, yet no less a fact, no less a barrier. I was a La Chesnaye to whom honor was a religion; a Catholic bowing humbly to the yoke of Holy Church; a French woman taught that marriage was a sacred rite.

The knowledge of my love for Arctigny brought me more fear than pleasure. I dare not dream or hope. I must escape his presence while I retained moral strength to resist temptation. I got to my feet, not knowing what I could do, and with an exception of returning to the beach, and seeking to find a passage southward. I would go now along the shore, before D'Arctigny came back, and meet this returning canoe. I felt as if my only safety—he would find me gone, would trace me along the sand, yet before I could be caught, I would have met the others, and thus escape the peril of being alone with him again.

Even as I reached this decision, something came in my throat and choked me, for my eyes saw just outside the curve of the shore line a canoe emerge from the shadows of the bluff. I cannot picture the reaction, the sudden striking fear which, in that instant, mastered me. They were coming, seeking me; coming to drag me back into slavery; coming to denounce D'Arctigny of crime and demand his life.

I sank down out of sight, yet my decision was made in an instant. It did not seem to me then as though another course could be taken. That D'Arctigny was innocent I had no doubt. I loved him, this I no longer denied to myself; and I could not possibly betray the man to the vindictive Casson. I peered forth, across the ridge of earth concealing me from observation, at the distant canoe. It was too far away for me to be certain of its approach, yet I assured myself that Indians were at the paddles, while three others, whose dress designated them as whites, occupied places in the boat. I turned and ran down the bank to where the yet gloved lady in the hollow, emitting a faint spiral of blue smoke, dug dirt up with my hands and covered the coals with a blanket. I completely extinguished it. I crept back to the bluff summit and lay down to watch.

The canoe rounded the curve in the shore and headed straight across toward where I rested in concealment. Their course would keep them too far away from the bluff to be seen, and which we had landed to observe the footprint of our feet or the pile of wood D'Arctigny had felled down. I observed this with an intense feeling of relief as I peered cautiously out from my covert.

I could see now clearly the faces of these in the canoe—the dark, occasional complexion of the Indians, and the three white men, as they swept past, a soldier in the bow, and two others, one of whom I recognized as the latter standing, gripping the steering paddle. The sound of his rasping, disagreeable voice reached me.

"This is the spot," he exclaimed, pointing. "I saw that headland just before the storm struck. But there is no wreck here, no sign of any landing. What is your judgment, monsieur?"

"That further search is useless, monsieur," answered the priest. "We have covered the entire coast, and found no sign of any survivor; no doubt they were all lost."

"It is likely true, for there was small hope for any swimmer in such a sea. Go on, round the long point yonder, and if there is no sign there we will return. 'Tis my thought they were all drowned, and there is no need of our seeking longer. Pull on boys, and let us finish the job."

They rounded the point, the priest talking earnestly, but the canoe so far away, I could not overhear his words.

Casson paid small heed to what he urged, but, at last, angrily lade him be still, and, after a glance into the narrow basin beyond, swung the bow of the canoe about, and headed it southward, the return course further off shore. The Indians paddled with renewed energy and in a few moments they were so far away their faces were indistinguishable, and I ventured to sit on the bank, my gaze still on the vanishing canoe.

So intent was I that I heard no sound of approaching footsteps, and knew nothing of D'Arctigny's presence until he spoke.

"What is that yonder—a canoe?" I started, shrinking back, suddenly realizing what I had done, and the construction he might place upon my action.

"Yes," I answered faintly, "it is a canoe."

"But it is headed south; it is going away," he panted, gazing into my face. "Did it not come this far?"

"Yes, monsieur; but listen, No, do not touch me. Perhaps it was all wrong, yet I thought it right. I lay here hidden from view and watched them; I extinguished the fire so they could not see the smoke. They came so near I could hear their voices, and distinguish their words, yet I let them pass."

"Who were in the canoe?"

"Besides the Indians, Casson, Père Alouez, and the soldier Descares. Do you realize, monsieur, why I chose to remain unseen? Why I have done what may seem an unworthy act?"

"No, monsieur, yet I cannot deem your reason an unworthy one—yet wait; could it be fear for my life?"

"It was that, and that only, monsieur. That may be true, but I am a man when I first perceived the canoe approaching yonder. I felt that hate rather than love urged Casson to make search for me. I feel I have done a right, monstrous, and yet I must trust you to never cause me to regret that I am the wife of Monsieur Casson."

To my surprise his face brightened, his eyes smiling, as he bowed low before me.

"Your confidence shall not be betrayed, madame," he said gallantly. "I pledge you my discretion, whatever circumstances may arise. There is no cur in the D'Arctigny strain, and I fight my own battles. Some day I shall be face to face with Francis on occasion. Come, madame, there is naught now you need to fear."

