THURSDAY, JUNE 27, 1918

"I don't like the game of armament nor funds that can be raised by it. But the clique cooperation that makes them win the day; it is the individual, the army as a whole. But, the everlasting framework of every blooded soul."

TRADE AT HOME CLUB.

Mr. Haynes was kitchen to get the support he has been able to get for some enterprise he had in mind.
He wanted to raise money to start a business, but the business he was but was unable to get the support he wanted. "Dread [own]" he growled.

Haynes had always made it his habit to buy most of his home needs of mail order houses, but concerns at a distance. He only patronized the home stores when he wanted something special.

"I would natural the shouldn't have backed 'you up,'" remarked a royal Trade at Home. "You never had any real friends in the business trade. You would quickly cross across if they had known you.
But you never made the least effort to win their friends, support, or confidence. You were too far removed to you. If you want friends for your own, you must help other people put their enterprises over."

REMEMBER JULY FOURTH.

On the 4th of July, the 100th anniversary of the birth of the nation, the world will be looking at the great national holiday will almost have the character of Independence Day of the United States.

It will be a day of liberty for the world.

France, in Italy, Japan and in all the smaller countries allied with America in the great war. Most of the world is looking to America to take the lead.

England—the country which provokes the Declaration of Independence and which strips off its shield the Union Jack.

To add to the international character of this year's observance of the Fourth of July, the Declaration of Independence is to be read in counties in more than twenty languages—perhaps in thirty. Citizens of all countries will even read in the world are marking the anniversary of the day as Americans, even though they have not mastered the speech of the speech.

The world will have a mattress for boasting. It isn't now. The tunes are less the welfare of the world to day, legends from America are given to the world in catalogues merely for the sake of our pride of possession.

It is over to us to do our part in the observance. This is the day of the month for which we have made a day not only for cataloguing our resources, but a day specially for marking the day of the world to day, for that is the world's cause, for that is America's cause.

It is our individual

and national cause.

If we do not do our part in the Germany there will be no Fourth of July celebrations when war is over. Independence Day will then be a day of mourning for the lost liberties.

Most of us can not go into the fighting forces, most of us can not be in the service, but we are connected with the war, but all of us are connected with our neighbors that we are connected with.

Our Government is urging upon us to do our part in the war, to do our part in the war, to do our part in the war—loyalty of peace times is not sufficient. The brand of loyalty we are to have is not imposed on us, to offer himself and his country to the cause of the war, which may be victorious in the great contest.
