HORSES, MULES AND COWS

How rapidly the horse is vanishing from the American scene can only be fully appreciated when we realize that in the last 10 years, the number of horses in the entire United States has almost all of existence and have not been replaced. The year 1918 was the banner year for the horse. From about ten million horses in 1880, their number multiplied through 38 years until in 1918, it reached the high peak of 21,555,000. Since then the replacement of the horse by motor vehicles has been rapid. The last Government figures place the total around 13,000,000. It is to be seen that this is reduced by half in just 18 years.

The horse's career in America has been a short one. There were no horses or other beasts of burden known to the Indians of North America, though in South America the natives had tamed the llama to carry their loads. The Spanish conquistadores brought horses with them, many of which broke loose and ran wild. They rapidly replaced the Indians of the southern and western wilderness and the Indians of the Great Plains speedily learned to break and use them. But a scant four hundred years, down to now, covers the history of the horse on this continent.

There are still a few horses left in the big cities. They are, so far, more economical than motors for house-to-house deliveries of milk, butter and eggs. But the cost of the increasing cost of these materials is gradually causing these uses to be replaced by motors.

The horse is still on the horns. He is more efficient, less expensive and harder-hailed. In the period during which the horse population fell off by one-third the mule census showed an increase of nearly 20 per cent. However, the mule has also declined. There are fewer mules in use now than there were in 1924, when these useful hybrids numbered 5,730,000.

In the period from 1920 to 1930, the number of beef cattle has dropped from above 47 million to under 33 million. We are eating less beef. But while we are drinking more milk, butter and cheese, the number of milk cows has increased. In 1920, there were nearly twenty thousand 22 million. They are better cows, however, giving more and better milk, and the tendency is to increase their number and quality.

Time was not long ago when almost any sort of a horse was worth $100, an ordinary mule around $125 and a pretty fair cow could be bought for $75. The Kansas State Agricultural Department figures the average values in Kansas today are $20 for a horse, $70 for a mule and $82 for a cow, taking them just as they run.

COMMUNICATION

There are still a few places in the world where a man can be completely off the touch with everybody else in the world, but the number of such places is diminishing so rapidly that it is a safe prediction that before many years have passed we can go anywhere and still keep in communication with home.

Telephoning from railroads trains in motion is now an accomplished fact; in practical use, however, is not important as yet on the Canadian National Railways or for a few of fifty cents in addition to the telephone charge the traveller can call up any telephone number in the Bell system, which covers the United States, Canada, most of Europe and a large part of Central and South America. Germany, France and other European countries have similar systems. America, however, is still in the primitive genus, not so far as we are the first to new devices into use. But there is no doubt that eventually this system of telephone travel will be established in the United States.

The large steamship lines have facilities for telephoning from ship to shore. Soons or later all passenger ships and probably most freighters will be similarly equipped.

A portable radio broadcasting set has been devised which takes up so much space and weighs so little that future big game hunters, penetrating the African jungle, can easily take one along with them and so report to the folks at home every day.

Aircraft in flight now carry—many of them—radio equipment for both "code" and voice communication with the earth. Admiral Byrd's Antarctic expedition was the first of communication.

The next step forward is television. That has now become practical. Our children probably, our grandchildren certainly, will be able to see around the world as easily as we are able to today.

All of these developments which make communication easier tend toward closer international relations, better understandings, reduced likelihood of war. The time may come when the world will be one. Business will be settled as easily as disagreements between business interests are settled today, and with as little bloodshed.

TIME'S HEALING BALM

"Time dissolves all things," said Aristotle. The Athenian philosopher, some 22 centuries ago, that which dissolves, emitted was once more strikingly illustrated by occurrence at Brunswick, Ga., some days ago.

There, says the Associated Press, "despite the fact that the Blue and Gray had the 50th state side with the Confederates, the Unionists returned to its rightful owners an antiquated clock which Yankees sailors carried away from the plantation of Boone's King during the War Between the States.

The ceremony of restitution took place at a King plantation, in a building formerly used as a school, but now a cobbler's shop, in the presence of a distinguished gathering.

Congressman Martin of Massachusetts presented the clock to Senator George of Georgia, who accepted it on behalf of A. Massachusetts man, and editor responded to welcome address by Georgians and the clock was finally turned over to Issac Aiken, a graduate of Thomas King, original owner of the antiques.

The ceremony was similar to that which occurred on many occasions, which marked the return of captured battle flags from the Civil War. And the time the flags took the old clock ticked down the tenor of its way by tickling off the seconds as it did during its long years of captivity.

The grateful gesture by the Unionists delighted the rest of the world, especially by their fellow countrymen of Georgia, who again demonstrate how wounds and scars, even those of fratricidal war, may be dispelled by the healing balm of time.

LONG PUBLIC SERVICE

Of all the men who have served in Congress since the beginning of our government, Joseph G. Cannon, "Uncle Joe," of Illinois holds the longest record, 46 years, of which was in the House of Representatives, although his service was not continuous.

The man is still on the horns. He is 86, more efficient, less waste and harder-hailed. In the period during which the horse population fell off by one-third the mule census showed an increase of nearly 20 per cent.

However, the mule has also declined. There are fewer mules in use now than there were in 1924, when these useful hybrids numbered 5,730,000.

In the period from 1920 to 1930, the number of beef cattle has dropped from above 47 million to under 33 million. We are eating less beef. But while we are drinking more milk, butter and cheese, the number of milk cows has increased. In 1920, there were nearly twenty thousand 22 million. They are better cows, however, giving more and better milk, and the tendency is to increase their number and quality.

A PATRIOTIC COUNTY

For many years Barrington County, Kentucky, because of so many Negroes and feuds and killings, was known as "Bloody Kentucky." These feuds sometimes continued through several generations, but gradually died out.

Whether the fighting blood of the feuds, transmitted to their descendants, was responsible or not, it is said that Breathitt to the country in the United States to escape the horrors of the feuds, fighting the War World. All able-bodied men volunteered for service for the draft became effective, and thus Breathitt was the county whose soldiers were 100 per cent volunteers.

In recognition of this, a bill has been passed by the Kentucky legislature providing for a special county to be formed to commemorate the valiant and heroic, the hardy mountaineers of that country, who answered their country's call before it became camp皇上.