CHAPTER XV.

We Decide Our Course.

I accepted D'Arctigny's outstretched hand, and permitted him to assist me down the bank. The new arrival was just within the edge of the forest, sending over a freshly blinded fire, barely commencing to blaze, and he laid him on the grass lay a wild flow, already plucked of its feathers. So intent was the fellow at his task, he did not even lift his head until my companion halted him.

"Barbeau, here is the lady of whom I spoke—the wife of Monsieur Casson."

He stood up and made me a salute as though I were an officer, as had a looking little man as ever I had seen, with a small, peaked face, a mop of black hair, and a pair of shrewd, humorous eyes. His dress was that of a courier du bois, with no trace of uniform save the blue, forage cap gripped in one hand, yet he stood as if on parade. In spite of his strange, uncouth appearance there was that in his face which won my favor, and I held out my hand to him.

"You are a soldier of France, Monsieur d'Arctigny tells me."

"Yes, madame, of the Regiment Carignan-Salliers," he answered.

"I would have you served long. My father was an officer in that command—Captain La Chesnaye."

The expression on the man's face changed magically.

"You the daughter of Captain La Chesnaye," he exclaimed, the words bursting forth uncontrolled, "and married to Casson! how can this be?"

"You know him, father?"

"Ay, madame; I was with him at the Richelieu, at the village of the Mohawks, and at Bois le Blanc, where he died. I am Jacques, Barbeau, a soldier for 20 years; did not get to you of me?"

"I was but a girl when he was killed, and we seldom met, for he was away on campaigns. Yet what you mean by this surprising surprise at my marriage to Monsieur Casson?"

He hesitated, evidently regretting his impulsive speech, and gazing from my face into the stern eyes of D'Arctigny.

"Monsieur, madame, I spoke hastily; it was not my place."

"That may be true, Barbeau," replied the stern grimly, "yet the words have been said, and the lady has a right to have them explained. Was there quarrel between her father and this French Casson?"

"Ay, there was, and bitter, although I know nothing as to the cause. Casson and La Barre—he whom I now knew to be governor of New France—were allies opposed to Captain La Chesnaye, and but for reports they made he would have been the colonel. He struck Casson in the back, and they were both killed. The very morning the French met at Bois le Blanc. 'Twas the talk of the men that the captain was shot behind."

"By Casson?"

"That I cannot say; yet the bullet entered behind the ear, for I was first to reach him, and he had no other weapon than the broken Christian sword. The feeling against M. Casson was so strong that he resigned in a few months. You never heard this?"

"I could not answer, but I should offend with bowed head. I felt D'Arctigny place his hand on my shoulder."

"The lady did not know," he said gravely, as though he felt the necessity of an explanation. "She was at school in a convent at Quebec, and no rumor reached her. She is thankful to you for what you have said, Barbeau, and can trust you as her friend and comrade. May I tell him the truth, madame? The man may have other information of value."

I looked at the soldier, and his eyes were grave and honest.

"Yes," I answered, "I can do no harm."

D'Arctigny's hand was still on my shoulder, but his glance did not seek mine. He was looking at the soldier.

"There is some low trick here, Barbeau," he began soberly, "but the details are not clear. Madame has trusted to a soldier, Monsieur de la Durantaye, who has kept below at the postage to the Des Plaines. Out yonder I ran on my hind, bearing some message from Green Bay—an odd fellow, with a gun at his shoulder, and a tongue with which to tell the truth on occasion. Come, madame, there is naught now you need to fear."

"He visited often at the house of my uncle, Hugo Chevalier, and while he never spoke to me directly of marriage, I was told he desired me to be his wife, and at the palace he so presented me to Monsieur La Barre."

"On what point, madame?"

"No," he supposed me penniless; he thought it a great honor done me by the favorite of the governor. 'Twas my belief, he thought some reward for persuading me to accept the offer."

"And this Chevalier—what became of him?"

"He accompanied us on the journey, also upon order of Monsieur La Barre, who, no doubt, thought he would be safe in the wilderness than in Quebec. He was murdered at St. Ignace."

"Murdered?"

"Ay, struck down from behind with a knife. No one knows who did it, but Casson has charged the crime against Monsieur d'Arctigny, and circumstances are such he will find it difficult to prove his innocence."

The soldier stood silent, evidently revolving in his mind all that he had been told him, his eyes narrowed into slits as he gazed thoughtfully at us both.

"I think," he exclaimed at last, "the riddle is not so hard to read, although, no doubt, the trick has been well played. I know Governor La Barre, and this François Casson, for I have served under both. While Monsieur La Chesnaye was my captain and friend, May I tell you what, in my judgment, seems best for you to do?"

