Longest Eclipse of Moon in Fifty Years Monday

Residents View Celestial Show from Gardens and Porches

The longest eclipse of the moon visible in this country in fifty years kept hundreds of Barringtonians awake until long past their usual best-time Monday night. According to scientists there will not be another eclipse of such length for another half century. Barrington's view of the phenomenon was pronounced "perfect" since skies were clear. From gardens, porches and windows, residents watched the phenomenon. A scientific explanation of it follows: The phenomenon came with direct alignment of sun, earth and moon, the moon sliding through the earth's umbral cone, which extends 86,000 miles into space. The moon touched the penumbra, in which part of the sun's light is cut off, at 10:15 p. m. central daylight time, and reached the umbra, or totally dark shadow at 11:12.

Trustees Receive Instructions on Sewer From State

District PWA Engineer to Inspect All Details on Project

A letter from the Illinois office of the public works administration was received by A. C. Bonnell, village clerk, this week setting forth the necessary steps of procedure for the approval of the sewer project.

The letter showed that all work and preliminary work must first have the approval of the state sanitation board before installation of the sewer is begun. Approval of the state PWA engineer must be obtained before advertising bids can be done.

Three sets of drawings or plans upon which the contract is to be made, are also necessary for the state board for approval. Also three sets of specifications are to go for inspection and approval.

Two copies of information furnished to bidders are approved. Two copies of the contractors proposed work are also necessary for inspection by the state engineer in the name of the public works administration.

After all bids have been received and opened by the village board of trustees, three copies of the bids are then to be sent to the state board for inspection. Three low bids are to be copied and sent to the state engineer with the recommendation from the engineer or architect stating which bidder

James Plagge (repeatedly) described his trip through the west. In a letter to The Review, received last week. The letter follows:

I have just finished reading your article and read in The Review which reaches me on Saturday every week. Reading The Review was out here in the heart of a large national forest in the heaviest timber production area of the United States is like a cool breeze coming over the hot sands of the desert that I crossed in my little Ford car. As you said, I didn't notice the breeze, but I certainly appreciate the newspaper.

"I had a delightful trip of 2400 miles, leaving Ames, Ia. June 10 and arriving at Bend, Ore. June 15. Three other forestry students accompanied me, and we took the trip slowly enough—through the Badlands, the Black Hills and Yellowstone National park—no as not to become tired and to provide sufficient time to see everything that was interesting.

"We cooked our meals over an open fire and we slept on the ground in the open. Our meals lacked not in variety or quality. Salads, fresh vegetable and fruit we considered, just as necessary as potatoes and meat at every meal. None of us having cooked before, we were surprised at our

"Torrents of rushing water from melting snow on the Big Horn mountains in Wyoming provided thrilling experiences on our climb through Muddy pass. Snow gloves had, just opened to see clouds on the morning of the day we were through. That afternoon we were probably the last car to cross a bridge before it was washed away. Yellowstone National park was just being opened the day we arrived, but we spent two enjoyable days there.

"Bolsa, Idaho, is a beautiful valley standing like an oasis in a desert. Just for a novel turn we rented bicycles and toured the city one morning. Watermelon. How the beauty spot it is. Getting water in the great problem of this part of the country. Years ago it meant bloodshed some times, but today the fight is still being fought over it. For hundreds of miles we saw nothing but sagebrush except where the land had been irrigated. On July 4 I took an airplane ride over some irrigated country. The irrigation ditcher system, the water thrown in the sunlight. As long as the ditches were in view the ground appeared green and productive. The water was scarce. It was very rare on the east side of the Cascade mountains where our camp is located. It is difficult for us to imagine the floods we hear about in the mid-west."
