Nowadays You Press a Button

Or perhaps a switch, or some little gadget, and a lot of things happen around a home that lighten labor and banish trouble.

A whirling fan brings a cooling breeze, and a little copier, disk-like affair throws out a sizzling blast that warms the room in no time.

Another button boils coffee, toasts bread and cooks waffles. Another does a better job than a broom. Another makes a happy laundress out of a dismal washwoman. Another cools the icebox. Another—But why go on?

Labor and time saving devices have come and are today within the reach of the humblest home.

And one of the chief reasons why they have come and why they are within the reach of the humblest home is the power of advertising.

Advertising has carried the news of these better ways of doing things to every home. It has created a desire to possess them, and countless thousands have purchased them and live better—because of them.

Reading advertising not only tells you about new, helpful mechanical devices for the home, but it is an unending guide to reliable products.

LABOR DAY

Labor Day comes next Monday. Not so many years ago police lines were formed, puns were dropped, and there were general preparations for quail riots. Capital was rampant; labor was jealous and lawless. Spite was common. There were general hanged and depleted pocketbooks. Behold the change! There is almost complete peace. The manufacturer is receiving such high prices through the protective tariff that he can afford to buy labor practically without demand. The public which used to watch the Labor Day fights from the sidelines free now merely has the pleasure of gazing down in its pocket without seeing the show. It is worth it, some may think.

There is another reason and a more economical sound and lasting one. Thirty or forty years ago the great Labor Day was a day of general strikes. The working class could not get on without the help of the old man who was dreaming. The truth be told he was only inspired, but it has taken over a quarter of a century for the world to realize the state of the matter.

It is now estimated that there are more than 15,000,000 manufacturers in the larger industrial corporations. The political and economic effect is manifold. It makes at least 15,000,000 small stockholders partners in the business, sharing in the profits and having more or less to do with the welfare of the whole. There is little talk among industrial wage-earners of the "peculiar" or "selfishness" of corporations. It is not unreasonable to predict that this spread of wage-earners as investors in large concerns in time drive out all anticipated propaganda.

THE SOUTHERN CANDIDATES

It is sixty years since a southerner has been nominated for the presidency by either party and the Atlanta Constitution and other journals of the Democratic tendency are putting some of their exhibits in the show. The Manufacturers' Record, which is published in Baltimore by Richard H. Edmonds, a prohibitionist enthusiast, indicates, like a number of business men said to be familiar names in Dixie, among them John E. Elgerton of Tennessee, president of the Association of Manufacturers; Governor McLean of North Carolina, and John H. Kirtley. Havers of the South that stress is laid on the proposals as "great business men."

The South's oldest raised big men for public life as readers of history know—Washington, Jefferson, Jackson, and Andrew—were and later Clay and Calhoun. It is betraying no secret, however, to note that for three decades many a weakling of the South, North, sandwiched in, it is true, with the John Sharp Williams of Mississippi and Joseph W. Bailey of Texas. Brand brimmed like a continuation to come but with less under them.

THE GREAT RUN IN ALL SIZES

It would be interesting to know what grounds people have for the assertion that fat bodies lose lazy minds. Certainly William Howard Taft and G. M. Chesterton command it. In the present case, however, Theophile Carter would have done in the past. Himself enormous, Gaultier used to argue that the man of pediment must be fat, and in proof thereof pointed to the illustrious, bald man, "Balzac," to Alexandre Dumas, "always fat and jolly," to the well-known appearance of Victor Hugo and Saint Beuve, and to "that hippopotamus in ureches, Roosevelt." A modern critic has cited John as an example of the trend of Gaultier's contention, pointing out that the novelist wrote his best work when stout, and that when his bulk dwindled so did his talent. But he other hand, of course, Byron viewed the most of fatness with alarm, and dieted himself rigorously to prevent it. But he may have been apprehensive for his appearance rather than his genius.

Peterson, N. J. Barbara have gone on a strike out of sympathy for the Stacks and Yacuzzi. Manufacturers of safety razors probably inspired it.

ANTI-TOXIN BENEFITS

Diphtheria immunization has brought about a new era in the control of this scourge, according to the American Association for Medical Progress. In New York City, for instance, where an antitoxin campaign was begun about five years ago, about 500,000 children have been immunized. Between 1922 and 1926 the average number of deaths per year dropped 56 per cent below the previous five years. In addition, the number of deaths dropped 41 per cent, a saving of more than 40 lives in a year. In 1926, more than 14,000 cases of the disease were reported in Ohio, and New Haven, Conn., shared the distinction of having the lowest diphtheria death rate, 5.6 per 100,000 population. The year record marked a decline from 18.5 for Youngstown and 7.1 for New Haven for the period 1920-24. Both reductions were closely connected with the general immunization of school children.

Immunization and vaccination long since have demonstrated their effectiveness in the control of disease. Nevertheless, parents may still be found who object to such treatments for their children. Unfortunately contagious diseases are community matters and require the proper course to pursue would be to allow parents to follow their own consciences and leave the matter of immunization and vaccination. Since, however, the disease child constitutes a menace to all of his play and school mates, it is vital that immunization and vaccination be administered to all.

There is nothing to fear in either treatment. Possibly the child may become slightly upset following administration of the inoculation, but he is only temporarily indisposed and gains protection against the possibility of serious illness. It is interesting to note in this connection that among the 36,000 school children in New Haven there have not been a single death from diphtheria in the last two school years, and that of the 23 who had diphtheria, 24 had not received the immunization treatment. What does this demonstration of the value of inoculation could have been?