I glanced at D'Arctigny, and his eyes gave me courage.

"Monsieur, you are a French soldier," I answered, "an educated man, and I have known your father's friend. I will listen gladly."

"His eyes smiled, and he swept the earth with his cap."

"Then my plan is this—leave Monsieur Casson to go his way, and let me be the man to lead you. I will take the trail, and the journey is not difficult. M. de la Durantaye is camped at the portage of the Des Plaines, having sent his men to be sure, yet he is a gallant officer, and no enemy to La Salle, although he serves the governor. He will see justice done, and give you a safe passage to Fort St. Louis, where De Tonty knows how to protect his officers. Faith! I would like to see François Casson try to browbeat that one-armed Italian!"

"Would he be one time he would meet his match?"

D'Arctigny laughed.

"Ay, you are right there, my friend. I have felt the iron hook, and I sensed how he wins his way with white and red. Yet he is no longer in command at Fort St. Louis; I bring him orders now from St. Louis in the hands of the Chevalier de Baguis with whom we must reckon."

"By Casson?"

"That I cannot say, and men enough, with Casson's party, to enforce his order. And he is a hot-head, conceited, and holding himself a bit better than others, because he bears the name of the King. 'Tis said that he and De Tonty have had many a stiff quarrel since he came, but he dare not go too far. They were both men of great energy to draw sword if it ever came to blows."

De Tonty, Borsolend, L'Esplanade, De Marle, and the Algonquins camped on the plain below. They would be there if the Chevalier spoke the word while I doubt not M. de la Durantaye would throw his influence on the side of mercy; he has small love for the captain of dragoons."

I spoke quickly, and before D'Arctigny could voice decision.

"We will accept your guidance, monsieur. It is the best choice, and I shall be glad to see you again when we can expect the return of the canoe. Can we not at once begin the journey?"

"It was three days in reaching the spot where the Illinois and the Fox rivers joined their waters, and swept for ward in one broad stream. The time of our arrival at Fort St. Louis was early in the afternoon, and as D'Arctigny said, Fort St. Louis was situated scarce ten miles below, our long journey seemed nearly ended. We anticipated reaching there before night, and to the relief of my fear of the unknown, my heart was light with hope and expectation."

"DE LA DURANTAYE."

"Perhaps it is as well," commented D'Arctigny lightly, "at least as far as my good health goes; but 'tis like to make a hard journey for you, madame."

"Is it so far yet until we attain the fort?"

"A matter of twenty-five leagues; of no moment had we a boat in which to float downstream, but the trail, as I remember, is rough."

"Perchance there may be a boat," interjected Barbeau. "There was the wreck of an Indian canoe a mile below here on the Des Plaines, not me some are spurious. It would not be wise to refuse all money because we had seen a few counterfeit pieces, but it would be wiser to learn the difference between the genuine and the counterfeit. Even so it may be profitable to consider what a genuine revival of religion is, why it is often neglected, and what can be done to promote it.

A revival is simply a renewal of spiritual life which has grown dormant, strictly speaking it applies only to Christians, for those who have no spiritual life cannot have it renewed. You can revive a drooping plant, but not a dead one. So those in whose hearts Christ dwells may have their love for him increased, but one who has never been converted cannot be revived. However, when Christians are revived the unsaved are sure to be converted, though this is by no means the principal benefit.

That the spirit does move upon a church or community at times in an unusual manner cannot be denied. In place of apathy and indifference we behold attention and interest. God's word seems attractive, God's house is thronged night after night regardless of the weather or the season of the year. Old feuds are forgotten, old enemies are reconciled, and everybody else that they could get their hands upon, and man, whether it involves a hearty confession, or the paying of a debt or the restoration of what has been wrongfully taken, will be glad to do it.

Object 1. It awakens excitement. What if that? Excitement is a good thing if the object be a worthy one, the conversion of lost men and women is certainly a worthy object. Business men try constantly to interest people in their stock of goods, they work night and day to get a crowd into their stores, politicians endeavor to draw with literature, parade the street with bands, and no one questions the wisdom of it because we know it is necessary to arouse the public to the importance of voting on election day.

Object 2. It does not last long, that may be true in some cases, but the merchant does not stop booming because he has sold his goods. The politician will not last long, but the politician who knows the campaign will be short. It is not to be expected that spiritual meetings will continue long weeks, but if the work is genuine, the results will abide for years. The reformation lasted only a few years, at Europe and the whole world feels its effects to this day. Deism lasted but a day, but it changed the whole face of the world religiously.

Why Are Revivals Necessary?

