GOVERNMENT WAR-TIME CONTROL
Strong is the hope of the American people that we will not again become involved in an European war.

And so the United States is preparing for any eventualities—and this preparation does not only involve the larger military expenditures in our peace-time country.

Here is the plan, of course, is a detailed procedure of conscripting manpower. The war and navy departments had remember the confusion that followed our entry into the last war.

And industry will be mobilized with complete effectiveness. A war resources administration will be given authority in such matters as regulating prices, labor, trade and the procurement of supplies.

But that isn't all there is to the problem—some officials have long believed that efficient warfare demands giving the executive branch of the government unwielded dictatorial powers.

Of course, "government by decree" would last, theoretically, only as long as the emergency. But, as many points of view are little more than theories.

It is doubtful if a peace-time congress would ever legislate such dictatorial powers. The danger of relinquishing our democratic theories of government is plain to see. The dictatorial power could be extended in many directions.

WHAT'S GOING ON WASHINGTON

If the United States does not have to take the lead in the great nations in Europe are now ready with a complete plan to reorganize the world...

Price, labor, exports, imports, and so on. The plan is a detailed procedure of conscripting manpower.

Already, a nucleus of such a war-time organization has been created by the president—the War Resources Administration, headed by Edward R. Roybal.

Here are some of the things to be done: 1. To establish a war-time administration to coordinate the activities of all federal agencies.
