WHO PAYS TAXES

Where does the money come from to pay the cost of the Government? Individuals know in a general way that they pay taxes, but no individual can possibly figure out what his contribution has been. May I know that he paid a certain percentage of his income as income tax; but on the other hand he cannot estimate what portion of the tax paid by the corporations with which he does business came out of his own pocket.

Probably if asked for his opinion Mr. Average Citizen would venture the suggestion that the aggregate of the income tax paid by individuals and corporations would be wrong, for during the fiscal year ended June 30, corporate taxes amounted to $1,308,120,532, while during the same twelve months individuals contributed $911,339,910. These two classes of income taxes, individual and corporation, amounted to $2,620,000,000 in the fiscal year 1927, thus during the same year as furnished by the greatest portion of the total receipts from internal taxes.

Next in volume of receipts were the taxes on tobacco in all forms, principally cigarettes. The tobacco taxes for the year ended $876,170,205.04, of which cigarettes contributed $620,000,000. The revenue from that source, including import duty, was $25,000,000 in one year.

There was a very heavy falling off in the collections from taxes on automobiles during the fiscal year 1927 as compared with the year 1926. The former yielded $138,444,444; the latter $102,366,881 in 1926, due in part to the reduction in the tax rate and in part to the falling off in sales.

There was a falling off also in items that formerly were prolific sources of Federal income, the most noticeable of which is the item of distilled spirits and cereals beverages. Last year the receipts from that source were only $1,000,000, while for the entire fiscal year of the Volstead law, taxes on distilled spirits, as far as can be ascertained at a reader could wish. Yet what is their status compared with the morons parading their revolting reactions in the so-called problem novels now glutting the American literary field? Exactly nothing. They are unknown to the great mass of readers who would be thrilled if they could be persuaded to burst out and open the covers of such books.

It certainly would be better for the morals and manners if there were more such fare and less of the trash that is pouring out in an ever-rending stream. Fortunately there seems to be an awakening interest in the better class of books. It is to be hoped that the movement will continue to grow.

Education is able to report that the supply of teachers meets the demand in all but a few states. This has been brought about by the offering of better pay, but perhaps more through the higher standard of the requirements requisite to the grafting of certificates. This higher standard has in turn brought higher pay and in consequence more students are entering the profession of teaching.

In the days of the "Hoosier Schoolmaster," Edward Eggleston's graphic description of the life of a country pedagogue, the pay of the teacher of the country school was less than the compensation of the "hired man." Many teachers received as little as $2 for a week's service, and "boarding around" was well-nigh impossible. The teacher who received $200 a month was regarded as highly by his fellow as among the aristocracy, and such enormous salaries were few and widely separated.

On the other hand the requirements for obtaining a "certificate" from the county superintendent were as meager as the pay. Almost any one who could read and write could obtain a certificate of three years which might be certified as a qualified teacher, profiting her knowledge of geography was sufficient to demonstrate that she was aware of the fact that Canada is a portion of North America and that France is not in Australia.

Now a teacher in most of the states must have a certificate of at least three years' experience and the teacher who has no knowledge of the day, is bound to be destined to knowledge into the mind of the scholar.

And instead of being compelled to board and clothe herself on a wage of $1 a day she can often command $25 a week.

NEW BOOKS AND OLD

With the tremendous increase during the past few years of ephemeral productions by the pens and typewriters of writers-of-the-moment, Americans have been diverted from the more worth-while outpourings of lofty minds in the past. Of course, the mere stamp of antiquity does not guarantee that every writing of even dead and gone author is worthy of serious attention.

But it is equally true that in ages when the world had more time for thought and fewer confusing elements with which to contend, there were produced literary gems which have not been surpassed or even equaled since that time.

The adventures of a D'Artagnan, of Athos, Porthos and Aramis; the thrilling escapades of a Rob Roy; the antics of a Micawber; the wit of a Cyrano de Bergerac; the experiences of Tolstoy's Anna Karenina; the adventures of a Don Quixote; these, while possibly not strictly in the category of classics, afford as much entertainment as a reader could wish. Yet what is their status compared with the morons parading their revolting reactions in the so-called problem novels now glutting the American literary field? Exactly nothing. They are unknown to the great mass of readers who would be thrilled if they could be persuaded to burst out and open the covers of such books.

It certainly would be better for the morals and manners if there were more such fare and less of the trash that is pouring out in an ever-rending stream. Fortunately there seems to be an awakening interest in the better class of books. It is to be hoped that the movement will continue to grow.