Why does a revival come upon a nation? Because it hasn't strength enough to hold its head up and must have outside help. So there are many Christians who are not self-sustaining. They do not pray enough or feed on the word enough to keep them in good spiritual condition. The consequence is they steadily lose ground until they are in danger of losing all hold on Christ, and special measures must be resorted to to revive them. Frequent doses of God's word must be poured into them until they begin to respond to it and love it, and become self-sustaining Christians, able to help others into the way of life.

In all ages God has found it necessary to say to his people, "Awake, awake, put on thy strength, O Zion, not on thy beautiful garments, O Jerusalem."

When God's people desire a revival and are willing to comply with the conditions, God is always willing that his people are saved, and they are not rebuffed by any man, but they are humble themselves and pray, and seek my face, and turn from their wicked ways; then will I hear from heaven, and will forgive their sin and will heal their land." (II Chron. 7:14).

"Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in your houses, and your seed shall be increased, saith the Lord of hosts. I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour out to you a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it." (Mal. 3:10).

These two passages seem to teach clearly that God's people can have a revival whenever they are willing to do their duty as the word requires, and bring God's promise.

REVIVALS AND HOW TO SECURE THEM

TEXT—Will thou not revive us again?

The word revival is associated in many minds with high-pitched revivals. It suggests a season of great excitement, the multiplication of meetings, a multitude hurried into the church, many of whom are not converts.

LABORING IN HARMONY

Blotting, backbiting and lack of harmony have wrecked more community prospects than we care to enumerate. They are the granite upon which many a bright commercial future has been smashed to nothingness. They are the deathknell of prosperity in any town.

And yet we see reputable and high standing and well meaning business men continually taking little, vicious digs at their competitors in the commercial field. We see them throwing out innuendoes in the hope of curtailing the trade of their rivals. We see them casting veiled reflections on the business integrity of other firms who may perchance be more successful than they are.

It doesn't pay. It doesn't pay either the man, his rival or the commercial life of the community upon which we all must depend.

Many business men have no thought of the far reaching effect of their inconsiderate words to the detriment of others, but the disastrous spirit is felt on all hands. It creates a spirit of discord in the community, destroys the confidence of one in another and prevents that cohesion of purpose by which we accomplish the greater achievements of life.

We would like to see every man
speak well of his business associates.
We would like to see them all laboring in harmony in a commercial union for the advancement of this town and this community. We would like to see them all pulling together in order that the load may be lighter for each.

We have everything to gain by such a unity of purpose. We have nothing whatever to lose.

A PERSONAL RESPONSIBILITY

Perhaps no other feature of civic reform or improvement of recent years has attracted so much attention as has that of road building. All over our broad land the wave of enthusiasm is rolling. The people are realizing that they must have better roads, and the machinery of government in its taxing capacity is being ever more and more strained to meet this demand.

But while there is a certain responsibility resting upon the state in the maintenance of our highways, we are in danger of forgetting that an even greater responsibility rests upon us individually as citizens. The reason why we sometimes lose sight of this responsibility is that we Americans have gotten into the habit of working out such matters through the medium of taxation. If we want a new road opened we levy a tax. If we want an old road macadamized we tax some more. Is a bridge to be built? We impose another tax. We tax and we keep on taxing, and this regardless of the fact that we all know that the hardest work to give up is that which is paid in taxes. Many a man will come to work and spend in a day enough to pay his yearly taxes and think nothing of it. But he will sweat drops of blood, as it were, when the tax gatherer rounds him up.

We depend too much upon taxes.
We should depend more upon individual and personal effort. A lively neighborhood interest in good roads is worth all the taxes you can wring from unwilling pocketbooks. A determination by a united citizenship of a community that their roads shall excel is worth more than all the road commissioners in existence. Road commissioners work through devices ways to reach their object. The united settlement of a people works direct to the object. It determines what is wanted and then takes the most direct route to accomplish its ends.

Do you favor better roads in this community? Then go to work and arouse a healthy community sentiment that will defend them. When this is accomplished good roads will be the result.

And just a few words more. Realize your OWN responsibility. Say to yourself "the roads of this community belong partly to me and I owe a duty to them." Don't depend upon a benevolent government, official, state, county or township, but shoulder your own responsibility. Then you will be in a fair way to get your neighbor to do likewise.

The KITCHEN CABINET

Ability is often buried deep in content and indifference. A blow in the face has more than once stirred a cool-headed, easy-going man into a realization of his real strength.—Herbert Kaufman.

GOOD THINGS.

