

'Holiday,' Comedy-Drama, at Catlow Sunday, Monday

'Three Comrades' Will Begin Three Day Schedule on Wednesday

Mickey Rooney has become spot news. He bit a dog! The victim was "Buck" H. St. Bernard, appearing with Housewife Matron O'Sullivan, Dennis O'Keefe, and others in "Hold That Kiss," coming to the Catlow Saturday.

It's a comedy scene when the big dog refuses to be led. Mickey had to pick him up by the hindquarters and trundle him out of the set wheelbarrow-fashion.

"Buck" weighs 150 pounds. Mickey struggled to lift him, slipped, fell with his face in the animal's shaggy coat and emerged with a mouthful of hair.

The scene was so humorous that it was used in the picture. Incidentally "Buck" didn't bite back. Instead he went to a corner of the set and fell asleep.

A new Katherine Hepburn, glowingly human, gloriously modern: defying the conventional world of society because she's in love! A new Cary Grant, his humor bubbling beneath the weight of a career he wants to discard.

The production of Philip Barry's brilliant stage comedy opens on Sunday at the Catlow theatre for a 3-day engagement. "Holiday" tells of a gay young man whose philosophy of life conflicts with that of the proud, aristocratic family of his fiancée.

The warblers are Robert Taylor, Margaret Sullivan, Franchot Tone, and Robert Young, who sing "The Comrade Song," written especially for them.

Taylor, Tone and Young play the three comrades who emerge disillusioned from the World War and find nothing to live for in their stultified-torn city and town.

Adapted from the novel by Erich Maria Remarque, who also gave "All Quiet on the Western Front" to the world, "The Comrades" is wholly a love story between a man and a girl, three men for each other and three men for a girl.