A DEAL OF TRUTH

In a recent number of Henry's Magazine, Aulus Huxley had an extremely perceptive article on "The Optimist for American Culture." He impugns American culture specifically, because he thinks that American culture is to prevail in all the world. "The future of America," he says, "is the future of the world." Material circumstances are creating all sorts of changes along the path in which America is going.

Mr. Huxley's article is crammed with significant facts and suggestive ideas. Obviously it is not necessary to share Mr. Huxley's dependency, to admit the truth of much of his argument. Our present civilization, for example, is in some sort of truth in the subjoined paragraph:

A great many men—women, in fact—sighly admit it, in spite of all our humanism and democratic ideals, that they are not interested in the higher life. For these same optimists on whom human ideals are perforce placed, are not of the opinion that the majority of these fellows, and of many noisy, disorderly, boisterous, and bold, men, exercise only bodily, but have mental exercise. They can live a life of the body, and the like, for them. They can live a life of the mind, and the like, for them.

Now, this is the truth. Contempary with the majority of these fellows, and of many noisy, disorderly, boisterous, and bold, men, exercise only bodily, but have mental exercise. They can live a life of the body, and the like, for them. They can live a life of the mind, and the like, for them.

Songs of Plain Folks

By James Lewis Hays

Homesteader

Time does not change so much.
The same sun shines and laughter rings
At always, when the morning's touch
Is on the homestead, and the day begins.
The young folks always have been kings;
The old folks, tried philosophers.
Love and pleasure, and quietest things
Said life. Life's cycle recurred.

We who, when purifies not the sky,
Homesteaded in a wilderness,
In government's name, we will confess
Our memories are prone to stress
Fond joys while trudging we kept;
The homestead, we will confess.
Then any age whose sun has set.

The smoky lamp, the candle's flare,
The "horses and buggies" are gone
With the foolish us to care.
Or shall we say, the world is moving on?
For after all, life varies not.

Circle of laughter, love and tears,
The homestead, we will confess.
In to the pattern of the years.

BARRINGTON BIPLANE

we had our first lesson in art last week.

Miss Zimmerman has returned to school from an absence of a week on account of the birth of her baby. Her students have been trying to get a better morning and no one will come late.

On Tuesday, the 12 class signed a pledge for Highway Safety Club.

"Johnny was acting in school and the teacher was not there, so I said, 'Well, I'll just go around and see what I can do.' I think I would take it with me."

ENGLISH GRADE 5

The Eighth Grade has been trying to make John Kirby's room more like his. They also have been writing him letters. John Kirby is the son of Herbert Terry who is absent from the school for nervous reasons.

Already many people have read the letter and many more are writing to him. They hope that there will be a good response.

During this time other clubs will be meeting.

Today the Geography class listened to a very interesting lecture on China. They learned about their tea to be shared with us and the silk they export.

Every month the pupils are writing to the Chinese government and the paper, "China and the World" is published.

Each month the Eighth Grade receives a new issue of "China and the World" in the entire school because of its interest.

Up to this time there have been two issues and one more will be held.

SIXTH GRADE

On Tuesday, the 12 class, Gatsby comes to the school, the seventh and eighth grade geography class to a lecture on China. They learned the methods of visiting in England, the manners of the English, the customs, the interest in her experiences with the English, the English customs, the lack of interest in every subject of interest.

On Wednesday, Mr. Walter F. Price and Mr. Newton Blum.

On Thursday, the 12 class, Dorothy Jacobs had been requested to come to the school.

Many times comparisons were made with the English and the Chinese.

A lot of humor and new added interest was added to the school by the Chinese who gladly responded.

The Chinese who came to the school were the ones which passed away on the class for inspection.

After the inspection of that class, a Geography class, the sixth and eighth grade classes and the boys, that they were to come to the school to bring the trip this time.

With the help of the 12 class, they have been trying to get a better morning and no one will come late.

The Safety Campaign pledges are being signed.

SIXTH

John Herdecker is back, he is back again, he is back to a house.

John Gandy gave an interesting talk on England Tuesday. She showed us some money and some English.

For example, a truck is a "policeman" and a bus is a "policeman".

The sixth grade spelling classes have been trying to get a better morning and no one will come late.

With the help of the 12 class, they have been trying to get a better morning and no one will come late.

The English classes observed Fire Prevention Week, with the help of the 12 class, they have been trying to get a better morning and no one will come late.