A delicious roast which resembles venison may be prepared with a leg of mutton. Cut the skin and every particle of fat from the meat and lard the leg with salt pork, using a large needle. Put the meat into a kettle with a quart of vinegar, a few peppercorns, one-fourth of a lemon, two onions, a carrot and a bay leaf.
Let the meat cook in this three days, turning the meat twice daily. Drain and put the meat into a roasting pan with the vegetables and a cupful of the sauce. Let it cook an hour and a half, basting it occasionally and adding more sauce if needed. Serve the meat with the sauce thickened with flour and sour cream; strain the sauce and serve in a sauceboat.

Beef Heart Chop Suey.—Boil the heart and chop in small pieces. Take two minced onions, one pint of tomatoes, two tablespoonsful of chopped suet, and a quarter of a package of macaroni, previously cooked. Mix all together, put in a baking dish, add a half cup of boiling water and bake an hour.

Nut Loaf.—Take a cupful of chopped walnut meats, mix with the half cupful of bread crumbs and the same amount of uncooked, cooked rice. Add tablespoonful of minced parsley, a teaspoonful of salt, a few dashes of red pepper, two eggs beaten, and three tablespoonsful of butter melted.
Mix well and mold in a pan until firm. Unmold and bake in a small dripping pan, basting with melted butter. Bake for three-quarters of an hour.

Cranberry Salad.—Take a half cupful each of chopped celery, apples and cranberries. With a teaspoonful of salt. Serve on lettuce leaves with mayonnaise dressing.

Pickled Tongues.—Let simmer for twenty minutes three pounds of salt, one pound of brown sugar, three cups of salt-peter and seven quarts of water; skim while boiling and when quarts could pour over the tongues, which must be completely covered with the brine.

The high cost of living has hit Barrington again. This time it is milk, which has been advanced by local dealers to eight cents per quart and from four to five cents a pint. ## U-BOAT 53 SINKS 6 SHIPS OFF U. S. AMERICANS SAFE

Passenger Liner and Five Other Vessels Sent to Bottom
by Raider.

TWO NEUTRAL BOATS SUNK

British Boats Are Torpedoed While off Rhode Island—U. S. Destroyer Off to Rescues in Answer to S. G. S. Calls.

Boston, Oct. 10.—The submarine arm of the Imperial German navy ravaged shipping off the eastern coast of the United States on Sunday.

Four British, one Dutch and one Norwegian steamer were sent to the bottom or left crippled derelicts off Nantucket shoals.

Sunday night, under the light of the Imperial moon, the destroyer flotilla of the United States Atlantic fleet picked up passengers and crews of the derelict vessels and brought them into Newport, R. I.

A number of Americans were among the passengers aboard the British steamer Stephano. All were saved.

List of Ships Sunk.

Stephano, British passenger liner, 2,144 tons gross, plying regularly between New York, Halifax and St.
John's, N. F. Torpedoed southeast of Nantucket while en route to New York.
Passengers and crew, numbering 144, were picked up by the destroyer Albatross
and brought to Newport.

Stratheden, British freighter, 4,221 tons, torpedoed and sunk off Nantucket. Crew taken aboard Nantucket shoals lightship and later removed to Newport by torpedo-boat destroyers.
The Stratheden left New York on Saturday for Bordeaux.

West Point, British freighter, 2,413 tons gross, 316 feet long, torpedoed and sunk off Nantucket. Crew abandoned the ship in small boats after a warning shot from the submarine's gun. Officers and men were taken aboard destroyer. Bound from London for New York.

Bloomersdijk, Dutch freighter, 2,201 tons, torpedoed and sunk south of Nantucket. Crew taken aboard a destroyer. The steamer was bound from New York for Rotterdam.

Christian Knudsen, Norwegian freighter, 2,583 tons, torpedoed and sunk near where the Bloomersdijk was sunk. Crew picked up by destroyers. The vessel sailed from New York Saturday for London.

Kington, British freighter, torpedoed and sunk southeast of Nantucket.
Crew missing and destroyer searching for them. This vessel is not named in shipping registers and may be the Kingston.

So far as known there was no loss of life, though at a late hour the crew of the British steamer Kington had not been accounted for.

A submarine held up the American steamer Kansas, bound from New York for Genoa, with steel for the Italian government, but later, on establishing her identity, allowed the American to proceed. The Kansas came into Boston harbor late at night.

The hostile submarine is believed to be the U-53, which paid a call to Newport on Saturday and disappeared at sunset. Some naval men, however, declared that at least two submarines are operating close to the American shore, though outside the three-mile limit.

Operate in Steamer Lanes.
The submarine or submarines have taken a position directly in the steamer lanes, where they could hardly miss anything bound in for New York or back out from that port.

Vessels of the entire allied nations and neutral boats carrying contraband of war scurried to get within the three-mile limit of the American shore.
Several that were following the outside course shifted and made for the inside lane. The Stephano of the Red Cross line, however, was caught outside the neutral zone.

