

"Exclusive Story" Sunday, Monday Show at Catlow

Mae West's Latest Picture, "Klondike Annie," Is on Week's Bill

The Sierra Nevada form the background of the story and melodies of "Rose Marie," now playing the Catlow. Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy are happily teamed in this romantic opera of the West.

Friday will finish the three-day run of "Rose Marie" to make way for Saturday's program—one of a wide variety of several subjects. In addition to seven other features, will be "Wings Over Mt. Everest," the scenic which won the Academy Award for the year. The feature, "Every Saturday Night," opens a yarn about a happy, scrappy family of five youngsters. The family consisting of Pa and Ma Evans and grumpy, two daughters and three sons, are all up to the time except Dad. He belongs to C.C. horse-and-doggy days, and in the conflict between the two factions, the fun waxes fast and furious.

"Exclusive Story," the Sunday-Monday feature, is from the pen of Martin Murray, New York City reporter, who was sentenced to jail for refusing to divulge the source of his astounding information. It has for its theme, the struggle against overdoctors based on Mooney's inside knowledge. Franchot Tone, Madge Evans, Joseph Calleia, Stuart Erwin and J. Farrell MacDonald appear in important roles.

A Paul Harris Music comedy, Poppy cartoon, news and community singing are added items for the Sunday-Monday program. Next Tuesday will be a bargain night offering, devoted to the screening of "Flying Down to Rio." The picture has Dolores Del Rio and Fred Astaire as its stars. It is a return showing of this very entertaining musical.

"Klondike Annie," Mae West's latest production, is scheduled for Wednesday and Thursday of next week.

The new West film is a gay and gassy tale of hate and lusty days. It opens on the Death Row in San Francisco, where Mae is held prisoner in a gambling house. It shifts to the high seas after Mae makes her escape—an escape in which a man is killed. It winds up in Alaska during the Gold Rush.

Victor McLaglen is Mae West's leading man in "Klondike Annie."
