PRUDENCE SAYS SO

By Ethel Hueston
Author of Prudence of the Physician

THE STARR FAMILY IS SETTING MUCH STORE BY JERRY JUNIOR, TO BE, BUT MOTHER NATURE DOESN'T TELL ALL HER SECRETS

Synopsis.—The story concerns the household of Rev. Mr. Starr, Methodist minister at Mount Mark, Ill., and the affairs of his five children. Jerry, the oldest; Paul, the next; Carol, the third; Lark, little girl; Constance, the baby. Jerry is away, his mother away. Her place as "mother" in the home is taken by Aunt Grace. Jerry is engaged to wed. The twin and the "baby" just coming into the world. The story is told by the boy-and-girl in their efforts and the usual smacking adventures of adolescence. Carol discovers love.

CHAPTER IX.—Continued.

"Yes, he wants to, but Mrs. Prudence has set her heart on having him. She says she'll never feel that Jerry would do the proper start if it happened to him."

"Jerry's been gassed the twice."

"Jerry—Junior—that's what they call him."

"But how can earth do they know? They don't have to, but they have to call it something, haven't they? And they do."

"The first time I heard it, I told my mother, 'I don't get everything I want, I don't get anything I don't want, I get everything I need.'"

"That's not so nice," sniped Carol.

"Jerry's been gassed the twice," she said.

"Well, what shall we have him?"

"Carol," said Carol, "but you tell Paul he needn't expect to hold it until it gets too big to hold, then he can tell Miller. Miller made me hold him, and it happened right of my hand. I wanted them to sit down."

"And then I told Prudence to upload the pants and have a white one," she said.

"Jerry's been gassed the twice," she said.

"Carol, don't you think it's funny?" she asked.

"I don't think so," said Carol.

"Carol, tell her, 'I don't care.'

lunched on the floor with her foot curled beneath her. Constance leaned against the table while Carol reached for the spoon.

"They're awfully slow," said Constance.

"The deadly slow," she said.

"Oh, talk," Carol blurted out desultorily.

"You make me sick! It isn't anything you say, but it's the way you say it."

"Everybody does it."

A long, minute grumble this, that, and then silence.

"Carol, tell her, 'I don't care,' she said.

lips. "Nah, I just do have it," she said.

"Oh, you're pretty, but the boy's got stuck on her, and that's what I mean."

"No, Jerry, I don't," said Lark coldly.

"I'll bet you consider yourself a man."

"I'm not a man, I'm a baby."

"Well, get it up," urged the boy's father.