The destruction of this vessel was perhaps the biggest prize of the day.
The craft had been sold to the Russian government and would have been used as an icebreaker after her present trip.

Throughout the day and up to late Sunday night none of the patrolling fleet maintained by the British and French to protect their own shipping and American ships carrying munitions of war had been sighted, but the commander in chief of the British North Atlantic squadron at Halifax in response to queries from the United States that "all steps possible in the circumstances are being taken to deal with the situation."

The passengers and crews of the de-

WARMS HOUSE BY SUN'S RAYS

Ohio Machinist Makes Fireless Cooker of Barn and Stores Heat for Use in Winter.

Fosteria, O.—"Bottled sunshine" is what Albert Barnes, a local machinist and a genius, calls his new invention—a cubic contrivance which he uses to heat his house in winter and to do the washing, ironing and all other household tasks requiring stored force.
On the hottest days in summer Mr.

destroyed vessels who were brought into Newport reached there after midnight.

Use Guns and Torpedoes.
Later reports gave further details of the attacks. The Stephano met a submarine six miles southeast of Nantucket lightship and was attacked by gunfire and a torpedo. It remained afloat until 10:05 o'clock Sunday night.

The West Point went down ten miles south of the Nantucket lightship. The Stratheden was attacked "off lightship," the report stated, and the Bloomersdijk was sunk three miles south of the lightship. It remained afloat some time, going down at 8:05.

The Bloomersdijk, a Dutch steamer, was caught near the graveyard of the others. The vessel remained afloat some time after being torpedoed, but went down at 8:05 o'clock. The news of its sinking was followed very quickly by the announcement that the Christian Knudsen, a Norwegian tank, also was a victim of the submarine.

The sinking of these neutral ships added to an impression in naval circles that at least two submarines were operating off the coast.

The American steamer Kansas was held up three miles east of Nantucket lightship.

The first wireless warning of the presence of a hostile submarine in the steamer lanes was given in the distinct signals of the West Point, which reported that it had been torpedoed 30 miles southeast of Nantucket light.

This message apparently was picked up by every vessel having a wireless equipment within range, for within a very short time press dispatches from St. John's, N. B., and Halifax, N. S., indicated that the patrolling battleships had received the alarm.

The British, censorship, however, prevented the disclosure of the movements of the patrolling fleets.

Meanwhile the British in Boston were communicating with their vessels at sea.

U-53 Reaches Newport.

Newport, R. I., Oct. 10.—The German submarine U-53, mounting two quickfiring guns and equipped with torpedoes, steamed into Newport harbor on Saturday afternoon, 11 days after its escape from the British in the Wilhelmshaven, and carrying official mail and confidential advice for the German embassy at Washington.

The submarine came into port flying the German flag and under its own power. As soon as it was sighted by the United States naval training station on Coast Island an American torpedo boat was sent out and communicated with it.

Lieut. Capt. Hans Rose chose an anchorage alongside the U. S. S. Birmingham in the outer harbor.

German Not Linger Long.

Almost before the officers of the American fleet of warships, through sunken wrecks, the Bloomersdijk began to sink. The submarine, however, had recovered from their astonishment, the undersea fighter had delivered a message for the German embassy at Washington, and, weighing anchor, turned the Bloomersdijk overboard and disappeared beneath the waves just inside the three-mile limit.

To a press correspondent the commander in chief of the training station, Ambassador von Bernstorff.

Lieutenant Captain Rose declared that the sole purpose of his visit to a United States port was to leave official mail, and, having accomplished his purpose, he put to sea shortly after five o'clock in the afternoon.

Scrupulous observance of the United States neutrality law was maintained by the German commander.

Torpedo Boat Convey.

The submarine started speedy Newport on Sunday afternoon when it appeared off Coast Island. There was a "str" among United States navy men and at once the torpedo boat victor put out to convey the victor to safe anchorage alongside the United States steamship Birmingham.

There was no effort to conceal the fact that the vessel was a fighter—not a peaceful freighter. It was Deutschland, which recently brought in a distress call.

A boat was sent out from the Birmingham, which met the submarine and was immediately taken to the commandant's quarters, where they were entertained for about an hour.

Upon leaving Lieutenant Rose said he was going outside the harbor and remain there for the present.

Immediately upon the arrival of the U-53 wireless information was sent to the British and French patrol fleet off the coast.

Two American Ships Sunk.

Barnes catches the rays of the sun at the focus of a bright tin roof on his house and conveys the heat to his barn, which he has remodeled into an immense model of a fireless cooker box.

