"Records—Continuous Records," Counsels Champion Neat Farmer

"The only way to make a profit from dairying during these times with all the competition is to cut your herd and cull out the non-profitable cows."

Those are the words of Earl Kane, who has been in dairy herd improvement work for eight of the 22 years he has operated the New Home Farm near Mundelein.

"I've learned from my own experience," he says, "that a study of all records of the herds in the associations last year shows, namely that smaller herds made up of high producing cows will often net larger returns above feed cost than larger herds of lower producing cows."

"In addition to the increased returns above feed costs, the smaller herds require less milk for market consumption and returns a greater net income than the returns above feed cost would indicate, because of lower labor and overhead costs."

The Guernsey herd at the New Home Farm is tested regularly for T.B. and abortion. Sterility, T.B. abortion and udder trouble account for a total of 22.9 per cent of the cows sold from DHIA herds.

"Which shows," says Mr. Kane, "that we must try to keep our herd free from all diseases if we are to get a fair profit."

"Another very important thing is measuring the transmitting ability of herd sires and cows. This is an essential feature of any dairy cattle breeding program. And the only way to determine whether or not a cow or a bull transmits high production to its offspring is to measure the producing capacity of the daughters by production records."

"The value of DHIA records for this purpose is generally understood by DHIA members. Starting out in the breeding program, the most essential thing is your sire. Either use a proven sire or young bulls from a proven sire—and from good producing families of females so far as possible."

Mr. Kane started out by buying a few pure bred cows, and these were bought by Earl Jr. and Mitchell for 4-H club projects—has been developing an outstanding Guernsey herd in which both sows have a real interest.

Heifers are raised for all herd replacements and occasionally a few calves are for sale. Every now and then one of the herd makes the 500-lb. butterfat club
