By LIEUTENANT PAT O'BRIEN

(Copyright, 1918, by Pat Ave. O'Brien)

AFTER WEEKS OF HARDSHIP O'BRIEN MEETS A FRIEND WHO OFFERS TO HELP HIM ON HIS WAY.

Sgt. O'Brien, a resident of Monroe, Ill., after serving in the American Flying Corps on the Mexican border in 1916, joins the British Royal Flying Corps in Canada, and after a brief training period is sent to France. He is assigned to a squadron flying over the Somme River, where he is shot down and captured by the Germans, from which he emerges victorious. Finally, in a fight with four German flyers, O'Brien is shot down. He flies 8000 feet and, escaping death, lands in a field. He is captured and sent to a German hospital, with a bullet hole in his mouth. After a few days in the hospital, he is sent to a prison camp at Courtrai. After a short stay there, he is sent to another prison camp at Lille. He is released and decides to take a desperate chance for liberty. He loops through the open window of the car while the train is traveling 35 miles an hour, and is captured again. He is sent to another prison camp, which straddles the German and Luxembourg border, traveling at night and sleeping by day, living on garbage and raw vegetables stolen from the German soldiers. He is captured again, but is released. He has his ricks detected by going in the middle of the night to the home of a Belgian family, where he obtains the first cooked food he has tasted in 18 days.

The knock of making fire with two pieces of wood I had often heard and used to think was a good idea, and for various reasons I concluded that it would be unsafe for me to build a fire. I had no matches, so the first place there was no absolute need for it. I didn't have anything to burn, so I had no absolute need to start a fire. While the air was getting to be rather cool at night, I was unable to sleep, so I had no absolute need to notice it. In the daytime, when I was resting or sleeping, the sun was warming me.

To have borrowed matches from a Belgian peasant would have been fatal, but when I was willing to take the risk of being apprehended, it was just as easy to ask for food as matches.

The second place, it would have been extremely dangerous to have built a fire even if I had matches. You see, I was in Belgium, which is the most thickly populated country in Europe, without anyone in the vicinity. I had no absolute need to advertising whereabout.

The village in that part of Belgium that I was in had a population of 1000, so, close together, that there was hardly ever an hour when there was not a person in sight. Every village has its clock. Many times I could hear the clock striking in the distance.

But the hour had very little interest to me. My program was to travel as far as possible, to go to the coast and pay no attention to the hours in between, and in the daytime I had only two hours to sleep. I had no absolute need to get as much sleep as possible.

The chances that I sat in Belgian country in the small hours that the peasants had not eat; all the strength had concentrated in their bodies and was used up. I had no absolute need to be pretty hungry to day, but I could eat ever cabbage soup, and the many vegetable piles to carrots, turnips and sugar beets—especially sugar beets.

It is the same thing that today even a sum of turnips, raw or cooked, makes me sick, and yet a few short months ago my life depended upon them.

Next after the lack of food for fuel, I was always in hopes that I might come upon some tomatoes or other vegetables which I really had a desire to eat. I was never disappointed when I found some celery, I was never so fortunate. I ate so much of the celery that I was sick for two days thereafter. I was carried several hundred yards and then laid on it as I walked alone.

Of course, I kept my eyes open all the time for any food, but I was too late in the fruit for fruit, as all that I ever was able to find were two or three small apples. That was one of my saddest days, but I was never able to repeat it.

In the days when I was in Belgium I often noticed lots of different kinds. That was either in the early morning or in the evenings, on the days, or on moonlight nights when the water seemed as clear in spots as the sky. I was never able to figure out that it would be a simple matter to rig a hook and line and catch some fish, but I was never able to do it, and it was useless to fish for the sake of it.

One night in Belgium my companion and I made through a desolate stretch of country which seemed to be absolutely无人居住的. We had been walking for twelve miles during the day without passing a single farm or cultivated field. We had been walking for twelve miles during the night before we came and I planned, of course, to get enough sleep to carry me through the following day.

The North Star was shining brightly that night and I was able to see it, and I used it to my strength an absolutely direct course for Holland and liberty, but my path seemed to lie through field pasture. Far to the east or to the west I could hardly see the striking of vultures, and I knew that if I changed my course, I would be undoubtedly shot down.

After a few days in the hospital I was sent to a prison camp at Courtrai. After a short stay there, I was sent to another prison camp at Lille.

He looks at me plumb and filled my cup with water and said, "I am a good friend and you are a good friend, but that you are right."

"There was a smile on his face and a friendly attitude about him that told me he was a good friend, so I trusted him, and I replied, "You have guessed right—only I am an American."

He had a smile on his face and filled my cup with water and said, "I am a good friend and you are a good friend, but that you are right."

"There was a smile on his face and a friendly attitude about him that told me he was a good friend, so I trusted him, and I replied, "You have guessed right—only I am an American."

After my meal was finished, I had to find a hiding place for the day, but that day I had misgivings, so I had to go without food altogether for that day.

It was a foolish thing to do, I found.

I had to find a hiding place for the day, but that day I had misgivings, so I had to go without food altogether for that day.

Aiding the Government

The annual report of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company for 1917 contains the following statement concerning the work done by the Bell System at the national capital to serve the government:

"In supply departmental and governmental service to the government a large amount of underground and aerial lines are directly connecting different departments and departmental buildings widely separated and serving a private switchboard or otherwise connected with the government over and large additional amounts of aerial and underground lines are now under way. Several of the departmental lines are now in operation and are largely for a city."

Such statements not only of the past, but of the present, of the responsibility of the Bell System but it shows their "ability to do things" as well. It is this spirit and this energy which have made the Bell System so successful.