In this building great squares of a tuffaceous stone are placed and the heat is stored within these big disks. These are closely packed into holes of pressed straw. The stones are heated and 1,200,000 calories of heat are sufficient to heat his house all winter.

Mr. Barnes claims that it took only ten days to charge his storage plant.

THE HOME BEAUTIFUL

Among the Most Satisfactory House Plants for Winter Are Palms and Climbing Vines.

HOUSE PLANTS IN WINTER

By L. M. BENNINGTON.

Among the most beautiful and satisfactory house plants for winter are palms. They are very strong and hardy, and with the observation of a few simple rules can be kept green and vigorous all winter. Most palms are killed by overwatering than by cold.
They should have a temperature of between 60 and 65 degrees. If it is not convenient to have any room in the house kept as cool as this, stand them in the corner farthest from the radiant, as close as possible to the light, but not in the glaring sun.
The worst enemy of the plants is dust. Owing to its smooth leaves, the palm can be readily kept free from
it. Its leaves should be washed with a soft sponge and lukewarm water.

The watering of the plants is of great interest. The great danger is that the housewife will be too generous in this respect. It is difficult to give a definite rule. Generally speaking, the earth in the pot should be kept moist, but not wet. If the room is kept at high temperature, the plant will require more water than in a cool place. But winter should be a time of rest for the plant. It should not be much growing, and therefore nourishment and water should be given sparingly. It is easy to soak the soil of a plant, but hard to dry it, once thoroughly.

Neither a palm, or any other plant, should ever be put in a glazed pot. If an ornamental pot is desired, the earth-pot should be set inside. A porous pot absorbs and evaporates the moisture, while in a glazed pot the earth grows sour and unfit for even very hardy plants. There should be a hole in the bottom of the pot, over which a stone, a bit of broken crockery or something similar should be laid. This will keep the earth from filling it up, and the surplus water will trickle out beneath. A few lumps of common cheerful at the bottom of the pot will prevent the rotting from rotting, and prevent charcoal rotting. The earth has the same effect, keeping the bottom from turning sour.

Having temperature and moisture right, the next enemy of the plant is parasites, such as fungi and insects.
Many little insect pests infest the plant. Some of these are destroyed by washing the leaves with a soap and soft brush, using clean water only.

Those that cannot be destroyed in this way, such as scales, can be quickly dispatched by tobacco juice diluted with water. Any tobaccoist or cigar manufacturer will give you all the ribs of tobacco leaves you want. Put a handful of them in a quart of water and boil. Wash the leaves with this,
and if you put in a little white-soap, it will be more effective. Of ### Diplomatic Interview.

Col. E. M. House said at a dinner in Washington:
"I sometimes think that diplomacy is more successful if it were more truthful and frank. The way some diplomats treat one another, they don't get any answer to real, helpful interviews than the two celebrities did."

"Two celebrities, one a sufferer and the other doctor, were introduced at a tea. After the tea the suffering celebrity was asked how he and the doctor one had got on."
"Oh, we got on fine," he answered.
"I couldn't talk and he couldn't hear me."

"Any road that is manmade with

Grapes for the King.

It is reported that the king's grapevine at Windsor, in the gardens near Cumberland Lodge, is doing well this year and is likely to yield more than 500 bunches. Planted in 1776, it is 120 feet in length and 20 feet in width.
The most remarkable vine in Europe, however, is the famous vine at Hampton Court, from which this is a cutting. This was planted in 1708 and still yields abundantly.

CARE OF THE HOLLYHOCK

Keep the hollyhock flowers picked off. Remove them as soon as they begin to die. This serves two purposes: it makes the plant more attractive and it prevents seed from forming. If you have noticed, there are almost always little branches starting about the base of the old plants. If seed is not allowed to develop, the energy of the plant will be expended on these, and they will bear a good crop of flowers late in the season. But if the plant perfects seed they never amount to anything. So to it that they are encouraged to make themselves useful.

Now in Good Health Through Use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Say it is Household Necessity. Doctor Called it a Miracle.

All women ought to know the wonderful effects of taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound even on those who seem hopelessly ill. Here are three actual cases:

Harrisburg, Penn.—"When I was single I enfused a great deal from female weakness because my work compelled me to stand all day. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for that and was made stronger by its use. After I was married I took the Compound again for a female trouble and after three months I passed what the doctor called a growth. He said it was a miracle that it came away as one generally goes under the knife to have them removed. I never want to be without your Compound in the house."—Mrs. I.
FRANK KNOX, 1642 Fulton St., Harrisburg, Penn.

Hardly Able to Move.

