Chicago Police Are Seeking Missing Man

Chicago police maintained a watch over the abandoned car of George Kotaska, missing Berwyn real estate dealer and former Fox River Grove resident, in front of 29 N. Wabier avenue, Chicago, last week in the hope that he would return for the machine.

Two warrants for Kotaska's arrest have been issued since September 19 on charges of defrauding clients, and his company has been placed in receivership. Losses have been variously estimated up to $70,000.

Sheriff Henry Nulle of McHenry county has complied with a request of Mrs. Kotaska, who is living in the home of her parents in Fox River Grove during the search for her husband and placed a guard at the Opatry home. Mrs. Kotaska said threats had been made against the family.

Attempted Holdup Is Foiled By Motorist

Stepping on the gas and outdistancing his pursuers, Archie W. Whittingham, 1160 Cedar avenue, Elgin, foiled the efforts of two men in a large sedan in what is believed to have been an attempted holdup Friday evening.

Whittingham was returning home from Chicago and when he neared the intersection of routes 59 and 20, a car pulled in front of him and slowed up, refusing to let him pass, he told police officers.

He waited for an opportunity to outguess the driver of the other car and when it presented itself a few moments later, he stepped on the accelerator of his machine and managed to elude by the automobile containing the four men.

When he reached Elgin, Mr. Whittingham reported the matter to the state highway police. A description of the automobile and its occupants was broadcast over the radio but no trace of the machine was found.

Live Silver Fox and Mink Exhibit Shown By Otto H. Grosse

September 28 marked one of the great days for fur farming and the growers of silver fox and mink pelts. Brought to the minds of the exclusive buying public as never before, the show was presented by Otto H. Grosse, owner of Northwood Fur Farm, Cary, one of the most striking live silver fox and mink displays ever shown to an audience.

On the grounds of the Bon-Air Country club, outside the club house lounge and dining room, Mr. Grosse demonstrated what was almost impossible to believe could be done in fur farming. An evergreen woods was set up, comprised of approximately 100 evergreen trees from six to fifteen feet high and forming an enclosure. In the midst of this forest he displayed one of the largest collections of high-quality silver fox and mink ever displayed by an individual fur farmer. There were all classes from half, three-quarters and full silvers, to pales and platinaums (the newest discovery in silver fox farming), the color and quality of which attracted the attention of the exclusive audience—composed of prominent society people of Chicago and the North Shore, several prominent editors and newspaper men and officials of Photoplay and MacFadden Publications.

In the other half of the display were 100 Yukon and eastern mink. The visitors, numbering over 3000, were amazed at the dark, silky fur and many exclamations such as "Oh, I thought mink were light brown!" or "Why are these so dark, haven't they been blended yet?" were heard the entire evening.

When they left they were aware of the characteristics of high grade fox and mink pelts.

Inside the exclusive club of the fashionable Bon-Air Country club was displayed one of the most glamorous collection of silver fox and mink garments ever shown. Long trailing mink evening wraps which won applause of spectators, beautiful silver fox full length coats, capes, jackets and the latest 1938 creations were given a tremendous applause by a most appreciative audience for the beauty which the silver fox and mink garments radiated. Twelve celebrated mannequins, including Miss Geraldine Grosse, modeled the garments.

Otto H. Grosse, who sponsored the show, gave a very interesting talk on the history of fur farming from its infancy to the present. He also created quite a sensation on the stage with his two trained silver foxes, Oscar and Eric, who, as far as is known, are the only two of their kind in the world.
