Crystal Lake Boy's Condition Critical; Accidentally Shot

Lord Wolf, 19-year-old Crystal Lake youth, who was accidentally wounded by a rifle bullet Saturday, was reported critically ill at the Sherman hospital in Elgin Monday. The bullet struck the youth in the hip and lodged against his spine, resulting in paralysis of the legs. The accidental shooting occurred at Edward Biel's Crystal Lodge in Crystal Lake. Jay McDermott, 14 years old, was shooting at a target with his .22 caliber rifle. One of the bullets went through the wall and struck Wolf who was in the yard near the lodge. Wolf was in severe shock when brought to the hospital and attending physicians waited for an improvement before attempting to remove the bullet.

Almost Record Crowd at Kelsey Farm Sale

A crowd of more than 1100 persons were present at the auction sale at the H. D. Kelsey farm Tuesday, one of the largest groups of buyers at a farm sale in the Barrington district in years. Most of the dairy cows brought well over $100 a head. Grains and hay sold at a fair premium over prevailing market prices. An auction sale will be held Friday at the Kenneth C. Brown farm three miles south of Mokena, as advertised in this issue of The Review. Farmers planning to hold sales should list their dates with The Review, for publication in the farm sale calendar.

Fire Siren Disrupts Junior Class Play

Some enthusiastic person in the audience sought to either vent his appreciation or some other emotion by blowing the school siren while the junior class play, "Spring Fever," was in progress in the public school auditorium Friday evening. Early in the third act the siren started blowing and the ensuing confusion forced Miss Georgina White, director, to have the curtain drawn. It was raised a short while later and the act started from the beginning. The play progressed satisfactorily Friday and Saturday nights and was well received by both audiences.

This WEEK in WASHINGTON

By RALPH E. CHURCH Representative, 10th Congressional District

Evanson, Ill., Nov. 19.—Now that the "tumult and shouting has died" and the American people have spoken at the ballot boxes, it remains for us to appraise the results and to translate the expressed general will of the people into a definite course of action. That is the task of both parties. Failure to interpret election results intelligently is more or less certain to bring dire consequences to the administration of the republicanism, as the case may be when they come before the people again two years hence.

This was the mistake the new dealers made as a result of the election two years ago, for which they suffered in the voting November 8. In 1936 the new deal won a landslide victory. They carried every state in the union except Maine and Vermont. That result was interpreted as a "mandate from the people" with the word "mandate" construed as broadly as possible. They were too elated with their success to remember that 17 million people expressed themselves in opposition. They didn't realize there was or could be any opposition to the new deal that should be considered. They interpreted the 1936 election results to mean the new deal had a "mandate" to do everything and anything they saw fit. In that interpretation the new dealers were in error as has now been made clear by the people themselves.

Republican success in this last election exceeded the expectations of all the party leaders. Gains were anticipated but no one for a moment expected that they would be so pronounced and so national in scope.

Naturally, those of us who are affiliated with the republican party are rejoicing the election results. After several lean years we can hardly be denied this opportunity to rejoice. But, it seems serious mistake if in their enthusiasm of success, they interpret the results as a complete and unequivocal repudiation of everything the new deal has represented and has done. Such a conclusion would be fatal to the party when it presents its presidential candidate to the people in 1940.

It is regarded as a special virtue to share one's rice in India, and the wasting of even a single grain is a sin in thickly settled districts where poverty is great and food is scarce. Fortunately, it is more expensive to eat polished rice than to leave on the outer coating, because the latter contains food elements that prevent beriberi, a disease suffered by those whose diet is almost exclusively polished, writes Martha Harmon in the Philadelphia Record.

The ancestor of our modern rice was a grass that grew along the edges of lakes in India, and was similar to a sort found in northern Australia. All Oriental peoples used the seed or grain of this grass, dating back to such ancient times that 3,000 years before the Christian era it was customary for the Chinese emperor and the princes to sow a handful of rice at the beginning of each planting season in honor of the country's chief crop. America's rice fields are the result of an accident. After failure at rice raising in this country, it happened that a ship from Madagascar put into Charleston, S. C., harbor to escape a storm late one winter day in 1694. The colonists were friendly and when the ship departed the captain showed his appreciation by presenting the governor with a sack of seed rice. And from this accidental start, rice culture in the American colonies spread through the South.

Dogwood Tree is Traced to the Time of Christ

Although the various dogwoods are sometimes so small that they seem hardly more than a good-sized shrub, they have been known for centuries and their legendary history reaches into Greek mythology, to the Roman empire at the time of Christ and to the folklore of early American Indian tribes. Their slender, twisted branches and unusual four-petaled flowers have seemed to "explain" the legends and the legends have tried to account for them, writes Paul Davey, tree expert, in the Washington Star.

One of the legends is to the effect that the dogwood, because of the hardness of its wood, was chosen for use in the cross at the crucifixion. The technical name of the tree is Cornus, from the Latin corn, a horn, and refers to the character of the wood. The legend runs that the dogwood was most distressed at being chosen for such a terrible purpose and that the Savior, sensing this feeling, made to the tree this promise:

"Never again shall the dogwood tree grow large enough to be used for a cross. Henceforth it shall be slender and bent and twisted and its blossoms shall be in the form of a cross—two long and two short petals and in the center of the outer edge of each petal there shall be nail prints, brown with rust and stained with blood, and the center of the flower will be a crown of thorns." "All those who see it will remember it was on the dogwood tree that I was crucified, and that I was mutilated or destroyed, but cherished and protected as a reminder of my agony and death upon the cross." It is a beautiful way of explaining the peculiarities of the dogwood. History does not bear out the legendary assumption that the cross was made from the wood of the dogwood, but that does not take away from the beauty of the legend.