Albert Lee, Minn.—"For about a year I had sharp pains across my back and hips and was hardly able to move around the house.
My head ached and I was dizzy and had no appetite. After taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills I am feeling stronger than for years. I have a little boy eight months old and am doing my work all alone. I would not be without your remedy in the house as there are none like them."—Mrs. I.
YOR, 611 Water St., Albert Lee, Minn.

Three Doctors Gave Her Up.

Pittsburg, Penn.—"My medicine has helped me wonderfully. When I was a girl 13 years old I was always sickly and delicate and suffered from irregularities. Three doctors gave me up and said
I would go into consumption. I took Lydia E.
Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and with the third bottle began to feel better. I soon became regular and I got strong and shortly after I was married.
Now my two nice stout healthy children and I are able to work hard every day."—Mrs. CLEMENTINE DEBARRA, 34 Gardner St., Troy Hill, Pittsburg, Penn.

All women are invited to write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for special advice—it will be confidential.

When Work Is Hard

That kidney troubles are so common is due to the strain put upon the kidneys in so many occupations, such as driving, standing, sitting, etc., and the exposure to changes of temperature in iron furnaces, smelters, etc.
Dyspepsia as in tanneries, quarries,
mines etc.
Inhaling poisonous fumes in painting, printing and chemical shops.
Doan's Kidney Pills are a sure strengthening weak kidneys.

An Illinois Case.

Chas. Manson, Depot
St. Charles, Ill.,
says: "I was annoyed
by having to get up
often during the night
to pass the kidney.
I was very nervous,
my back ached, and I could not straighten my legs. I tried all kinds of medicine, but
at my work had a lot
to do with bending
the body. Doan's Kidney Pills did me
up in good shape and have been free from kidney weakness ever
since."

NEAR-BY NEWS

Dundee and Carpentersville will observe National Pay-Up week from October 16 to 21.

The postoffice at Wauconda has been moved from the Jenks building to the Leader building on Bangs street.

There are fifteen houses under the process of construction in Woodstock at the present time. It is reported that as many more are planned.

N. Cohn will soon erect a new brick garage at Crystal Lake. The building will be 50x100 feet, and the foundation work will be put in this fall.

Beginning October 1, employees at the big plant of the Illinois Iron and Bolt company at Carpentersville received a five per cent increase in wages. This action was entirely voluntary on the part of the company and came as an agreeable surprise to the 500 employees at the plant.

While driving in his Ford car along the turnpike east of Algonquin, Joe Houdek drove off the road last Wednesday night and broke one of the front wheels. Every spoke in the wheel was broken. Mr. Houdek was obliged to leave the car at the scene of the accident over night and on Thursday he took out a new wheel for the car and drove it back to town.

Adolph Gottschmidt took charge of the postoffice Sunday and has hired Miss Elvira Smith as his assistant. Mr. Wilson will remain on the job for a short time to explain the ropes. While going through the records the ex- and present postmasters unearthed a lot of old-time records of the early eighties, which contained the names of many early settlers who have passed away.—Palatine Enterprise.

A. F. Sheldon, founder of the Sheldon school at Ares, and his entire family met with a very narrow escape last Saturday night when their new Abbotsford limousine went into the ditch on the Area road just west of Libertyville. Mr. Sheldon's son was driving the car at a moderate speed when they met with another car with glaring headlights. The driver of the Sheldon car turned out a little too far and the machine went into the ditch, completely upsetting the limousine. Fortunately none of the members of the family received more than a bad scare and a few minor bruises. The machine was badly wrecked.

SAFETY FIRST

By Ruth Derwaldt

Until a few years ago we did not hear very much about "safety first." The term originated in the big cities where such a great amount of traffic is being carried on. Then when so many school children and older people were being hurt, the people of the cities resolved that something had to be done. Safety First clubs were organized and men went out, and are now paid to see that people cross the streets safely. This movement spread and the suburban towns put up signs at sharp turns in the roads and at the most traveled parts of their business districts.

The railroads put up signs for people to notice, and in driving through the country we see many signs telling us to "Stop, Look, Listen," and on many of the country roads we frequently see signs reading, "A Sharp Turn, Honk Your Horn."

People have noticed that a great many accidents have been prevented by this movement and many clubs and organizations have been started and much good has been done. This movement is especially advantageous to children every morning, noon and afternoon. It might well be followed in Barrington. The school building faces on three very much used streets and if the town of Barrington would put up signs a block in every direction from the school house to warn automobile drivers and teamsters to be thoughtful of the small children around the school premises a great deal of anxiety on the part of children's parents might be prevented.

To carry out this suggestion no more than six signs would be needed, and the small cost of the signs would of course be a small expense to the town. But when we think of the saving in accidents that they might do for the people of Barrington, the expense of the signs should not be considered.