A MERCHANT TURNED PHILOSOPHER

H. Gordon Seifried, American owner of London's largest department store, has started a new series of lectures on the ethics of philosophy. Recently he was called upon to open an exhibition of statues at the Liverpool University School of Architecture. The statues were in the shape of a man, the last two school years, and that of the 23 who had diphtheria, 24 had not received the immunization treatment. What does this demonstration of the value of inoculation could have been?

It is sixty years since a southerner has been nominated for the presidency by either party and the Atlanta Constitution and other journals of the Democratic tendency are putting some of their exhibits in the show. Havers of the South that stress is laid on the proposals as "great business men."

The South's oldest raised big men for public life as readers of history know—Washington, Jefferson, Jackson, and Andrew—were and later Clay and Calhoun. It is betraying no secret, however, to note that for three decades many a weakling of the South, North, sandwiched in, it is true, with the John Sharp Williams of Mississippi and Joseph W. Bailey of Texas. Brand brimmed like a continuation to come but with less under them.

POET AND CONTRACTOR

Our news columns relate that to save a true, the street paving contractors departed from the engineer's design and built an abutment into Station street, the owner of the property refusing to permit the trend of the work.

In order to bring about this somewhat irregular proceeding, we suggest that the contractor be named George T. Morris "Woodman, Says That Tree?"

Chas. at the back of his head. And still the forehead lies. They are all that is not. They are all that is not.

Otherwise, just what could have mottled the hard colored beard of the Powers. Thompson Construction Company?

HOME TOWN THOUGHTS

National politicians tend to support our government and local patriots, which is equally important, tend to us back up the local institutions and enterprises of our home town.

If the business men of a community expect the local support of their home people, they are forced to demonstrate by advertising that they are giving their people the full worth of their money.

Our country has gone ahead because our people love it and have given (time and energy) to develop it. Our home towns will go ahead in the same conditions.

Everyone in the Republican party appears to be a receptive candidate for the nomination. The party is in a state of confusion. It is not ready to support. He was not born in the United States, hence is disqualified. The framers of the constitution were wise men. They even found it unnecessary to include amendments.

Songs of Plain Folks

"Turning-Out Time"
 From First Verse

Turning-out time had to endow
 When my father had his young
 To lay in his perfect row
 When my father had his young
 To lay in his perfect row
 When my father had his young
 To lay in his perfect row

When, with madder luck singing
 And the children, then and now,
 I have started in the morning
 And the children, then and now,
 I have started in the morning
 And the children, then and now,
 I have started in the morning

Turning-out time rich with fragrance
 Of the fresh soil, and happy
 And the children, then and now,
 Of the smiling girl to greet me
 When her tempting smile waits
 Of the boy who runs to meet me
 And to open up the gate

When, with madder luck singing
 And the children, then and now,
 I have started in the morning
 And the children, then and now,
 I have started in the morning
 And the children, then and now,
 I have started in the morning

When, with madder luck singing
 And the children, then and now,
 I have started in the morning
 And the children, then and now,
 I have started in the morning
 And the children, then and now,
 I have started in the morning

When, with madder luck singing
 And the children, then and now,
 I have started in the morning
 And the children, then and now,
 I have started in the morning
 And the children, then and now,
 I have started in the morning

When, with madder luck singing
 And the children, then and now,
 I have started in the morning
 And the children, then and now,
 I have started in the morning
 And the children, then and now,
 I have started in the morning

When, with madder luck singing
 And the children, then and now,
 I have started in the morning
 And the children, then and now,
 I have started in the morning
 And the children, then and now,
 I have started in the morning

When, with madder luck singing
 And the children, then and now,
 I have started in the morning
 And the children, then and now,
 I have started in the morning
 And the children, then and now,
 I have started in the morning

When, with madder luck singing
 And the children, then and now,
 I have started in the morning
 And the children, then and now,
 I have started in the morning
 And the children, then and now,
 I have started in the morning

When, with madder luck singing
 And the children, then and now,
 I have started in the morning
 And the children, then and now,
 I have started in the morning
 And the children, then and now,
 I have started in the morning

When, with madder luck singing
 And the children, then and now,
 I have started in the morning
 And the children, then and now,
 I have started in the morning
 And the children, then and now,
 I have started in the morning

When, with madder luck singing
 And the children, then and now,
 I have started in the morning
 And the children, then and now,
 I have started in the morning
 And the children, then and now,
 I have started in the morning

When, with madder luck singing
 And the children, then and now,
 I have started in the morning
 And the children, then and now,
 I have started in the morning
 And the children, then and now,
 I have started in the morning

When, with madder luck singing
 And the children, then and now,
 I have started in the morning
 And the children, then and now,
 I have started in the morning
 And the children, then and now,
 I have started in the morning

When, with madder luck singing
 And the children, then and now,
 I have started in the morning
 And the children, then and now,
 I have started in the morning
 And the children, then and now,
 I have started in the morning

When, with madder luck singing
 And the children, then and now,
 I have started in the morning
 And the children, then and now,
 I have started in the morning
 And the children, then and now,
 I have started in the morning

When, with madder luck singing
 And the children, then and now,
 I have started in the morning
 And the children, then and now,
 I have started in the morning
 And the children, then and now,
 I have started in the morning
