WHAT'S GOING ON IN WASHINGTON

The administration's tax bill sweeps to victory through the house by a majority of 267 to 93. It goes to the senate, where committee hearings open, expected, however, to testing proposals sponsored by the administration.

Chief feature of the tax is an impost on undistributed profits of corporations graduated as to give companies an incentive to pay out profits and bring them into the personal income tax levy. Large corporations keeping all their earnings would pay 4 1/2 per cent of them to the government.

Those passing out at least 10 per cent in dividends would pay no tax. In course of adoption, two chief amendments are approved, one to insure the revenue desired ($82 million dollars in the first year and $20 million annually thereafter), and the other to give a measure of relief to corporations desiring to retire their debts.

The first amendment is a provision requiring payment in 1937 of income taxes on dividends received in 1937 but earned in 1936. This is designed to prevent the year's lag in the collection of revenue.

The second amendment reduces from 2 1/2 per cent to 1 1/2 per cent the tax imposed on earnings used to defray indebtedness.

Meanwhile, before senate committee, Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau insists that the house bill raises insufficient revenue, particularly in the first year, and favors a provision tax on farm products.

Add to the list of Uncle Sam's projected expenditures for next year as follows: Navy department—$31 million dollars.

This is the sum approved by the house. Added to an approximately equal sum for the navy, congress for army upkeep and expansion, it brings the bill for national defense to more than one billion dollars—largest peace-time total.

Action called for in the appropriation bill includes: 1.—Increase of civil personnel from $7,000 to $8,500.

2.—Expenditure of 182 million dollars for continuing the construction of ships already begun.

3.—Outlay of forty million dollars to add 332 airplanes to the present air strength of the navy.

4.—No navy yard competition with private manufacturers and airplanes and engines.

5.—Construction of two new battleships of the largest size, costing 50 million dollars each, to be undertaken, if...

The "if" depends on action of other naval powers. If they advance the dates for building of new ships ahead of schedules in the Arms Limitation Treaty expiring December 31, then the American building program goes into effect.

Secretary of the Navy Swanson asserts that Great Britain has already given notice of intention to advance her building schedule.

Important respects. The amendments include: 1. Appending to it the Borah bill, which forbids discrimination also among purchasers of like quantities, the implication being that buyers of large quantities may obtain full benefit of the economies of large-scale purchase.

2. Restrictions of the measure to retail trade.

3. Making the recipient of forbidden favors equally guilty with the party granting them.

Some of the things the committee hears: To lessen danger to air travelers and to plan for the future of a new mode of transportation, a house committee conducts hearings designed to lead to correction of past errors.

Safety devices provided on airplanes by the department of commerce are inadequate. If the government would spend 14 million dollars to improve them, private companies will spend—plan to spend—15 million dollars for equipment in the air.

The government should police air traffic. The larger terminals, some of which are already becoming so congested as to endanger safety.

An independent body should be set up to investigate air accidents instead of letting the department handle them. It should inquire into failures that involve only responsibilities.

Too Much Attention LUCIA MALLORY

Coralie is the dainty, pink and white, well-dressed girl, and not very happy ten-month-old daughter of my friend, Rose Barton. Rose would never believe that the object of so much loving thought and attention could be unhappy, but I have never been with them when the child was not fretful and restless. Her mother always says, "I don't know what makes Coralie so naughty today!" How I wish to tell her mother's story. I tell her that Nature would just love Coralie alone a few minutes she would be less irritable and naughty. But, good grief! Coralie is not always so. I scarcely think me qualified to give advice on child-training, because I have never been a mother, unless directing the reading habits of several hundred young Americans might constitute a vicarious motherhood.

Since the hour of Coralie's birth, Rose has read and re-read a well-known modern baby book so faithfully that she knows it almost by heart. She consults the book about every little detail of Coralie's life, but she does not follow it.

Dr. X says that even a very young child should be encouraged to become self-dependent. The baby should be put into its bed and left to go to sleep. Coralie is given her nightgown and put to bed. As her mother closes the door and goes out of her room, the baby begins to whimper. Rose stands listening, with her hand on the doorknob, until the whimper rises to a shriek. She goes into the room, picks the baby up and talks to her until she is quiet, puts her down again and comes out, this time closing the door firmly and seating herself near it. Of course Coralie begins to cry the minute she is left alone. Rose stands it for about five minutes and then goes in to see if she is comfortable. When she comes out again, Coralie cries harder than ever, when Rose goes nervously back and forth outside her door. Now Tom thinks something surely is wrong with the child, and both father and mother go in

Ship Accident Resulted in Development of Glass Thousands of years ago a ship's crew of hungry Phoenicians had to find a way through it they learned about glass!

It all happened when they tied their boat with a cargo of soda salt to a river bank in Palestine and began building a fire to cook their food.

Finding no convenient large stones, they used huge lumps of the ship's cargo to support their pots near the flame. It was then, notes a writer in the Los Angeles Times, that the heat from the fire melted the soda, fused it with the sand of the river bank and produced a transparent substance, which in its improved form, we know as glass.

It is recorded that in 300 B. C. the Egyptians, Greeks and Romans had perfected glass making for beads, lenses, perfume bottles, plates, inlay designs in sacrificial cups, and even for coffins!

In the thirteenth century glass manufacturing became an industry in that part of Czechoslovakia which was once Bohemia. It was there that a fine sand was found as a necessary ingredient. Rapid progress began immediately as Venetian, Arabic, German, and French glass flowed into artistic beauty. Some of these pieces appear in the
